"(2) Of the members first appointed to the Council under subsection (c)(1), the Secretary shall appoint 4 members to serve for a term of 4 years, 4 members to serve for a term of 3 years, and 4 members to serve for a term of 2 years.

"(e) VACANCIES.—

"(1) Any member of the Council appointed under subsection (c)(1) to fill a vacancy occurring before the expiration of the term of the predecessor of the member shall be appointed for the remainder of the term of the predecessor.

"(2) A member of the Council appointed under subsection (c)(1) may continue to serve after the expiration date of the term of the member until a successor is appointed.

"(f) CHAIRPERSON.—The Secretary, or the designee of the Secretary, shall serve as chairperson of the Council.

"(g) MEETINGS.—The Council shall meet at the call of the chairperson and shall meet not less than once each 3 months.

"(h) COMPENSATION AND REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES.—

"(1) Members of the Council who are officers or employees of the United States may not receive compensation for service on the Council in addition to the compensation otherwise received for duties carried out as such officers or employees of the United States may not receive compensation otherwise received for duties carried out as such officers or employees.

"(2) Members of the Council appointed under subsection (c)(1) shall received compensation for each day (including traveltime) engaged in carrying out the duties of the Council. Such compensation may not be in an amount in excess of the maximum rate of basic pay payable for GS-18 of the General Schedule.

"(i) STAFF.—The Secretary shall provide to the Council such staff, information, and other assistance as may be necessary to carry out the duties of the Council.

"(j) TERMINATION.—Notwithstanding section 14(a) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act, the Council shall continue in existence until otherwise provided by law.

"SEC. 1203. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAMS FOR IMPROVING TRAUMA CARE IN RURAL AREAS.

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may make grants to public and nonprofit private entities for the purpose of carrying out research and demonstration projects with respect to improving the availability and quality of emergency medical services in rural areas—

"(1) by developing innovative uses of communications technologies and the use of new communications technology;

"(2) by developing model curricula for training emergency medical services personnel, including first responders, emergency medical technicians, emergency nurses and physicians, and paramedics—

"(A) in the assessment, stabilization, treatment, preparation for transport, and resuscitation of seriously injured patients, with special attention to problems that arise during long transports and to methods of minimizing delays in transport to the appropriate facility; and

"(B) in the management of the operation of the emergency medical services system;

"(3) by making training for original certification, and continuing education, in the provision and management of emergency medical services more accessible to emergency medical personnel in rural areas through telecommunications, home studies, providing teachers and training at locations accessible to such personnel, and other methods;

"(4) by developing innovative protocols and agreements to increase access to prehospital care and equipment necessary for the transportation of seriously injured patients to the appropriate facilities; and

"(5) by evaluating the effectiveness of protocols with respect to emergency medical services and systems.

"(b) SPECIAL CONSIDERATION FOR CERTAIN RURAL AREAS.—In making grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall give special consideration to any applicant for the grant that will provide services under the grant in any rural area identified by a State under section 1215(b)(1).

"(c) REQUIREMENT OF APPLICATION.—The Secretary may not make a grant under subsection (a) unless an application for the grant is submitted to the Secretary and the application is in such form, is made in such manner, and contains such agreements, assurance, and information as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out such subsection.

"PART B—FORMULA GRANTS WITH RESPECT TO MODIFICATIONS OF STATE PLANS

"SEC. 1211. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

"(a) REQUIREMENT OF ALLOTMENTS FOR STATES.—Subject to section 1232(c), the Secretary shall for each fiscal year make an allotment for each State in an amount determined in accordance with section 1219. The Secretary shall make payments each fiscal year to each State from the allotment for the State if the Secretary approves for the fiscal year involved in application submitted by the State pursuant to section 1218.

"(b) PURPOSE OF ALLOTMENTS.—The Secretary may not make payments under subsection (a) for a fiscal year unless the State involved agrees that, with respect to the trauma-care component of the State plan for the provision of emergency medical services, the payments will be expended only for the purpose of developing, implementing, and monitoring the modifications to such component described in section 1213.

"SEC. 1212. REQUIREMENT OF MATCHING FUNDS FOR FISCAL YEARS SUBSEQUENT TO FIRST FISCAL YEAR OF PAYMENTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) The Secretary may not make payments under section 1211(a) unless the State involved agrees, with respect to the costs described in paragraph (2), to make available non-Federal contributions (in cash or in kind under subsection (b)(1)) toward such costs in an amount equal to—

"(A) for the second fiscal year of such payments to the State, not less than $1 for each $1 of Federal funds provided in such payments for such fiscal year; and

"(B) for any subsequent fiscal year of such payments to the State, not less than $3 for each $1 of Federal funds provided in such payments for such fiscal year.

"(2) The costs referred to in paragraph (1) are—

"(A) the costs to be incurred by the State in carrying out the purpose described in section 1211(b); or

"(B) the costs of improving the quality and availability of emergency medical services in rural areas of the State.

"(3) The Secretary may not require a State to make non-Federal contributions as a condition of receiving payments under section 1211(a) for the first fiscal year of such payments to the State.

"(b) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT OF NON-FEDERAL CONTRIBUTION.—With respect to compliance with subsection (a) as a condition of receiving payments under section 1211(a)—

"(1) a State may make the non-Federal contributions required in such subsection in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including plant, equipment, or services;

"(2) the Secretary may not, in making a determination of the amount of non-Federal contributions, include amounts provided by the Federal Government or services assisted or subsidized to any significant extent by the Federal Government; and

"(3) the Secretary shall, in making such a determination, include only non-Federal contributions in excess of the amount of non-Federal contributions made by the State during fiscal year 1989 toward—

"(A) the costs of providing trauma care in the State; and

"(B) the costs of improving the quality and availability of emergency medical services in rural areas of the State.

"SEC. 1213. REQUIREMENTS WITH RESPECT TO CARRYING OUT PURPOSE OF ALLOTMENTS.

"(a) MODIFICATIONS TO STATE PLAN.—The Secretary may not make payments under section 1211(a) for a fiscal year unless the State involved agrees to develop, implement, and monitor, in accordance with this section, modification to the trauma-care component of the State plan for the provision of emergency medical services. With respect to such component, the State plan will be modified—

"(1) to specify that the modifications required pursuant to paragraphs (2) through (10) will be implemented by the principal State agency with respect to emergency medical services or by the designee of such agency;

"(2) to specify any public or private entity that will designate trauma care regions and trauma centers in the State;

"(3) to contain standards and requirements for the designation of trauma centers (including trauma centers with specified capabilities and expertise in the care of the pediatric trauma patient) by such entity, including standards and requirements for—

"(A) the number and types of trauma patients for whom such centers must provide care in order to ensure that such centers will have sufficient experience and expertise to be able to provide quality care for victims of injury;

"(B) the resources and equipment needed by such centers; and

"(C) the availability of rehabilitation services for trauma patients;

"(4) to contain standards and requirements for the implementation of regional trauma systems, including standards and guidelines for medically directed triage and transportation of trauma patients (including patients injured in rural areas) prior to care in designated trauma centers;

"(5) to contain standards and requirements for medically directed triage and transport of severely injured children to designated trauma centers with specified capabilities and expertise in the care of the pediatric trauma patient;

"(6) to specify procedures for the evaluation of designated trauma centers (including trauma centers described in paragraph (5)) and trauma centers described in paragraph (5)) and trauma care systems;

"(7) to provide for the establishment in the State of a central data reporting and analysis system—

"(A) to identify the number of severely injured trauma patients within regional trauma care systems in the State;

"(B) to identify the cause of the injury and any factors contributing to the injury;

"(C) to identify the nature and severity of the injury; and

"(D) to monitor trauma patient care (including prehospital care) in each designated trauma center within regional trauma care systems in the State (including relevant emergency-department discharges and rehabilitation information);

"(8) to provide for the use of procedures by paramedics and emergency medical technicans to assess the severity of the injuries incurred by trauma patients;

"(9) to provide appropriate transportation and transfer policies to ensure the delivery of patients to designated trauma centers and other facilities within and outside of the jurisdiction of such system, including policies to ensure that only individuals appropriately identified as trauma patients are transferred to designated trauma centers;

"(10) to conduct public education activities concerning injury prevention and obtaining access to trauma care; and

"(11) with respect to the requirements established in this subsection, to provide coordination and cooperation between the State and any other State with which the State shares any standard metropolitan statistical area.

"(b) CERTAIN STANDARDS WITH RESPECT TO TRAUMA CARE CENTERS AND SYSTEMS.—

"(1) The Secretary may not make payments under section 1211(a) for a fiscal year unless the State involved agrees that, in carrying out paragraphs (3) and (4) of subsection (a), the State will adopt guidelines for the designation of trauma centers, and for triage, transfer, and transportation policies, equivalent to the applicable guidelines developed by the American College of Surgeons and by the American College of Emergency Physicians.

"(2)(A) If the guidelines described in paragraph (1) are revised by the American College of Surgeons or the American College of Emergency Physicians—

"(i) the Secretary shall notify States receiving payments under section 1211(a) that the guidelines have been revised and shall provide to such States a description of the revisions; and

"(ii) the Secretary may not consider any such State to be in compliance with the agreement under paragraph (1) if the State fails to adopt guidelines equivalent to the revised guidelines by the end of the fiscal year in which the period described in subparaph (B) ends.

"(B) The period referred to in subparagraph (A)(ii) is the 1-year period beginning on the date on which the guidelines described in paragraph (1) are revised.

"(c) WAIVER OF CERTAIN STANDARDS—

"(1) The Secretary may, with respect to any guideline required to be adopted by a State pursuant to subsection (b), waive the requirement for a State if—

"(A) the State, acting through the principal State agency with respect to emergency medical services, submits to the Secretary an application for the waiver, including a statement of the facts upon which the State justifies the request for the waiver; and

"(B) the Secretary determines that granting the waiver will not result in the diminishment of the availability or quality of trauma care in the State.

"(2) The Secretary may grant a waiver under paragraph (1) only after—

"(A) providing notice to the public that the State is applying for the waiver;

"(B) soliciting and considering comments from the public with respect to the application for the waiver; and

"(C) permitting the public not less than a 30-day period in which to respond to the solicitation for such comments, which period shall commence on the day after the Secretary provides the notice required in subparagraph (A).

"(3) The notice and the solicitation of comments required in paragraph (2) shall be made through publication in the Federal Register.

"(d) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION WITH RESPECT TO NUMBER OF DESIGNATED TRAUMA CENTERS.—With respect to compliance with subsection (a) as a condition of the receipt of a grant under section 1211(a), such subsection may not be construed to specify the number of trauma care centers designated pursuant to such subsection.

"SEC. 1214. REQUIREMENT OF ANNUAL REPORT BY DESIGNATED TRAUMA CENTERS.

"The Secretary may not make payments under section 1211(a) for a fiscal year unless the State involved agrees to require each designated trauma center in the State to provide to the Emergency medical system of the State each fiscal year a report that—

"(1) specifies the number of trauma patients cared for by such facility during the fiscal year;

"(2) specifies the total number of inpatient hospital days used by such patients during the fiscal year; and

"(3) describes the diagnoses, treatment, and treatment outcomes for such patients.

"SEC. 1215. REQUIREMENT OF PROVISION OF CERTAIN INFORMATION TO SECRETARY.

"(a) INFORMATION RECEIVED BY STATE REPORTING AND ANALYSIS SYSTEM.—The Secretary may not make payments under section 1211(a) for a fiscal year unless the State involved agrees that the State will, not less than once each year, provide to the Secretary the information received by the State pursuant to section 1213(a)(7).

"(b) AVAILABILITY OF EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES IN RURAL AREAS.—The Secretary may not make payments under section 1211(a) for a fiscal year unless—

"(1) the State involved identifies any rural area in the State for which—

"(A) there is no system of access to emergency medical services through the telephone number 911;

"(B) there is no basic life-support system; or

"(C) there is no advance life-support system; and

"(2) the State submits to the Secretary a list of rural areas identified pursuant to paragraph (1) or, if there are no such areas, a statement that there are no such areas.

"SEC. 1216. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PAYMENTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may not, except as provided in subsection (b), make payments under section 1211(a) for a fiscal year unless the State involved agrees that payments will not be expended—

"(1) for any purpose other than developing, implementing, and monitoring the modifications required by section 1213(a) to be made to the State plan for the provision of emergency medical services;

"(2) to make cash payments to intended recipients of services provided pursuant to such section;

"(3) to purchase or improve real property (other than minor remodeling of existing improvements to real property) or to purchase major medical or communication equipment, ambulances, or aircraft;

"(4) to satisfy any requirement for the expenditure of non-Federal funds as a condition for the receipt of Federal funds; or

"(5) to provide financial assistance to any entity other than a public or nonprofit private entity.

"(b) EXCEPTION.—If the Secretary finds that the purpose described in section 1211(b) cannot otherwise be carried out, the Secretary may, with respect to an otherwise qualified State, waive the restriction established in subsection (a)(3).

SEC. 1217. REQUIREMENT OF REPORTS BY STATES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may not make payments under section 1211(a) for a fiscal year unless the State involved agrees to prepare and submit to the Secretary an annual report in such form and containing such information as the Secretary determines (after consultation with the states and the Comptroller General of the United States) to be necessary for—

"(1) securing a record and a description of the purposes for which payments received by the State pursuant to such section were expended and of the recipients of such payments; and

"(2) determining whether the payments were expended in accordance with the purpose of the program involved.

"(b) AVAILABILITY TO PUBLIC OF REPORTS.—The Secretary may not make payments under section 1211(a) unless the State involved agrees that the State will make copies of the report described in subsection (a) available for public inspection.

"(c) EVALUATIONS BY COMPTROLLER GENERAL.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall, from time to time, evaluate the expenditures by States of payments under section 1211(a) in order to assure that expenditures are consistent with the provisions of this part.

"SEC. 1218. REQUIREMENT OF SUBMISSION OF APPLICATION CONTAINING CERTAIN AGREEMENTS AND ASSURANCES.

"The Secretary may not make payments under section 1211(a) to a State for a fiscal year unless—

"(1) the State submits to the Secretary an application for the payments containing agreements in accordance with sections 1211(b) through section 1217;

"(2) the agreements are made through certification from the chief executive officer of the State;

"(3) with respect to such agreements, the application provides assurances of compliance satisfactory to the Secretary;

"(4) the application contains the information required to be submitted to the Secretary pursuant to section 1215(b)(2); and

"(5) the application otherwise is in such form, is made in such manner, and contains such agreements, assurances, and information as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out this part.

"SEC. 1219. DETERMINATON OF AMOUNT OF ALLOTMENT.

"(a) MINIMUM ALLOTMENT.—Subject to the extent of amounts made available in appropriations Acts, the amount of an allotment under section 1211(a) for a State for a fiscal year shall be the greater of—

"(1) $500,000; and

"(2) an amount determined under subsection (b).

"(b) DETERMINATION UNDER FORMULA.—The amount referred to in subsection (a)(2) is the product of—

"(1) an amount equal to the amount made available under section 1232(b)(3) for the fiscal year involved; and

"(2) a percentage equal to the quotient of—

"(A) an amount equal to the population of the State involved, as indicated by the most recent data collected by the Bureau of the Census; divided by

"(B) an amount equal to the population of the United States, as indicated by the most recent data collected by the Bureau of the Census.

"(c) DISPOSITION OF CERTAIN FUNDS APPROPRIATED FOR ALLOTMENTS.—

"(1) Amounts described in paragraph (2) shall, in accordance with paragraph (3), be allotted by the Secretary to States receiving payments under section 1211(a) for the fiscal year (other than any State referred to in paragraph (2)(C)).

"(2) The amounts referred to in paragraph (1) are any amounts made available pursuant to 1232(b)(2) that are not paid under section 1211(a) to a State as a result of—

"(A) the failure of the State to submit an application under section 1218;

"(B) the failure, in the determination of the Secretary, of the State to prepare within a reasonable period of time such application in compliance with such section; or

"(C) the State informing the Secretary that the State does not intend to expend the full amount of the allotment made for the State.

"(3) The amount of an allotment under paragraph (1) for a State for a fiscal year shall be an amount equal to the product of—

"(A) an amount equal to the amount described in paragraph (2) for the fiscal year involved; and

"(B) the percentage determined under subsection (b)(2) for the State.

"SEC. 1220. FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH AGREEMENTS.

"(a) REPAYMENT OF PAYMENTS.

"(1) The Secretary may, in accordance with subsection (b), require a State to repay any payments received by the State pursuant to section 12211(a) that the Secretary determines were not expended by the State in accordance with the agreements required to be made by the State as a condition of the receipt of payments under such section.

"(2) If a State fails to make a repayment required in paragraph (1), the Secretary may offset the amount of the repayment against any amount due to be paid to the State under section 1211(a).

"(b) OPPORTUNITY FOR A HEARING.—Before requiring repayment of payments under subsection (a)(1), the Secretary shall provide to the State an opportunity for a hearing.

"SEC. 1221. PROHIBITION AGAINST CERTAIN FALSE STATEMENTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) A person may not knowingly and willfully make or cause to be made any false statement or representation of a material fact in connection with the furnishing of items or services for which payments may be made by a State from amounts paid to the State under section 1211(a).

"(2) A person with knowledge of the occurrence of any event affecting the right of the person to receive any payments from amounts paid to the State under section 1211(a) may not conceal or fail to disclose any such event with the intent of fraudulently securing such amount.

"(b) CRIMINAL PENALTY FOR VIOLATION OF PROHIBITION.—Any person who violates a prohibition established in subsection (a) may for each violation be fined in accordance with title 18, United States Code, or imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.

"SEC. 1222. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE AND PROVISION BY SECRETARY OF SUPPLIES AND SERVICES IN LIEU OF GRANT FUNDS.

"(1) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary shall, without charge to a State receiving payments under section 1211(a), provide to the State (or to any public or nonprofit private entity designated by the State) technical assistance with respect to the planning, development, and operation of any program carried out pursuant to section 1211(b). The Secretary may provide such technical assistance directly, through contract, or through grants.

"(b) PROVISION OF SECRETARY OF SUPPLIES AND SERVICES IN LIEU OF GRANT FUNDS.—

"(1) Upon the request of a State receiving payments under section 1211(a), the Secretary may, subject to paragraph (2), provide supplies, equipment, and services for the purpose of aiding the State in carrying out section 1211(b) and, for such purpose, may detail to the State any officer or employee of the Department of Health and Human Services.

"(2) With respect to a request described in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall reduce the amount of payments to the State under section 1211(a) by an amount equal to the costs of detailing personnel and the fair market value of any supplies, equipment, or services provided by the Secretary. The Secretary shall, for the payment of expenses incurred in complying with such request, expend the amounts withheld.

"SEC. 1223. REPORT BY SECRETARY.

"Not later than October 1, 1991, the Secretary shall report to the Congress on the activities of the States carried out pursuant to section 1211. Such report may include any recommendations of the Secretary for appropriate administrative and legislative initiatives with respect to trauma care.

"PART C—GENERAL PROVISIONS

"SEC. 1231. DEFINITIONS.

"For purposes of this title:

"(1) The term 'Council' means the Advisory Council on Trauma Care Systems established pursuant to section 1202(a).

"(2) The term 'designated trauma center' means a trauma center designated in accordance with the modifications to the State plan described in section 1213.

"(3) The term 'plan for the provision of emergency medical services' means a plan for comprehensive, organized system to provide for the access, response, triage, field stabilization, transport, hospital stabiliation, definitive care, and rehabilitation of patients of all ages with respect to emergency medical services.

"(4) The term 'State' means each of the several States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

"(5) The term 'trauma' means an injury resulting from exposure to a mechanical force.

"(6) The term 'trauma-care component of the plan for the provision of emergency medical services' means a plan for a comprehensive health care system, within rural and urban areas of the State, for the prompt recognition, prehospital care, emergency medical care, acute surgical and medical care, rehabilitation, and outcome evaluation of seriously injured patients.

"SEC. 1232. FUNDING.

"(a) AUTHORIZING OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purpose of carrying out this title, there are authorized to be appropriated $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1990 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1991 and 1992.

"(b) ALLOCATION OF FUNDS BY SECRETARY.—

"(1) For the purpose of carrying out part A other than section 1203, the Secretary shall make available 10 percent of the amounts appropriated for a fiscal year pursuant to subsection (a).

"(2) For the purpose of carrying out section 1203, the Secretary shall make available 10 percent of the amounts appropriated for a fiscal year pursuant to subsection (a).

"(3) For the purposes of making allotments under section 1211(a), the Secretary shall, subject to subsection (c), make available 80 percent of the amounts appropriated for a fiscal year pursuant to subsection (a).

"(c) EFFECT OF INSUFFICIENT APPROPRIATIONS WITH RESPECT TO ALLOTMENTS.—

"(1) If the amounts made available pursuant to subsections (a) and (b)(3) are insufficient for providing, in accordance with section 1219(a), each State with an allotment under section 1211(a) of not less than $500,000, the Secretary shall, from such amounts as are made available pursuant to such subsections, make grants to the States for carrying out the purpose described in section 1211(b).

"(2) Paragraph (1) may not be construed to require the Secretary to make a grant under such paragraph to each State.".

SEC. 4. REQUIREMENT OF CERTAIN STUDIES RELATING TO HEALTH CARE.

(a) PROVISION OF UNCOMPENSATED SERVICES.—

(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall conduct a study for the purpose of identifying programs established by the States or the political subdivisions of the States in order to reimburse trauma care centers and other health care providers for the uncompensated provision of health care.

(2) In carrying out the study required in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall, with respect to any program identified under such paragraph—

(A) identify the manner in which funding is provided for the program;

(B) determine whether the program is established for the purpose of providing health care to individuals with no health insurance or with inadequate such insurance; and

(C) if the program is established for such purpose, determine the adequacy of the program with respect to providing health care to such individuals and determining the financial impact of the program on the health care providers involved.

(b) MEDICAID POLICIES OF STATES WITH RESPECT TO TRAUMA CARE.—The Secretary shall conduct a study for the purpose of identifying the policies adopted by the states in reimbursing trauma centers, and providers of ambulance services, pursuant to title XIX of the Social Security Act. The study shall assess the adequacy and appropriateness of the reimbursements provided pursuant to such title by the States to such centers and providers and shall include recommendations with respect to whether the requirements imposed under such title should be modified in order to ensure that such centers and providers are appropriately reimbursed.

(c) TIME FOR COMPLETION.—The Secretary shall, not later than 1 year after the effective date of this Act, complete the studies required in subsections (a) and (b) and submit to the Congress a report describing the findings made as a result of the studies.

SEC. 5. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect October 1, 1989, or upon the date of the enactment of this Act, whichever occurs later.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection a second will be considered ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. BILIRAKIS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN]

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days on which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 1602, the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I many consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present to the House H.R. 1602, the Trauma Care Systems Planning and Development Act of 1989. The principal purpose of the legislation is to reduce death and disability due to injury.

The legislation authorizes $50 million for establishment of a formula grant program to States for the planning and development of trauma care systems and the designation of trauma care centers in both urban and rural regions. Each participating State would receive a minimum grant of $500,000 and the remaining funds would be allocated on the basis of population.

In addition, the legislation authorizes the Secretary of Health and Human Services to support a program of research to improve the delivery of trauma care services and a program of grants to rural areas to improve the delivery of emergency medical care. The emphasis placed on developing trauma care in rural communities is particularly important because the relative risk of death due to trauma is actually higher in rural areas than urban communities. The legislation also establishes a process through which States identify and remedy serious deficiencies that exist in the availability of basic EMS and advanced life support services.

Mr. Speaker, the decision of a State or community to develop trauma systems can make the difference between life and death, or between good health and permanent disability.

Trauma centers perform medical miracles. When seriously injured patients are transported rapidly to trauma centers, deaths and permanent disabilities can be significantly reduced.

When former President Reagan and his Press Secretary, Jim Brady, were wounded in 1981, it was the trauma center at George Washington University Hospital that rapidly mobilized its medical staff to save their lives. That they are alive today is a tribute to the experience and skill of the medical personnel and the wisdom of the trauma center concept.

Those living in the Washington, DC, area are fortunate to be surrounded by a system of excellent trauma centers such as George Washington University and the Washington Hospital Center. Unfortunately, the Washington metropolitan area is an exception. The American College of Surgeons has testified that fewer than 20 percent of the U.S. population resides in areas served by trauma centers. As a result, an estimated 25,000 trauma deaths occur each year unnecessarily.

This underscores the importance of taking steps to encourage the development of trauma centers.

By providing incentive grants to States, we hope to encourage States and communities to establish trauma care systems and to designate trauma centers. As they establish trauma care systems, and designate trauma centers communities will stop the dangerous practice of taking seriously injured patients simply to the closest hospital. Instead, they will quickly transport patients to the hospital with the staff, training, and equipment most appropriate to the patient's needs.

Severely injured patients require swift and highly specialized medical care. The trauma system concept requires that seriously injured patients be transported to designated centers with specialized personnel and equipment on duty 24 hours a day.

I am pleased to report that the legislation enjoys broad support from medical, consumer, and health care organizations. Thirty-three medical, consumer and health care groups, including the American Medical Association, American College of Surgeons, American College of Emergency Physicians, and the American Academy of Pediatrics, have committed their support to this legislation.

During the 100th Congress, a bill virtually identical to the measure before us was passed by the full House. Unfortunately, the Senate was unable to complete action on a companion measure before the 100th Congress adjourned.

I want to express my appreciation to and acknowledge the contribution of the bill's author, the gentleman from California [Mr. BATES] for his commitment and leadership in the field of trauma care. The gentleman is an active member fo the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment and has been instrumental in focusing greater public and congressional attention on the need for and the lifesaving benefits of trauma care systems.

I also want to commend another member of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER] for his assistance in assuring that the legislation adequately addresses the serious deficiencies in trauma care and emergency medical services within rural areas.

Finally, I would like to express appreciation to the ranking minority member of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADIGAN] for his assistance in the development of this bill over the past 2 years.

Mr. Speaker I urge support the legislation.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, ever year, approximately 140,000 Americans die from trauma and in addition, 80,000 suffer permanent disability due to severe head and spinal cord injuries. The American College of Surgeons estimates that 20,000 of these injury victims die unnecessarily because they do not receive appropriate treatment.

The bill we are considering today will assist States in developing trauma care systems needed to save lives and to reduce the number of permanently disabling injuries.

One of the primary reasons I am so interested in trauma care results from my concern about the training of emergency personnel for trauma victims. In my own district, a teenage girl was struck by lightning and suffered serious injuries. Fortunately, this young person is alive today but her parents believe that the medical personnel involved in their daughter's emergency care could have been better trained and equipped for treating lightning victims.

I am hopeful that through enactment of this bill, greater numbers of these victims will completely recover from their accidents because medical priorities for the treatment and transportation of trauma victims will be in place through this legislation and that trauma victims will receive the immediate treatment needed thus reducing the number of permanently disabling injuries that require care in long-care facilities. In addition, I am pleased that this measure will eliminate the needless loss of life by requiring States to adopt guidelines that will ensure that regional trauma centers will exist.

Although the Republicans on the committee support the general concept of the bill we had some concerns about specific provisions.

I am pleased that the sponsor, Mr. BATES and the chairman of the health subcommittee were willing to accommodate many of our concerns in the bill before us today.

H.R. 1602 reflects these accommodations in the following six areas:

First. The State minimum allotment is increased from $250,000 to $500,000 and the standards for designated trauma centers include requirements for standards for the triage and transportation of trauma patients injured in rural areas. Both of these provisions will improve access to trauma services in rural areas.

Second. States are given the options of using new funds spent for the development of emergency medical services in rural areas as in-kind contributions for the purpose of meeting the Federal matching requirements mandated under this bill.

Third. A provision stating that this legislation may not be construed to specify the number of trauma care centers that a State may designate under this act.

Fourth. The Secretary is authorized to waive compliance with regard to the standards for designated trauma centers for a State if the Secretary determines that granting the waiver will not result in the diminishment of the availability or quality of trauma care in the State.

Fifth. The authorization levels are decreased from $60 million for each year to $50 million in fiscal year 1990 and such sums as necessary in fiscal year 1991 and fiscal year 1992.

Sixth. Ten percent of the appropriated funds will be set aside for demonstration projects in rural areas to improve the availability and quality of emergency services in rural areas.

Given these accommodations, I am willing to support this bill. I add my commendation to Mr. BATES of California for principally sponsoring this bill.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida [Mr. BILIRAKIS] for his comments in support of this legislation. We have tried to work out various problems and make accommodations so we could have unanimous bipartisan support for this legislation.

The credit for this bill goes to the gentleman from California [Mr. BATES] who has been leading this effort for a number of years now because of the overwhelming importance to our country to have good trauma care centers planned and put into place all around this Nation.

Mr. Speaker, it is an honor for me to recognize the gentleman from California at this time to give further explanation of the legislation and arguments for it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. BATES].

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, we are here today to consider H.R. 1602, the Trauma Care Systems Planning and Development Act of 1989.

I would like to thank several of my colleagues for their excellent work in getting this measure to the floor today. Health and the Environment Subcommittee Chairman HENRY WAXMAN, ranking minority member EDWARD MADIGAN and my distinguished colleague from Tennessee, JIM COOPER, have all been instrumental in crafting a bill that addresses the needs of our constituents in urban areas and rural areas as well as addressing the demands placed on trauma centers.

This bill will save 20,000 lives per year by providing assistance to States to develop and implement organized systems of trauma care for seriously injured people. Each year 20,000 people in the United States die from their injuries unnecessarily. That is 20,000 deaths each year that could have been prevented if organized trauma systems were in place across the United States.

This bill has been drafted with the near unanimous consent of the medical community. The American College of Surgeons, the American Medical Association, the American Association of Retired Persons, and the National Association of EMS Physicians are some of the groups that support the enactment of H.R. 1602. This legislation is cosponsored by over 100 of our colleagues.

Trauma, severe accidental injury, is the leading cause of death for Americans up to age 44. Older Americans are particularly susceptible to dying from trauma. Each year 140,000 people die unnecessarily from injuries in the United States and another 80,000 become permanently disabled from a brain, or spinal cord injury due to a traumatic injury such as an automobile accident, a gunshot wound, or a knife stabbing. Trauma research has shown that it is the first 60 minutes after a serious injury, known as the golden hour, that determines whether a victim lives or dies. That is what this bill addresses and that is why it will improve access to trauma centers, which is one of the key components to the success of a trauma network.

However, those who live in the few areas of the country that have instituted organized systems of trauma care are the lucky ones. Fully 80 percent of the U.S. population does not live in an area that is part of an organized system of trauma care. There is an especially high injury and death rate from trauma in rural areas because of transportation difficulties. A trauma patient injured in an area serviced by a regional trauma center has a chance for survival nearly double that of a trauma patient treated by a conventional hospital emergency room. During committee consideration of this legislation, an amendment was adopted that provides 10 percent of the funding authorized by this legislation for set-asides for rural emergency medical services systems. Transportation difficulties, long response time for personnel, and the lack of trauma systems, are reasons why we have such a high injury and death rate from trauma in rural areas.

We have a crisis in trauma care in this country. Nationwide, trauma networks are near financial collapse. Ten of Los Angeles county's 23 trauma centers have closed. Chicago has had to close two trauma centers, and in Dade County, FL, only one of six trauma centers remain.

Yet despite these financial problems and the frequency of injury and death, there is a great deal we can do to reduce the death and disability toll from traumatic injury. Organized systems of trauma care—which operate on the principle that people with severe injuries require special medical capabilities—saves lives. A study in San Diego showed that the trauma death rate fell by 55 percent after the implementation of a trauma care system.

This legislation will allot $50 million for fiscal year 1990 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1991 and 1992. The funding is for the States to develop, implement, and improve regional trauma care systems. H.R. 1602 will provide incentives for States to continue the development of State emergency communications systems. The bill will establish matching Federal funds to the State providing State compliance with established Federal guidelines.

The human costs of trauma to our Nation—in the form of grief over the loss of a loved one—cannot be measured. The economic costs are staggering. Trauma costs the Nation $135 billion each year through lost wages, medical expenses, insurance administration costs, and property damage. The cost of this bill is very modest in relation to the actual cost savings that will be accured—particularly in view of the major public health problem it address.

H.R. 1602 will go a long way toward reducing the needless loss of lives.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1602, the Trauma Care Systems Planning and Development Act. This bill should go a long way toward addressing our serious public health problem of injury.

I'm especially pleased that during committee consideration of this legislation, several changes were made that should improve the effectiveness of this legislation in rural areas. This is especially important because 70 percent of highway deaths occur in rural areas, and studies show you're twice as likely to die from a bad accident in a rural area than if you had that same accident in the city.

These alarming statistics can be explained in part by the great distances and sometimes rugged terrain in rural areas. But it's not just geography—it's the EMS infrastructure itself that's causing the trouble.

When Federal funds dried up at the beginning of this decade, many rural areas did not have the resources to fill in. Instead, they depend on bake sales and raffles to raise funds. In the worst cases, they don't even have an ambulance. That's the case in one county in my district. If you're lucky, there'll be a pickup truck to take you to the hospital in the next county. For these kinds of rural areas, it's unrealistic to expect that on their own, they could implement the triage and transport policies required by H.R. 1602.

Rural trauma care—like all rural health care—needs help. The bill before us today includes an amendment I offered in the Energy and Commerce Committee. It set aside $5 million for rural EMS research and demonstration projects in communications technology, model curricula, making EMS courses more available to folks in rural areas, and promoting the regional pooling of resources, especially transportation equipment.

This is a modest but important first step in addressing the serious problems of rural EMS. It should help get us the information we need to improve rural trauma care. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1602.

Mr. HAYES of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, as a cosponsor of H.R. 1602, the Trauma Care Systems Planning and Development Act of 1989, I rise in strong support of its passage.

Mr. Speaker, given the daily accidents and violence in major urban areas, the availability of trauma care is of vital importance to inner city residents. Today, in my home city of Chicago, we are facing a crisis with respect to the delivery of trauma care. No doubt, Chicago is not alone in this dilemma.

In Chicago, of the 10 hospitals originally designated as level I trauma centers, there are only 7 remaining in the network. Of those remaining, one was close to leaving but has since agreed to remain. The question is—for how long?

To compound the situation, Chicago is also facing a health care delivery crisis due to the closure of community hospitals. I am sure many of our colleagues share that dilemma as well. This is an issue that Chairman WAXMAN and I have talked about and I want him to know that I appreciate his understanding on this matter. As he is well aware, across the country, 81 community hospitals closed their doors in 1988. In Chicago alone, four closed in 1988, and since 1986, six others closed as well.

The closure of 10 hospitals in 3 years is nothing to take lightly. In my district, Provident Hospital, the first African-American-owned hospital in the Nation, sits idle and unused because its owners went into bankruptcy. Although it is still fully equipped and ready to serve the community, its fate is caught up in bureaucratic and political maneuvering. Meanwhile, my constituents must travel across town to have access to hospital care.

With 31 million Americans in poverty, and 37 million without health insurance, the ability of our Nation's hospitals to provide uncompensated care is fast approaching the breaking point, if it hasn't passed that point already.

For the Nation's third largest city, the closing of 10 hospitals, coupled with the loss of 6 or 7 trauma care centers, is clearly inadequate for the needs of city residents.

H.R. 1602, while not a cure all, will certainly enhance efforts to provide necessary trauma care expertise and services so vitally needed not only in cities such as Chicago, but also in underserved rural areas as well.

In closing, I would like to commend our colleague, the gentleman from California [JIM BATES], for his leadership in introducing this measure. I urge all Members of this Chamber to vote in support of H.R. 1602

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCCLOSKEY). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1602, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ACQUISITION OF CERTAIN LANDS ADJACENT TO ROCKY MOUNTAIN NATIONAL PARK

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 737) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to acquire certain lands adjacent to the boundary of Rocky Mountain National Park in the State of Colorado, with House amendments thereto, and insist on the House amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The Clerk read the amendments, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT.

(a) ACQUISITION AND BOUNDARY CHANGE.—The Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") is authorized to acquire, by donation, purchase with donated or appropriated funds, or by exchange, lands or interests therein within the area generally depicted as "Proposed Park Additions" on the map entitled "Proposed Park Additions, Rocky Mountain National Park", numbered 121-80, 106-A and dated May, 1989, which map shall be on file and available for public inspection in the Office of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior. Upon acquisition of such lands, the Secretary shall revise the boundary of Rocky Mountain National Park to include such lands within the park boundary and shall administer such lands as part of the park subject to the laws and regulations applicable thereto.

(b) BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT FOR ROOSEVELT NATIONAL FOREST.—Upon acquisition of such lands by the Secretary, the Secretary of Agriculture shall revise the boundary of the Roosevelt Forest to exclude such lands from the national forest boundary.

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act to adjust the boundary of Rocky Mountain National Park.".

Mr. VENTO (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] for an explanation.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, the main purpose of S. 737 is to authorize the addition of certain lands to Rocky Mountain National Park. The legislation was initially considered and passed by the Senate on September 15, 1989. The House passed S. 737 with amendments on September 25, 1989. Subsequently the Senate considered S. 737 on November 3, 1989, disagreed with the House amendments and returned the measure to the House.

While the House and Senate are in agreement on the additions of land to Rocky Mountain National Park that are made by the bill, there have been differences over a provision contained in the Senate bill that deals with a private landowner within the park boundary. We are now very close to resolving those differences. Action by the House today to return S. 737 to the Senate will keep open the parliamentary process to that we can complete action on the bill without having to resort to more cumbersome legislative procedures.

Mr. BROWN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the chairman for the outstanding job done on this bill and the extraordinary effort put into resolving a very difficult problem in Colorado. We deeply appreciate the gentleman's leadership.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT REFORM ACT OF 1989

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1) to amend Federal laws to reform housing, community and neighborhood development, and related programs, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SEC. 101. ALLOCATION OF HOUSING ASSISTANCE.

(a) ASSISTANCE SUBJECT TO FORMULA ALLOCATION.—Section 213(d)(1) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 1439(d)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(d)(1)(A) Except as provided by subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall allocate assistance referred to in subsection (a)(1) the first time it is available for reservation on the basis of a formula that is contained in a regulation prescribed by the Secretary, and that is based on the relative needs of different States, areas, and communities, as reflected in data as to population, poverty, housing overcrowding, housing vacancies, amount of substandard housing, and other objectively measurable conditions specified in the regulation. In allocating assistance under this paragraph for each program of housing assistance under subsection (a)(1), the Secretary shall apply the formula, to the extent practicable, in a manner so that the assistance under the program is allocated according to the particular relative needs under the preceding sentence that are characteristic of and related to the particular type of assistance provided under the program.

"(B) The formula allocation requirements of subparagraph (A) shall not apply to—

"(i) assistance that is approved in appropriation Acts for use under sections 9, 14, and the rental rehabilitation grant program under section 17, of the United States Housing Act of 1937; or

"(ii) other assistance referred to in subsection (a) that is approved in appropriation Acts for uses that the Secretary determines are incapable of geographic allocation, including amendments of existing contracts, renewal of assistance contracts, assistance to families that would otherwise lose assistance due to the decision of the project owner to prepay the project mortgage or not to renew the assistance contract, assistance to prevent displacement or to provide replacement housing in connection with the demolition or disposition of public and Indian housing, and assistance in support of the property disposition and loan management functions of the Secretary.

"(C) Any allocation of assistance under subparagraph (A) shall, as determined by the Secretary, be made to the smallest practicable area, consistent with the delivery of assistance through a meaningful competitive process designed to serve areas with greater needs.

"(D) Any amounts allocated to a State or areas or communities within a State that are not likely to be used within a fiscal year shall not be reallocated for use in another State, unless the Secretary determines that other areas or communities (that are eligible for assistance under the program) within the same State cannot use the amounts within that same fiscal year.".

(b) ALLOCATION TO NONMETROPOLITAN AREAS.—The second sentence of section 213(d)(2) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 1439(d)(2)) is amended by striking "such assistance" and inserting "the assistance that is subject to allocation under paragraph (1)(A)".

(c) COMPETITION FOR ASSISTANCE.—Section 213(d) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 1439(d)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5)(A) The Secretary shall not award assistance to specific recipients subject to paragraph (1)(A), unless the assistance is first allocated on the basis of the formula contained in such paragraph and then awarded to the recipient pursuant to a competition.

"(B) Any competition referred to in subparagraph (A) shall be conducted pursuant to specific criteria for the selection of recipients of assistance. The criteria shall be contained in—

"(i) a regulation promulgated by the Secretary after notice and public comment; or

"(ii) to the extent authorized by law, a notice published in the Federal Register.

"(C) Subject to the times at which appropriations for assistance subject to paragraph (1)(A) may become available for obligation in any fiscal year, the Secretary shall take such steps as the Secretary deems appropriate to ensure that, to the maximum extent practicable, the allocation of such assistance is made with similar frequency and at similar times for each fiscal year.

"(D) This paragraph shall not apply to assistance referred to in paragraph (4).".

SEC. 102. PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT OF FUNDING DECISIONS AND HOUSING ASSISTANCE ALLOCATIONS.

Section 7 of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Act (42 U.S.C.

3535) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(q)(1) The Secretary shall notify the public of all funding decisions made by the Department. The notification shall include, for each funding decision, the following elements:

"(A) The name and address of each funding recipient.

"(B) The name or other means of identifying the project, activity, or undertaking for each funding recipient.

"(C) The dollar amount of the funding for each project, activity, or undertaking.

"(D) The citation to the statutory, regulatory, or other criteria under which the funding decision was made.

"(E) Any additional information that the Secretary deems appropriate for a clear and full understanding of the funding decision.

"(2) The notification referred to in paragraph (1) shall be published as a notice in the Federal Register at least quarterly.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'funding decision' means the decision of the Secretary to make available grants, loans, or any other form of financial assistance to an individual or to any entity, including a State or local government or agency thereof (including a public housing agency), an Indian tribe, and a nonprofit organization, under any program administered by the Department that provides, by statute, regulation, or otherwise, for the competitive distribution of financial assistance.

"(r) The Secretary shall publish a notice in the Federal Register at least annually informing the public of the allocation of assistance under section 213(d)(1) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974.

"(s) The Secretary shall ensure that there is documentation and information with respect to each application for any assistance provided by the Secretary sufficient to indicate the basis on which the determination was made regarding whether the applicant will receive such assistance.".

SEC. 103. PROHIBITION OF ADVANCE DISCLOSURE OF FUNDING DECISIONS.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development Act (42 U.S.C. 3531 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"PROHIBITION OF ADVANCE DISCLOSURE OF FUNDING DECISIONS

"SEC. 12. (a) PROHIBITED ACTIONS.—

"(1) APPLICANTS.—During any selection process, no applicant nor any officer, employee, representative, agent, or consultant of any applicant shall knowingly solicit or obtain, directly or indirectly, from any officer or employee of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, any covered selection information regarding such selection process.

"(2) DEPARTMENT OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.—During any selection process, no officer or employee of the Department of Housing and Urban Development shall knowingly disclose any covered selection information regarding such selection, directly or indirectly, to any person other than a person authorized by the Secretary to receive such information.

"(b) ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES.—If the Secretary receives or obtains information providing a reasonable basis to believe that a violation of subsection (a) has occurred, the Secretary shall—

"(1) in the case of a selection that has not been made, determine whether to terminate the selection process or take other appropriate actions; and

"(2) in the case of a selection that has been made, determine whether to—

"(A) void or rescind the selection, subject to review and determination on the record after opportunity for a hearing;

"(B) impose sanctions upon the violating applicant selected, subject to review and determination on the record after opportunity for a hearing;

"(C) permit the violating applicant selected to continue to participate in the program; or

"(D) take any other actions that the Secretary considers appropriate.

"(c) CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Whenever any employee of the Department violates the prohibition in subsection (a), the Secretary may impose a civil money penalty on the employee in accordance with the provisions of this subsection. This penalty shall be in addition to any other available civil remedy or any available criminal penalty and may be imposed whether or not the Secretary takes other disciplinary actions.

"(2) AMOUNT.—The amount of the penalty, as determined by the Secretary, may not exceed $10,000 for each violation.

"(3) AGENCY PROCEDURES.—

"(A) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish standards and procedures governing the imposition of civil money penalties under this subsection. The standards and procedures—

"(i) may provide for the Secretary or other official of the Department to make the determination to impose a penalty or for use of an administrative entity to make the determination;

"(ii) shall provide for the imposition of a penalty only after the employee has been given an opportunity for a hearing on the record; and

"(iii) may provide for review of any determination or order, or interlocutory ruling, arising from a hearing.

"(B) FINAL ORDERS.—If no hearing is requested within 15 days of receipt of the notice of opportunity for hearing, the imposition of the penalty shall constitute a final and unappealable order. If the Secretary reviews the determination or order, the Secretary may affirm, modify, or reverse that determination or order. If the Secretary does not review the determination or order within 90 days of the issuance of the determination or order, the determination or order shall be final.

"(C) FACTORS IN DETERMINING AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—In determining the amount of a penalty under paragraph (2), consideration shall be given to such factors as the gravity of the offense, any history of prior disclosures of information on pending funding decisions made after the date of enactment of this section, ability to pay the penalty, injury to the public, benefits received, deterrence of future violations, and such other factors as the Secretary may determine in regulations to be appropriate.

"(D) REVIEWABILITY OF IMPOSITION OF A PENALTY.—The Secretary's determination or order imposing a penalty under paragraph (1) shall not be subject to review, except as provided in paragraph (4).

"(4) JUDICIAL REVIEW OF AGENCY DETERMINATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—After exhausting all administrative remedies established by the Secretary under paragraph (3)(A), an employee against whom the Secretary has imposed a civil money penalty under paragraph (1) may obtain a review of the penalty and such ancillary issues (such as any administrative sanctions under 24 CFR part 25) as may be addressed in the notice of determination to impose a penalty under paragraph (3)(A)(i) in the appropriate court of appeals of the United States, by filing in such court, within 20 days after the entry of such order or determination, a written petition praying that the Secretary's order or determination be modified or be set aside in whole or in part.

"(B) OBJECTIONS NOT RAISED IN HEARING.—The court shall not consider any objection that was not raised in the hearing conducted pursuant to paragraph (3)(A) unless a demonstration is made of extraordinary circumstances causing the failure to raise the objection. If any party demonstrates to the satisfaction of the court that additional evidence not presented at such hearing is material and that there were reasonable grounds for the failure to present such evidence at the hearing, the court shall remand the matter to the Secretary for consideration of such additional evidence.

"(C) SCOPE OF REVIEW.—The decisions, findings, and determinations of the Secretary shall be reviewed pursuant to section 706 of title 5, United States Code.

"(D) ORDER TO PAY PENALTY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any such review, the court shall have the power to order payment of the penalty imposed by the Secretary.

"(5) ACTION TO COLLECT PENALTY.—If any employee fails to comply with the Secretary's determination or order imposing a civil money penalty under paragraph (1), after the determination or order is no longer subject to review as provided by paragraphs (3)(A) and (4), the Secretary may request the Attorney General of the United States to bring an action in an appropriate United States district court to obtain a monetary judgment against the employee and such other relief as may be available. The monetary judgment may, in the court's discretion, include the attorneys fees and other expenses incurred by the United States in connection with the action. In an action under this subsection, the validity and appropriateness of the Secretary's determination or order imposing the penalty shall not be subject to review.

"(6) SETTLEMENT BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may compromise, modify, or remit any civil money penalty which may be, or has been, imposed under this subsection.

"(7) DEPOSIT OF PENALTIES.—The Secretary shall deposit all civil money penalties collected under this subsection into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.

"(d) CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—Whoever willfully violates subsection (a)(1) or willfully violates subsection (a)(2) by making a disclosure prohibited by subsection (a)(2) to any applicant, or any officer, employee, representative, agent, or consultant of any applicant, shall be imprisoned not more than 5 years, or fined in accordance with title 18, United States Code, or both.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

"(1) APPLICANT.—The term 'applicant' means any applicant or candidate that is being considered for receiving assistance.

"(2) ASSISTANCE.—The term 'assistance' means any grant, loan, subsidy, guarantee, or other financial assistance under a program administered by the Secretary that provides by statute, regulation, or otherwise for the competitive distribution of such assistance. The term does not include any mortgage insurance provided under a program administered by the Secretary.

"(3) COVERED SELECTION INFORMATION.—The term 'covered selection information' means—

"(A) any information that is contained in any application or request for assistance, or any information regarding the decision of the Secretary to make available assistance or other information that is determined by the Secretary to be information that is not generally available to the public (not including program requirements and timing of the decision to make assistance available); and

"(B) any information that is required by statute, regulation, or order to be confidential.

"(4) SELECTION.—The term 'selection' means the determination of which applicants for assistance are to receive assistance under the program.

"(5) SELECTION PROCESS.—The term 'selection process' means the period with respect to a selection for assistance that begins with the development, preparation, and issuance of a solicitation or request for applications for the assistance and concludes with the selection of recipients of assistance, and includes the evaluation of applications.

"(e) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue such regulations as the Secretary deems appropriate to implement this section.

"(f) APPLICABILITY.—This section shall apply only with respect to violations that occur on or after the date of the enactment of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989.".

SEC. 104. CONSIDERATION OF LOW-INCOME TAX CREDIT IN AWARDING HOUSING ASSISTANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In order to maximize the availability of low-income housing, for any applicant for housing assistance or recipient of housing assistance, the Secretary shall include in any calculation or determination regarding the amount of the assistance to be provided with respect to the housing, the extent to which any tax credit is provided under section 42 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 42) with respect to the housing.

(b) DEFINITION OF HOUSING ASSISTANCE.—For purposes of this section, the term "housing assistance" means any grant, loan, subsidy, guarantee, or other financial assistance for housing under a program administered by the Secretary. The term does not include any mortgage insurance provided under a program administered by the Secretary.

SEC. 105. REFORM OF HEADQUARTERS RESERVE.

(a) FUNDING CATEGORIES.—Section 213(d)(4) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 1439(d)(4)) is amended to read as follows:

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, with respect to fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1990, the Secretary may retain not more than 5 percent of the financial assistance that becomes available under programs described in subsection (a)(1) during any fiscal year. Any such financial assistance that is retained shall be available for subsequent allocation to specific areas and communities, and may only be used for—

"(i) unforeseen housing needs resulting from natural and other disasters;

"(ii) housing needs resulting from emergencies other than such disasters;

"(iii) housing needs resulting from the settlement of litigation; and

"(iv) housing in support of desegregation efforts.

"(B) Any amounts retained in any fiscal year under subparagraph (A) that are unexpended at the end of such fiscal year shall remain available for the following fiscal year under the program under subsection (a)(1) from which the amount was retained. Such amounts shall be allocated on the basis of the formula under subsection (d)(1).".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Any assistance made available under section 213(d)(4) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 before October 1, 1990, or pursuant to a commitment for such assistance entered into before such date, shall be governed by the provisions of section 213(d)(4) as such section existed before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) INDIAN HOUSING.—In accordance with section 201(b)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437aa(b)(2)), the amendment made by subsection (a) and the provisions of subsection (b) of this section shall also apply to public housing developed or operated pursuant to a contract between the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and an Indian housing authority.

SEC. 106. REFORM OF CDBG DISCRETIONARY FUND AND PROVISION OF TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.

(a) SPECIAL PURPOSE GRANTS.—Section 107(a) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5307(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking "in a special discretionary fund" in the first sentence; and

(2) by striking all that follows the period at the end of the second sentence.

(b) AUTHORIZED USES.—Section 107(b) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5307(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking paragraphs (1) and (3);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting a semicolon;

(3) by redesignating paragraphs (2) and (5) (as amended) as paragraphs (1) and (2), respectively;

(4) by inserting after paragraph (2) (as so redesignated) the following new paragraph:

"(3) to historically Black colleges; and"; and

(5) in paragraph (4)—

(A) by striking "and" after the third semicolon and all that follows through "and" after the fourth semicolon;

(B) by striking "and" at the end and inserting the following: "for purposes of this paragraph the term 'technical assistance' means the facilitating of skills and knowledge in planning, developing, and administering activities under this title in entities that may need but do not possess such skills and knowledge, and includes assessing programs and activities under this title; except that any recipient of a grant under this paragraph that provides technical assistance pursuant to this paragraph shall provide for the notification of the availability of such assistance and shall have specific criteria for selection of recipients of such assistance that are published and publicly available.".

(c) FUNDING CRITERIA.—Section 107 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5307) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) Any grant made under this section shall be made pursuant to criteria for selection of recipients of such grants that the Secretary shall by regulation establish and which the Secretary shall publish together with any notification of availability of amounts under this section.".

(d) APPLICABILITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in this paragraph and paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to any grants made under section 107 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5307) on or after the date of the enactment of this Act, except a grant made under the third sentence of section 107(a) of Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as such sentence existed immediately before such date, and grants for specific activities (referred to in House Report Number 101-297) pursuant to the amount appropriated for use under section 107 by the enactment of the bill, H.R. 2916, of the One Hundred First Congress.

(2) PRIOR GRANTS.—Any grant made under section 107 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 before the date of the enactment of this Act or pursuant to a grant award notification made before such date shall be governed by the provisions of such section as it existed immediately before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(e) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The section heading of section 107 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5307) is amended to read as follows:

"SPECIAL PURPOSE GRANTS".

SEC. 107. WAIVER OF REGULATION REQUIREMENTS AND HANDBOOK PROVISIONS.

Section 7 of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Act (42 U.S.C. 3535), as amended by the preceding provisions of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(t)(1) Any waiver of regulations of the Department shall be in writing and shall specify the grounds for approving the waiver.

"(2) The Secretary may delegate authority to approve a waiver of a regulation only to an Assistant Secretary, or officer of the Department of equivalent rank, who is authorized to issue the regulation to be waived.

"(3) The Secretary shall notify the public of all waivers of regulations approved by the Department. The notification shall be included in a notice in the Federal Register published not less than quarterly. Each notification shall cover the period beginning on the day after the last date covered by the prior notification, and shall—

"(A) identify the project, activity, or undertaking involved;

"(B) describe the nature of the requirement that has been waived and specify the provision involved;

"(C) specify the name and title of the official who granted the waiver request;

"(D) include a brief description of the grounds for approval of the waiver; and

"(E) state how more information about the waiver and a copy of the request and the approval may be obtained.

"(4) Any waiver of a provision of a handbook of the Department shall—

"(A) be in writing;

"(B) specify the grounds for approving the waiver; and

"(C) be maintained in indexed form and made available for public inspection for not less than the 3-year period beginning on the date of the waiver.".

SEC. 108. CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES AGAINST MORTGAGEES AND LENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title V of the National Housing Act is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES AGAINST MORTGAGEES AND LENDERS

"SEC. 536. (a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) AUTHORITY.—Whenever a mortgagee approved under this Act, or a lender holding a contract of insurance under title I of this Act, violates any of the provisions of subsection (b), the Secretary may impose a civil money penalty on the mortgagee or lender in accordance with the provisions of this section. The penalty shall be in addition to any other available civil remedy or any available criminal penalty, and may be imposed whether or not the Secretary imposes other administrative sanctions.

"(2) AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—The amount of the penalty, as determined by the Secretary, may not exceed $5,000 for each violation, except that the maximum penalty for all violations by any particular mortgagee or lender during any 1-year period shall not exceed $1,000,000. Each violation of a provision of subsection (b)(1) shall constitute a separate violation with respect to each mortgage or loan application. In the case of a continuing violation, as determined by the Secretary, each day shall constitute a separate violation.

"(b) VIOLATIONS FOR WHICH A PENALTY MAY BE IMPOSED.—

"(1) VIOLATIONS.—The Secretary may impose a civil money penalty under subsection (a) for any of the following violations by a mortgagee or lender:

"(A) Except where expressly permitted by statute, regulation, or contract approved by the Secretary, transfer of a mortgage insured under this Act to a mortgagee not approved by the Secretary, or transfer of a loan to a transferee that is not holding a contract of insurance under title I of this Act.

"(B) Failure of a nonsupervised mortgagee, as defined by the Secretary—

"(i) to segregate all escrow funds received from a mortgagor for ground rents, taxes, assessments, and insurance premiums; or

"(ii) to deposit these funds in a special account with a depository institution whose accounts are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation through the Bank Insurance Fund for banks and through the Savings Association Insurance Fund for savings associations, or by the National Credit Union Administration.

"(C) Use of escrow funds for any purpose other than that for which they were received.

"(D) Submission to the Secretary of information that the mortgagee or lender knew, or should have known, was false, in connection with any mortgage insured under this Act, or any loan that is covered by a contract of insurance under title I of this Act.

"(E) With respect to an officer, director, principal, or employee—

"(i) hiring such an individual whose duties will involve, directly or indirectly, programs administered by the Secretary, with knowledge that the person was under suspension or debarment by the Secretary; or

"(ii) retaining in employment such an individual who continues to be involved, directly or indirectly, in programs administered by the Secretary, with knowledge that the person was under suspension or debarment by the Secretary.

"(F) Falsely certifying to the Secretary or knowingly submitting to the Secretary a false certification by another person or entity.

"(G) Failure to comply with an agreement, certification, or condition of approval set forth on, or applicable to—

"(i) the application of a mortgagee or lender for approval by the Secretary; or

"(ii) the notification by a mortgagee or lender to the Secretary concerning establishment of a branch office.

"(H) Violation of any provisions of title I, II, or X (as such title existed immediately before the effective date of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989) or this Act or any implementing regulation, handbook, or mortgagee or title I letter that is issued under this Act.

"(2) NOTIFICATION TO ATTORNEY GENERAL.—Before taking action to impose a civil money penalty for a violation under paragraph (1)(D) or paragraph (1)(F), the Secretary shall inform the Attorney General of the United States.

"(c) AGENCY PROCEDURES.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish standards and procedures governing the imposition of civil money penalties under subsection (a). These standards and procedures—

"(A) may provide for the Secretary or other department officials to make the determination to impose the penalty or for use of an administrative entity (such as the Mortgagee Review Board, established pursuant to 24 CFR part 25) to make the determination;

"(B) shall provide for the imposition of a penalty only after the mortgagee or lender has been given an opportunity for a hearing on the record; and

"(C) may provide for review of any determination or order, or interlocutory ruling, arising from a hearing.

"(2) FINAL ORDERS.—If no hearing is requested within 15 days of receipt of the notice of opportunity for hearing, the imposition of the penalty shall constitute a final and unappealable order. If the Secretary reviews the determination or order, the Secretary may affirm, modify, or reverse that determination or order. If the Secretary does not review the determination or order within 90 days of the issuance of the determination or order, the determination or order shall be final.

"(3) FACTORS IN DETERMINING AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—In determining the amount of a penalty under subsection (a), consideration shall be given to such factors as the gravity of the offense, any history of prior offenses (including those before enactment of this section), ability to pay the penalty, injury to the public, benefits received, deterrence of future violations, and such other factors as the Secretary may determine in regulations to be appropriate.

"(4) REVIEWABILITY OF IMPOSITION OF PENALTY.—The Secretary's determination or order imposing a penalty under subsection (a) shall not be subject to review, except as provided in subsection (d).

"(d) JUDICIAL REVIEW OF AGENCY DETERMINATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—After exhausting all administrative remedies established by the Secretary under subsection (c)(1), a mortgagee or lender against whom the Secretary has imposed a civil money penalty under subsection (a) may obtain a review of the penalty and such ancillary issues (such as any administrative sanctions under 24 CFR part 25) as may be addressed in the notice of determination to impose a penalty under subsection (c)(1)(A) in the appropriate court of appeals of the United States, by filing in such court, within 20 days after the entry of such order or determination, a written petition praying that the Secretary's determination or order be modified or be set aside in whole or in part.

"(2) OBJECTIONS NOT RAISED IN HEARING.—The court shall not consider any objection that was not raised in the hearing conducted pursuant to subsection (c)(1) unless a demonstration is made of extraordinary circumstances causing the failure to raise the objection. If any party demonstrates to the satisfaction of the court that additional evidence not presented at the hearing is material and that there were reasonable grounds for the failure to present such evidence at the hearing, the court shall remand the matter to the Secretary for consideration of the additional evidence.

"(3) SCOPE OF REVIEW.—The decisions, findings, and determinations of the Secretary shall be reviewed pursuant to section 706 of title 5, United States Code.

"(4) ORDER TO PAY PENALTY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any such review, the court shall have the power to order payment of the penalty imposed by the Secretary.

"(e) ACTION TO COLLECT PENALTY.—If any mortgagee or lender fails to comply with the Secretary's determination or order imposing a civil money penalty under subsection (a), after the determination or order is no longer subject to review as provided by subsections (c)(1) and (d), the Secretary may request the Attorney General of the United States to bring an action in an appropriate United States district court to obtain a monetary judgment against the mortgagee or lender and such other relief as may be available. The monetary judgment may, in the court's discretion, include the attorneys fees and other expenses incurred by the United States in connection with the action. In an action under this subsection, the validity and appropriateness of the Secretary's determination or order imposing the penalty shall not be subject to review.

"(f) SETTLEMENT BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may compromise, modify, or remit any civil money penalty which may be, or has been, imposed under this section.

"(g) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue such regulations as the Secretary deems appropriate to implement this section.

"(h) DEPOSIT OF PENALTIES IN INSURANCE FUNDS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all civil money penalties collected under this section shall be deposited in the appropriate insurance fund or funds established under this Act, as determined by the Secretary.".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to—

(1) violations referred to in the amendment that occur on or after the effective date of this section; and

(2) in the case of a continuing violation (as determined by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development), any portion of a violation referred to in the amendment that occurs on or after such date.

SEC. 109. CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES AGAINST MULTIFAMILY MORTGAGORS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title V of the National Housing Act (as amended by the preceding provisions of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES AGAINST MULTIFAMILY MORTGAGORS

"SEC. 537. (a) IN GENERAL.—The penalties set forth in this section shall be in addition to any other available civil remedy or any available criminal penalty, and may be imposed whether or not the Secretary imposes other administrative sanctions.

"(b) PENALTY FOR VIOLATION OF AGREEMENT AS CONDITION OF TRANSFER OF PHYSICAL ASSETS, FLEXIBLE SUBSIDY LOAN, CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT LOAN, MODIFICATION OF MORTGAGE TERMS, OR WORK-OUT AGREEMENT.—

"(1) AUTHORITY.—Whenever a mortgagor of property that includes 5 or more living units and that has a mortgage insured, coinsured, or held pursuant to this Act, who has agreed in writing, as a condition of a transfer of physical assets, a flexible subsidy loan, a capital improvement loan, a modification of the mortgage terms, or a workout agreement, to use nonproject income to make cash contributions for payments due under the note and mortgage, for payments to the reserve for replacements, to restore the project to good physical condition, or to pay other project liabilities, fails to comply with any of these commitments, the Secretary may impose a civil money penalty on that mortgagor in accordance with the provisions of this section.

"(2) AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—The amount of the penalty, as determined by the Secretary, for a violation of this subsection may not exceed the amount of the loss the Secretary would experience at a foreclosure sale, or a sale after foreclosure, of the property involved.

"(c) VIOLATIONS OF REGULATORY AGREEMENT FOR WHICH PENALTY MAY BE IMPOSED.—

"(1) VIOLATIONS.—The Secretary may also impose a civil money penalty under this section on any mortgagor of property that includes 5 or more living units and that has a mortgage insured, co-insured, or held pursuant to this Act for any of the following violations of the regulatory agreement executed by the mortgagor:

"(A) Conveyance, transfer, or encumbrance of any of the mortgaged property, or permitting the conveyance, transfer, or encumbrance of such property, without the prior written approval of the Secretary.

"(B) Assignment, transfer, disposition, or encumbrance of any personal property of the project, including rents, or paying out any funds, except for reasonable operating expenses and necessary repairs, without the prior written approval of the Secretary.

"(C) Conveyance, assignment, or transfer of any beneficial interest in any trust holding title to the property, or the interest of any general partner in a partnership owning the property, or any right to manage or receive the rents and profits from the mortgaged property, without the prior written approval of the Secretary.

"(D) Remodeling, adding to, reconstructing, or demolishing any part of the mortgaged property or subtracting from any real or personal property of the project, without the prior written approval of the Secretary.

"(E) Requiring, as a condition of the occupancy or leasing of any unit in the project, any consideration or deposit other than the prepayment of the first month's rent, plus a security deposit in an amount not in excess of 1 month's rent, to guarantee the performance of the covenants of the lease.

"(F) Not holding any funds collected as security deposits separate and apart from all other funds of the project in a trust account, the amount of which at all times equals or exceeds the aggregate of all outstanding obligations under the account.

"(G) Payment for services, supplies, or materials which exceeds $500 and substantially exceeds the amount ordinarily paid for such services, supplies, or materials in the area where the services are rendered or the supplies or materials furnished.

"(H) Failure to maintain at any time the mortgaged property, equipment, buildings, plans, offices, apparatus, devices, books, contracts, records, documents, and other related papers (including failure to keep copies of all written contracts or other instruments which affect the mortgaged property) in reasonable condition for proper audit and for examination and inspection at any reasonable time by the Secretary or any duly authorized agents of the Secretary.

"(I) Failure to maintain the books and accounts of the operations of the mortgaged property and of the project in accordance with requirements prescribed by the Secretary.

"(J) Failure to furnish the Secretary, by the expiration of the 60-day period beginning on the 1st day after the completion of each fiscal year, with a complete annual financial report based upon an examination of the books and records of the mortgagor prepared and certified to by an independent public accountant or a certified public accountant and certified to by an officer of the mortgagor, unless the Secretary has approved an extension of the 60-day period in writing.

"(K) At the request of the Secretary, the agents of the Secretary, the employees of the Secretary, or the attorneys of the Secretary, failure to furnish monthly occupancy reports or failure to provide specific answers to questions upon which information is sought relative to income, assets, liabilities, contracts, the operation and condition of the property, or the status of the insured mortgage.

"(L) Failure to make promptly all payments due under the note and mortgage, including mortgage insurance premiums, tax and insurance escrow payments, and payments to the reserve for replacements when there is adequate project income available to make such payments.

"(2) AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—A penalty imposed for a violation under this subsection, as determined by the Secretary, may not exceed $25,000.

"(d) AGENCY PROCEDURES.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish standards and procedures governing the imposition of civil money penalties under subsections (b) and (c). These standards and procedures—

"(A) may provide for the Secretary or other department official (such as the Assistant Secretary for Housing) to make the determination to impose a penalty;

"(B) shall provide for the imposition of a penalty only after the mortgagor has been given an opportunity for a hearing on the record; and

"(C) may provide for review of any determination or order, or interlocutory ruling, arising from a hearing.

"(2) FINAL ORDERS.—If no hearing is requested within 15 days of receipt of the notice of opportunity for hearing, the imposition of the penalty shall constitute a final and unappealable order. If the Secretary reviews the determination or order, the Secretary may affirm, modify, or reverse that determination or order. If the Secretary does not review the determination or order within 90 days of the issuance of the determination or order, the determination or order shall be final.

"(3) FACTORS IN DETERMINING AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—In determining the amount of a penalty under subsection (b) or (c), consideration shall be given to such factors as the gravity of the offense, any history of prior offenses (including offenses occurring before enactment of this section), ability to pay the penalty, injury to the public, benefits received, deterrence of future violations, and such other factors as the Secretary may determine in regulations to be appropriate.

"(4) REVIEWABILITY OF IMPOSITION OF PENALTY.—The Secretary's determination or order imposing a penalty under subsection (b) or (c) shall not be subject to review, except as provided in subsection (e).

"(e) JUDICIAL REVIEW OF AGENCY DETERMINATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—After exhausting all administrative remedies established by the Secretary under subsection (d)(1), a mortgagor against whom the Secretary has imposed a civil money penalty under subsection (b) or (c) may obtain a review of the penalty and such ancillary issues as may be addressed in the notice of determination to impose a penalty under subsection (d)(1)(A) in the appropriate court of appeals of the United States, by filing in such court, within 20 days after the entry of such order or determination, a written petition praying that the Secretary's order or determination be modified or be set aside in whole or in part.

"(2) OBJECTIONS NOT RAISED IN HEARING.—The court shall not consider any objection that was not raised in the hearing conducted pursuant to subsection (d)(1) unless a demonstration is made of extraordinary circumstances causing the failure to raise the objection. If any party demonstrates to the satisfaction of the court that additional evidence not presented at such hearing is material and that there were reasonable grounds for the failure to present such evidence at the hearing, the court shall remand the matter to the Secretary for consideration of such additional evidence.

"(3) SCOPE OF REVIEW.—The decisions, findings, and determinations of the Secretary shall be reviewed pursuant to section 706 of title 5, United States Code.

"(4) ORDER TO PAY PENALTY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any such review, the court shall have the power to order payment of the penalty imposed by the Secretary.

"(f) ACTION TO COLLECT PENALTY.—If a mortgagor fails to comply with the Secretary's determination or order imposing a civil money penalty under subsection (b) or (c), after the determination or order is no longer subject to review as provided by subsections (d)(1) and (e), the Secretary may request the Attorney General of the United States to bring an action in an appropriate United States district court to obtain a monetary judgment against the mortgagor and such other relief as may be available. The monetary judgment may, in the court's discretion, include the attorneys fees and other expenses incurred by the United States in connection with the action. In an action under this subsection, the validity and appropriateness of the Secretary's determination or order imposing the penalty shall not be subject to review.

"(g) SETTLEMENT BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may compromise, modify, or remit any civil money penalty which may be, or has been, imposed under this section.

"(h) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue such regulations as the Secretary deems appropriate to implement this section.

"(i) DEPOSIT OF PENALTIES IN INSURANCE FUNDS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all civil money penalties collected under this section shall be deposited in the appropriate insurance fund or funds established under this Act, as determined by the Secretary.".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to violations referred to in the amendment that occur on or after the effective date of this section.

SEC. 110. CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES AGAINST SECTION 202 MORTGAGORS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title II of the Housing Act of 1959 is amended by inserting after section 202 the following new section:

"CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES AGAINST SECTION 202 MORTGAGORS

"SEC. 202a. (a) IN GENERAL.—The penalties set forth in this section shall be in addition to any other available civil remedy or criminal penalty, and may be imposed whether or not the Secretary imposes other administrative sanctions.

"(b) PENALTY FOR VIOLATION OF AGREEMENT AS CONDITION OF TRANSFER OF PHYSICAL ASSETS, FLEXIBLE SUBSIDY LOAN, CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT LOAN, MODIFICATION OF MORTGAGE TERMS, OR WORK-OUT AGREEMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Whenever a mortgagor of property that includes 5 or more living units and that has a mortgage held pursuant to section 202, who has agreed in writing, as a condition of a transfer of physical assets, a flexible subsidy loan, a capital improvement loan, a modification of the mortgage terms, or a work-out agreement, to use nonproject income to make cash contributions for payments due under the note and mortgage, for payments to the reserve for replacements, to restore the project to good physical condition, or to pay other project liabilities, fails to comply with any of these commitments, the Secretary may impose a civil money penalty on the mortgagor in accordance with the provisions of this section.

"(2) AMOUNT.—The amount of the penalty, as determined by the Secretary, for a violation of this subsection may not exceed the amount of the loss the Secretary would incur at a foreclosure sale, or sale after foreclosure, with respect to the property involved.

"(c) VIOLATIONS OF REGULATORY AGREEMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may also impose a civil money penalty on a mortgagor or property that includes 5 or more living units and that has a mortgage held pursuant to section 202 for any of the following violations of the regulatory agreement executed by the mortgagor:

"(A) Conveyance, transfer, or encumbrance of any of the mortgaged property, or permitting the conveyance, transfer, or encumbrance of such property, without the prior written approval of the Secretary.

"(B) Assignment, transfer, disposition, or encumbrance of any personal property of the project, including rents, or paying out any funds, except for reasonable operating expenses and necessary repairs, without the prior written approval of the Secretary.

"(C) Conveyance, assignment, or transfer of any beneficial interest in any trust holding title to the property, or the interest of any general partner in a partnership owning the property, or any right to manage or receive the rents and profits from the mortgaged property, without the prior written approval of the Secretary.

"(D) Remodeling, adding to, reconstructing, or demolishing any part of the mortgaged property or subtracting from any real or personal property of the project, without the prior written approval of the Secretary.

"(E) Requiring, as a condition of the occupancy or leasing of any unit in the project, any consideration or deposit other than the prepayment of the first month's rent, plus a security deposit in an amount not in excess of 1 month's rent, to guarantee the performance of the covenants of the lease.

"(F) Not holding any funds collected as security deposits separate and apart from all other funds of the project in a trust account, the amount of which at all times equals or exceeds the aggregate of all outstanding obligations under the account.

"(G) Payment for services, supplies, or materials which exceeds $500 and substantially exceeds the amount ordinarily paid for such services, supplies, or materials in the area where the services are rendered or the supplies or materials furnished.

"(H) Failure to maintain at any time the mortgaged property, equipment, buildings, plans, offices, apparatus, devices, books, contracts, records, documents, and other related papers (including failure to keep copies of all written contracts or other instruments which affect the mortgaged property) in reasonable condition for proper audit and for examination and inspection at any reasonable time by the Secretary or any duly authorized agents of the Secretary.

"(I) Failure to maintain the books and accounts of the operations of the mortgaged property and of the project in accordance with requirements prescribed by the Secretary.

"(J) Failure to furnish the Secretary, by the expiration of the 60-day period beginning on the 1st day after the completion of each fiscal year, with a complete annual financial report based upon an examination of the books and records of the mortgagor prepared in accordance with requirements prescribed by the Secretary, and prepared and certified to by an independent public accountant or a certified public accountant and certified to by an officer of the mortgagor, unless the Secretary has approved an extension of the 60-day period in writing.

"(K) At the request of the Secretary, the agents of the Secretary, the employees of the Secretary, or the attorneys of the Secretary, failure to furnish monthly occupancy reports or failure to provide specific answers to questions upon which information is sought relative to income, assets, liabilities, contracts, the operation and condition of the property, or the status of the insured mortgage.

"(L) Failure to make promptly all payments due under the note and mortgage, including tax and insurance escrow payments, and payments to the reserve for replacements when there is adequate project income available to make such payments.

"(M) Amending the articles of incorporation or by-laws, other than as permitted under the terms of the articles of incorporation as approved by the Secretary, without the prior written approval of the Secretary.

"(2) AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—A penalty imposed for a violation under this subsection, as determined by the Secretary, may not exceed $25,000 for a violation of any of the subparagraphs of paragraph (1).

"(d) AGENCY PROCEDURES.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish standards and procedures governing the imposition of civil money penalties under subsections (b) and (c). These standards and procedures—

"(A) shall provide for the Secretary or other department official (such as the Assistant Secretary for Housing) to make the determination to impose a penalty;

"(B) shall provide for the imposition of a penalty only after the mortgagor has been given an opportunity for a hearing on the record; and

"(C) may provide for review of any determination or order, or interlocutory ruling, arising from a hearing.

"(2) FINAL ORDERS.—If no hearing is requested within 15 days of receipt of the notice of opportunity for hearing, the imposition of the penalty shall constitute a final and unappealable order. If the Secretary reviews the determination or order, the Secretary may affirm, modify, or reverse that determination or order. If the Secretary does not review the determination or order within 90 days of the issuance of the determination or order, the determination or order shall be final.

"(3) FACTORS IN DETERMINING AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—In determining the amount of a penalty under subsection (b) or (c), consideration shall be given to such factors as the gravity of the offense, any history of prior offenses (including offenses occurring before enactment of this section), ability to pay the penalty, injury to the public, benefits received, deterrence of future violations, and such other factors as the Secretary may determine in regulations to be appropriate.

"(4) REVIEWABILITY OF IMPOSITION OF PENALTY.—The Secretary's determination or order imposing a penalty under subsection (b) or (c) shall not be subject to review, except as provided in subsection (e).

"(e) JUDICIAL REVIEW OF AGENCY DETERMINATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—After exhausting all administrative remedies established by the Secretary under subsection (d)(1), a mortgagor against whom the Secretary has imposed a civil money penalty under subsection (b) or (c) may obtain a review of the penalty and such ancillary issues as may be addressed in the notice of determination to impose a penalty under subsection (d)(1)(A) in the appropriate court of appeals of the United States, by filing in such court, within 20 days after the entry of such order or determination, a written petition praying that the Secretary's order or determination be modified or be set aside in whole or in part.

"(2) OBJECTIONS NOT RAISED IN HEARING.—The court shall not consider any objection that was not raised in the hearing conducted pursuant to subsection (d)(1) unless a demonstration is made of extraordinary circumstances causing the failure to raise the objection. If any party demonstrates to the satisfaction of the court that additional evidence not presented at such hearing is material and that there were reasonable grounds for the failure to present such evidence at the hearing, the court shall remand the matter to the Secretary for consideration of such additional evidence.

"(3) SCOPE OF REVIEW.—The decisions, findings, and determinations of the Secretary shall be reviewed pursuant to section 706 of title 5, United States Code.

"(4) ORDER TO PAY PENALTY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any such review, the court shall have the power to order payment of the penalty imposed by the Secretary.

"(f) ACTION TO COLLECT PENALTY.—If a mortgagor fails to comply with the Secretary's determination or order imposing a civil money penalty under subsection (b) or (c), after the determination or order is no longer subject to review as provided by subsections (d)(1) and (e), the Secretary may request the Attorney General of the United States to bring an action in an appropriate United States district court to obtain a monetary judgment against the mortgagor and such other relief as may be available. The monetary judgment may, in the court's discretion, include the attorneys fees and other expenses incurred by the United States in connection with the action. In an action under this subsection, the validity and appropriateness of the Secretary's determination or order imposing the penalty shall not be subject to review.

"(g) SETTLEMENT BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may compromise, modify, or remit any civil money penalty which may be, or has been, imposed under this section.

"(h) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue such regulations as the Secretary deems appropriate to implement this section.

"(i) DEPOSIT OF PENALTIES IN INSURANCE FUNDS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all civil money penalties collected under this section shall be deposited in the fund established under section 202.".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to violations referred to in the amendment that occur on or after the effective date of this section.

SEC. 111. CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES AGAINST GNMA ISSUERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title III of the National Housing Act is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES AGAINST ISSUERS

"SEC. 317. (a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) AUTHORITY.—Whenever an issuer or custodian approved under section 306(g) violates any provisions of subsection (b), the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development may impose a civil money penalty on the issuer or the custodian in accordance with the provisions of this section. The penalty shall be in addition to any other available civil remedy or any available criminal penalty and may be imposed whether or not the Secretary imposes other administrative sanctions.

"(2) AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—The amount of the penalty, as determined by the Secretary, may not exceed $5,000 for each violation, except that the maximum penalty for all violations by a particular issuer or custodian during any one-year period shall not exceed $1,000,000. Each violation of a provision of subsection (b)(1) shall constitute a separate violation with respect to each pool of mortgages. In the case of a continuing violation, as determined by the Secretary, each day shall constitute a separate violation.

"(b) VIOLATIONS FOR WHICH A PENALTY MAY BE IMPOSED.—

"(1) VIOLATIONS.—The Secretary may impose a civil money penalty under subsection (a) for any of the following violations by an issuer or a custodian, as applicable:

"(A) Failure to make timely payments of principal and interest to holders of securities guaranteed under section 306(g).

"(B) Failure to segregate cash flow from pooled mortgages or to deposit either principal and interest funds or escrow funds into special accounts with a depository institution whose accounts are insured by the National Credit Union Administration or by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation through the Bank Insurances Fund for banks or through the Savings Association Insurance Fund for savings associations.

"(C) Use of escrow funds for any purpose other than that for which they were received.

"(D) Transfer of servicing for a pool of mortgages to an issuer not approved under this title, unless expressly permitted by statute, regulation, or contract approved by the Secretary.

"(E) Failure to maintain a minimum net worth in accordance with requirements prescribed by the Association;

"(F) Failure to promptly notify the Association in writing of any changes that materially affect the business status of an issuer.

"(G) Submission to the Association of information that an issuer or custodian knew, or should have known, was false in connection with any securities guaranteed, or mortgages pooled, under section 306(g).

"(H) Hiring, or retaining in employment, an officer, director, principal, or employee whose duties involve, directly or indirectly, programs administered by the Association with knowledge that the person is under suspension or debarment by the Secretary.

"(I) Submission to the Association of a false certification either on its own behalf or on behalf of another person or entity.

"(J) Failure to comply with an agreement, certification, or condition of approval set forth on, or applicable to, the application for approval as an issuer of securities under section 306(g).

"(K) Violation of any provisions of this title or any implementing regulation or handbook issued under authority of this title.

"(2) NOTIFICATION TO ATTORNEY GENERAL.—Before taking action to impose a civil money penalty for a violation under paragraph (1)(G) or paragraph (1)(I), the Secretary shall inform the Attorney General of the United States.

"(c) AGENCY PROCEDURES.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish standards and procedures governing the imposition of civil money penalties under subsection (a). The standards and procedures—

"(A) may provide for the Secretary or other department official to make the determination to impose the penalty;

"(B) shall provide for the imposition of a penalty only after an issuer or a custodian has been given notice of, and opportunity for, a hearing on the record; and

"(C) may provide for review of any determination or order, or interlocutory ruling, arising from a hearing.

"(2) FINAL ORDERS.—If no hearing is requested within 15 days of receipt of a notice of opportunity for hearing, the imposition of a penalty shall constitute a final and unappealable order. If the Secretary reviews the determination or order, the Secretary may affirm, modify, or reverse that determination or order. If the Secretary does not review the determination or order within 90 days of the issuance of the determination or order, the determination or order shall be final.

"(3) FACTORS IN DETERMINING AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—In determining the amount of a penalty under subsection (a), consideration shall be given to such factors as the gravity of the offense, any history of prior offenses (including offenses occurring before enactment of this section), ability to pay the penalty, injury to the public, benefits received, deterrence of future violations, and such other factors as the Secretary may determine by regulations.

"(4) REVIEWABILITY OF IMPOSITION OF PENALTY.—The Secretary's determination or order imposing a penalty under subsection (a) shall not be subject to review, except as provided in subsection (d).

"(d) JUDICIAL REVIEW OF AGENCY DETERMINATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—After exhausting all administrative remedies established by the Secretary under subsection (c)(1), an issuer or a custodian against which the Secretary has imposed a civil money penalty under subsection (a) may obtain a review of the penalty and such ancillary issues as may be addressed in the notice provided under subsection (c)(1)(A) of determination to impose a penalty in the appropriate court of appeals of the United States, by filing in such court, within 20 days after the entry of such order or determination, a written petition praying that the Secretary's order or determination be modified or be set aside in whole or in part.

"(2) OBJECTIONS NOT RAISED IN HEARING.—A court shall not consider any objection that was not raised in the hearing conducted pursuant to subsection (c)(1) unless a demonstration is made of extraordinary circumstances causing the failure to raise the objection. If any party demonstrates to the satisfaction of the court that additional evidence, which was not presented at such hearing, is material and that there were reasonable grounds for the failure to present such evidence at the hearing, the court shall remand the matter to the Secretary for consideration of such additional evidence.

"(3) SCOPE OF REVIEW.—The decisions, findings, and determinations of the Secretary shall be reviewed pursuant to section 706 of title 5, United States Code.

"(4) ORDER TO PAY PENALTY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the court shall have the power in any such review to order payment of the penalty imposed by the Secretary.

"(e) ACTION TO COLLECT PENALTY.—If any issuer or custodian fails to comply with the Secretary's determination or order imposing a civil money penalty under subsection (a), after the determination or order is no longer subject to review as provided by subsections (c)(1) and (d), the Secretary may request the Attorney General of the United States to bring an action in an appropriate United States district court to obtain a monetary judgment against the issuer or custodian and such other relief as may be available. The monetary judgment may, in the discretion of the court, include any attorneys fees and other expenses incurred by the United States in connection with the action. In an action under this subsection, the validity and appropriateness of the Secretary's determination or order imposing the penalty shall not be subject to review.

"(f) SETTLEMENT BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may compromise, modify, or remit any civil money penalty which may be, or has been, imposed under this section.

"(g) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue such regulations as the Secretary deems appropriate to implement this section.

"(h) DEPOSIT OF PENALTIES.—The Secretary shall deposit all civil money penalties collected under this section into moneys of the Association pursuant to section 307.".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to—

(1) violations referred to in the amendment that occur on or after the effective date of this section; and

(2) in the case of a continuing violation (as determined by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development), any portion of a violation referred to in the amendment that occurs on or after such date.

SEC. 112. CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES FOR VIOLATIONS OF INTERSTATE LAND SALES FULL DISCLOSURE ACT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act (15 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 1418 the following new section:

"CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES

"SEC. 1418a. (a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) AUTHORITY.—Whenever any person violates any of the provisions of this title or any rule, regulation, or order issued under this title, the Secretary may impose a civil money penalty on such person in accordance with the provisions of this section. The penalty shall be in addition to any other available civil remedy or any available criminal penalty, and may be imposed whether or not the Secretary imposes other administrative sanctions.

"(2) AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—The amount of the penalty, as determined by the Secretary, may not exceed $1,000 for each violation, except that the maximum penalty for all violations by a particular person during any 1-year period shall not exceed $1,000,000. Each violation of this title, or any rule, regulation, or order issued under this title, shall constitute a separate violation with respect to each sale or lease or offer to sell or lease. In the case of a continuing violation, as determined by the Secretary, each day shall constitute a separate violation.

"(b) AGENCY PROCEDURES.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish standards and procedures governing the imposition of civil money penalties under subsection (a). The standards and procedures shall—

"(A) provide for the imposition of a penalty only after a person has been given an opportunity for a hearing on the record; and

"(B) may provide for review of any determination or order, or interlocutory ruling, arising from a hearing.

"(2) FINAL ORDERS.—If no hearing is requested within 15 days of receipt of the notice of opportunity for hearing, the imposition of the penalty shall constitute a final and unappealable order. If the Secretary reviews the determination or order, the Secretary may affirm, modify, or reverse that determination or order. If the Secretary does not review the determination or order within 90 days of the issuance of the determination or order, the determination or order shall be final.

"(3) FACTORS IN DETERMINING AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—In determining the amount of a penalty under subsection (a), consideration shall be given to such factors as the gravity of the offense, any history of prior offenses (including offenses occurring before enactment of this section), ability to pay the penalty, injury to the public, benefits received, deterrence of future violations, and such other factors as the Secretary may determine in regulations to be appropriate.

"(4) REVIEWABILITY OF IMPOSITION OF PENALTY.—The Secretary's determination or order imposing a penalty under subsection (a) shall not be subject to review, except as provided in subsection (c).

"(c) JUDICIAL REVIEW OF AGENCY DETERMINATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—After exhausting all administrative remedies established by the Secretary under subsection (b)(1), a person aggrieved by a final order of the Secretary assessing a penalty under this section may seek judicial review pursuant to section 1411.

"(2) ORDER TO PAY PENALTY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any such review, the court shall have the power to order payment of the penalty imposed by the Secretary.

"(d) ACTION TO COLLECT PENALTY.—If any person fails to comply with the determination or order of the Secretary imposing a civil money penalty under subsection (a), after the determination or order is no longer subject to review as provided by subsections (b) and (c), the Secretary may request the Attorney General of the United States to bring an action in any appropriate United States district court to obtain a monetary judgment against the person and such other relief as may be available. The monetary judgment may, in the discretion of the court, include any attorneys fees and other expenses incurred by the United States in connection with the action. In an action under this subsection, the validity and appropriateness of the Secretary's determination or order imposing the penalty shall not be subject to review.

"(e) SETTLEMENT BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may compromise, modify, or remit any civil money penalty which may be, or has been, imposed under this section.

"(f) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue such regulations as the Secretary deems appropriate to implement this section.

"(g) USE OF PENALTIES FOR ADMINISTRATION.—Civil money penalties collected under this section shall be paid to the Secretary and, upon approval in an appropriation Act, may be used by the Secretary to cover all or part of the cost of rendering services under this title.".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to—

(1) violations referred to in the amendment that occur on or after the effective date of this section; and

(2) in the case of a continuing violation (as determined by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development), any portion of violation referred to in the amendment that occurs on or after such date.

SEC. 113. REGISTRATION OF CONSULTANTS.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development Act (42 U.S.C. 3531 et seq.), as amended by the preceding provisions of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"REGISTRATION OF CONSULTANTS

"SEC. 13. (a) RECORD OF EXPENDITURES.—

"(1) REQUIREMENT TO MAINTAIN.—Each person who makes an expenditure to influence the decision of any officer or employee of the Department, through communication with such officer or employee, with respect to—

"(A) the award of any financial assistance within the jurisdiction of the Department, or

"(B) any management action involving a change in the terms and conditions or status of financial assistance awarded to any person, shall keep records, as required by this section. The preceding sentence shall not apply to expenditures incurred in complying with conditions, requirements, or procedures imposed by the Secretary in connection with any financial assistance.

"(2) COVERED INFORMATION.—Each person referred to in paragraph (1) shall keep a detailed and exact account of—

"(A) all such expenditures made by or on behalf of such person; and

"(B) the name and address of every person to whom any such expenditure is made and the date of the expenditure.

"(3) MAINTENANCE OF RECORDS.—Each person making such an expenditure shall obtain a bill, stating the particulars, for every such expenditure, and shall retain all records required by this section for not less than the 2-year period beginning on the date of the filing of the report required by subsection (b), which shall include the information under paragraph (2).

"(b) REPORTS OF EXPENDITURES FILED WITH THE SECRETARY.—

"(1) REPORT.—Each person making an expenditure for the purposes designated in subsection (a)(1) shall file with the Secretary, between the 1st and 10th day of each calendar year, a report specifying the total expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the year and the information required by subsection (a)(2)(B).

"(2) REGULAR EMPLOYEES.—The requirements of this subsection shall not apply in the case of a payment of reasonable compensation made to any regularly employed officer or employee of the person who requests or receives assistance within the jurisdiction of the Department, or who is involved in any management action with respect to such assistance.

"(3) MINIMUM DOLLAR REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of this subsection shall not apply to any person whose total expenditures for purposes described in subsections (a)(1)(A) and (B) are less than $10,000 in any calendar year.

"(4) FILING AND RETENTION.—A report required by this subsection—

"(A) shall be considered properly filed when deposited in a post office within the prescribed time, stamped, registered, and addressed to the Secretary, but if the Secretary does not receive the report, the person shall promptly file a duplicate report when the Secretary notifies the person that the original report has not been received; and

"(B) shall be retained by the Secretary for the 2-year period beginning on the date of filing, shall constitute part of the public records of the Department, and shall be open to public inspection.

"(5) PUBLICATION OF INFORMATION.—The Secretary shall compile all expenditure information as soon as practicable after the close of the calendar year with respect to which the information is filed and shall publish it as a notice in the Federal Register.

"(c) REGISTRATION BY PERSONS ATTEMPTING TO INFLUENCE DEPARTMENT DECISIONS.—

"(1) REQUIREMENT AND INFORMATION.—Each person receiving payment or any consideration for the purpose described in subsection (a)(1), shall, not later than 14 days after being retained for such purpose, register with the Secretary. The registration shall be in writing and shall include the name and business address of the registrant, the name and address of the registrant's employer and of any person or entity in whose interest the registrant appears or works, and a statement of whether the registrant has been employed by the Federal Government during the 2-year period ending on the date of the registration and in what capacity. Each registrant shall, between the 1st and 10th day of each calendar year, file with the Secretary a detailed report of all money received and expended by the registrant during the preceding year in carrying out the work, including information as to whom money was paid, and for what purposes.

"(2) MINIMUM DOLLAR REQUIREMENT.—The requirements of the last sentence of paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to any calendar year to any person whose total compensation for attempting to influence a decision with respect to assistance within the jurisdiction of the Department or a management action with respect to such assistance is less than $10,000 in such year.

"(3) PUBLICATION OF INFORMATION.—The Secretary shall compile all registration information as soon as practicable after the close of the calendar year with respect to which the information is filed and shall publish it annually as a notice in the Federal Register.

"(d) CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES.—

"(1) AUTHORITY.—Whenever any person fails to file a report required under subsection (b), or any person fails to register and file a report required under subsection (c), the Secretary may impose a civil money penalty on that person in accordance with the provisions of this subsection. The penalty shall be in addition to any other available civil remedy or any available criminal penalty, and may be imposed whether or not the Secretary imposes other administrative sanctions.

"(2) AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—The amount of the penalty, as determined by the Secretary, shall be the greater of—

"(A) $10,000 for each violation; or

"(B) the total amount received for any services performed for any applicant to which the violation under paragraph (1) relates.

"(3) AGENCY PROCEDURES.—

"(A) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish standards and procedures governing the imposition of civil money penalties under paragraph (1). These standards and procedures may—

"(i) provide for the Secretary or other department official to make the determination to impose the penalty or for use of an administrative entity to make the determination;

"(ii) provide for the imposition of a penalty only after the person has been given an opportunity for a hearing on the record; and

"(iii) provide for review of any determination or order, or interlocutory ruling, arising from a hearing.

"(B) FINAL ORDERS.—If no hearing is requested within 15 days of receipt of the notice of opportunity for hearing, the imposition of the penalty shall constitute a final and unappealable order. If the Secretary reviews the determination or order, the Secretary may affirm, modify, or reverse that determination or order. If the Secretary does not review the determination or order within 90 days of the issuance of the determination or order, the determination or order shall be final.

"(C) REVIEWABILITY OF IMPOSITION OF PENALTY.—The Secretary's determination or order imposing a penalty under paragraph (1) shall not be subject to review, except as provided in paragraph (4).

"(4) JUDICIAL REVIEW OF AGENCY DETERMINATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—After exhausting all administrative remedies established by the Secretary under paragraph (3)(A), a person against whom the Secretary has imposed a civil money penalty under paragraph (1) may obtain a review of the penalty and such ancillary issues as may be addressed in the notice of determination to impose a penalty under paragraph (3)(A)(i) in the appropriate court of appeals of the United States, by filing in such court, within 20 days after the entry of such order or determination, a written petition praying that the Secretary's order or determination be modified or be set aside in whole or in part.

"(B) OBJECTIONS NOT RAISED IN HEARING.—The court shall not consider any objection that was not raised in the hearing conducted pursuant to paragraph (3)(A) unless a demonstration is made of extraordinary circumstances causing the failure to raise the objection. If any party demonstrates to the satisfaction of the court that additional evidence not presented at the hearing is material and that there are reasonable grounds for the failure to present such evidence at the hearing, the court shall remand the matter to the Secretary for consideration of such additional evidence.

"(C) SCOPE OF REVIEW.—The decisions, findings, and determinations of the Secretary shall be reviewed pursuant to section 706 of title 5, United States Code.

"(D) ORDER TO PAY PENALTY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any such review, the court shall have the power to order payment of the penalty imposed by the Secretary.

"(5) ACTION TO COLLECT PENALTY.—If any person fails to comply with the Secretary's determination or order imposing a civil money penalty under paragraph (1), after the determination or order is no longer subject to review as provided by paragraphs (3)(A) and (4), the Secretary may request the Attorney General of the United States to bring an action in an appropriate United States district court to obtain a monetary judgment against the person and such other relief as may be available. The monetary judgment may, in the discretion of the court, include any attorneys fees and other expenses incurred by the United States in connection with the action. In an action under this paragraph, the validity and appropriateness of the Secretary's determination or order imposing the penalty shall not be subject to review.

"(6) SETTLEMENT BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may compromise, modify, or remit any civil money penalty which may be, or has been, imposed under this subsection.

"(7) DEPOSIT OF PENALTIES.—The Secretary shall deposit all civil money penalties collected under this subsection into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.

"(e) PROHIBITION ON CONSULTING ACTIVITIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Whoever is fined under subsection (d) shall be prohibited, for the 3-year period beginning on the date of the imposition of the fine, from receiving any payment or thing of value for performing any services (with respect to any application for financial assistance within the jurisdiction of the Department) for any applicant.

"(2) CRIMINAL PENALTY.—Whoever violates the prohibition under paragraph (1) shall, upon conviction, be guilty of a felony and shall be fined under title 18, United States Code, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

"(1) The term 'person' means an individual, corporation, company, association, authority, firm, partnership, society, State, local government, or any other organization or group of people.

"(2) The term 'expenditure' includes a payment, distribution, loan, advance, deposit, gift of money, or anything else of value, and includes a contract, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make an expenditure.

"(3) The term 'financial assistance within the jurisdiction of the Department' includes any contract, grant, loan, cooperative agreement, or other form of assistance, including the insurance or guarantee of a loan, mortgage, or pool of mortgages.

"(4) The term 'reasonable compensation' means, with respect to a regularly employed officer or employee of any person, compensation that is consistent with the normal compensation for such officer or employee for work that is not furnished to or not furnished in cooperation with the Department.

"(5) The term 'regularly employed' means working or having contracted to work not less than 20 hours per week, on average for a calendar year.

"(g) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue any regulations necessary to implement this section.

"(h) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section shall take effect on the date specified in regulations implementing this section that are issued by the Secretary after notice and public comment. The regulations shall establish standards that include determinations of what types of activities constitute influence with respect to the decisions of the Department described in subsection (a)(1)(A) and (B).".

Subtitle B—Management Reform

SEC. 121. ESTABLISHMENT OF HUD CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER.

Section 4 of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Act (42 U.S.C. 3533) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) There shall be in the Department a Chief Financial Officer, designated by the Secretary, who shall—

"(1) serve as the principal advisor to the Secretary on financial management;

"(2) develop and maintain a financial management system for the Department (including accounting and related translated transaction systems, internal control systems, financial reporting systems, credit, and cash and debt management);

"(3) supervise and coordinate all financial management activities and operations of the Department;

"(4) assist in the financial execution of the Department's budget in relation to actual expenditures and prepare timely performance reports for senior managers; and

"(5) issue such policies and directives as may be necessary to carry out this section.".

SEC. 122. ESTABLISHMENT OF FHA COMPTROLLER.

Section 4 of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Act (42 U.S.C. 3533), as amended by section 121, is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) There shall be in the Department a Federal Housing Administration Comptroller, designated by the Secretary, who shall be responsible for overseeing the financial operations of the Federal Housing Administration.".

SEC. 123. EXPEDITING RULEMAKING.

Section 7(o) of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Act (42 U.S.C. 3535(o)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2)(A)—

(A) by striking "first period of 15 calendar days of continuous session of Congress which occurs" in the first sentence and inserting "15-calendar day period beginning on the day"; and

(B) by striking "of continuous session" in the second sentence;

(2) in paragraph (2)(B), by striking "of continuous session of Congress";

(3) in paragraph (3)—

(A) by striking "first period of 30 calendar days of continuous session of Congress which occurs" in the first sentence and inserting "expiration of the 30-calendar day period beginning on the day"; and

(B) by striking all that follows the period at the end of the first sentence; and

(4) by striking paragraphs (5) and (6) and inserting the following new paragraph:

"(5) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'rule or regulation' does not include the setting of interest rates pursuant to section 235 of the National Housing Act.".

SEC. 124. FUNDING FOR PROGRAM EVALUATION AND MONITORING.

Section 7 of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Act (42 U.S.C. 3535), as amended by the preceding provisions of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(u)(1) For the programs listed in paragraph (2), amounts appropriated under this subsection shall be available to the Secretary for evaluating and monitoring of all such programs (including all aspects of the public housing and section 202 programs). The Secretary shall expend amounts made available under this subsection in accordance with the need and complexity of evaluating and monitoring each such program.

"(2) The programs subject to this subsection shall be the programs authorized under—

"(A) titles I and II of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (other than section 9);

"(B) section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959;

"(C) section 106 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968;

"(D) the Fair Housing Act;

"(E) title I and section 810 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974;

"(F) section 201 of the Housing and Community Development Amendments of 1978;

"(G) the Congregate Housing Services Act of 1978;

"(H) section 222 of the Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983;

"(I) section 561 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987; and

"(J) title IV of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act.

"(3) In conducting evaluations and monitoring pursuant to the authority under this subsection, the Secretary shall determine any need for additional staff and funding relating to evaluating and monitoring the programs under paragraph (2).

"(4)(A) The Secretary may provide for evaluation and monitoring under this subsection directly or by grants, contracts, or interagency agreements. Not more than 50 percent of the amounts made available under paragraph (1) may be used for grants, contracts, or interagency agreements.

"(B) Any amounts not used for grants, contracts, or interagency agreements under subparagraph (A) shall be used in a manner that increases and strengthens the ability of the Department to monitor and evaluate the programs under paragraph (2) through officers and employees of the Department.

"(5) The Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report regarding the use of amounts made available under this subsection, including an analysis of the ability of the Department to monitor and evaluate the programs under paragraph (2) and a statement of any needs determined under paragraph (3). The report shall be submitted not later than the termination date referred to in paragraph (6).

"(6) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1991. Such amounts shall remain available until expended.".

SEC. 125. TARGETING OF COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT BLOCK GRANTS FOR LOW- AND MODERATE-INCOME BENEFICIARIES.

Section 104(b)(3) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5304(b)(3)) is amended by striking "60 percent" in clause (A) and inserting "75 percent".

SEC. 126. REFINANCING OF SECTION 235 MORTGAGES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 235 of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1715z) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(r)(1) The Secretary is authorized, upon application of a mortgagee, to insure under this subsection a mortgage the proceeds of which are used to refinance a mortgage insured under this section.

"(2) To be eligible for insurance under this subsection, a mortgage must be executed by a mortgagor meeting the requirements of paragraph (3) and shall—

"(A) be a first lien on real estate held in fee simple, or on a leasehold under a lease—

"(i) for not less than 99 years which is renewable; or

"(ii) having a period of not less than 10 years to run beyond the maturity date of the mortgage;

"(B) have been made to, and held by, a mortgagee approved by the Secretary;

"(C) be in an amount not exceeding the outstanding principal balance, including any unpaid interest, due on the mortgage being refinanced;

"(D) have a maturity not exceeding the unexpired term of the mortgage being refinanced;

"(E) bear an interest rate not exceeding such percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time as the Secretary finds necessary to meet the mortgage market, taking into consideration the yields on mortgages in the primary and secondary markets; to the extent that the amounts described in paragraphs (4)(A) and (B) are not otherwise paid by the Secretary, the foregoing interest rate may be increased, in the discretion of the Secretary, to compensate the mortgagee for its payment to, or on behalf of, the mortgagor of such amounts; and

"(F) meet the criteria for refinancing as determined by the Secretary.

"(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (h)(2), assistance payments in connection with mortgages insured under paragraph (2) shall be made only with respect to a family who is eligible for, and receiving assistance payments with respect to, the insured mortgage being refinanced.

"(4) The Secretary is authorized and, to the extent provided in appropriation Acts, may pay to the mortgagor (directly, through the mortgagee, or otherwise)—

"(A) an amount, as approved by the Secretary, as an incentive to the mortgagor to refinance a mortgage insured under this section; and

"(B) an amount as approved by the Secretary for costs incurred in connection with the refinancing, including but not limited to discounts, loan origination fees, and closing costs.

"(5) Amounts of budget authority required for assistance payments contracts with respect to mortgages insured under this subsection shall be derived from amounts recaptured from assistance payments contracts relating to mortgages that are being refinanced. For purposes of subsection (c)(3)(A), the amount of recaptured budget authority that the Secretary commits for assistance payments contracts relating to mortgages insured under this subsection shall not be construed as 'unused'.

"(6) The Secretary is authorized to take any actions to identify and communicate with any mortgagor of a mortgage insured under this section to implement the refinancing of such mortgages with insurance under this subsection. The Secretary may take such actions directly, or under contract. Notwithstanding the restriction of section 552a(b) of title 5 of the United States Code, upon the request of an approved mortgagee, the Secretary may disclose to such mortgagee the name and address of any mortgagor of a mortgage insured under this section that meets the criteria for refinancing, pursuant to paragraph (2)(F), and the unpaid principal balance and interest rate on such mortgage.

"(7) The Secretary shall implement the provisions of this subsection by a notice published in the Federal Register.".

(b) EXCESS RECAPTURED AMOUNTS.—Section 235(c)(3)(C) of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1715z(c)(3)(C) is amended by inserting after the period at the end the following new sentence: "Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, any amounts of budget authority recaptured from assistance payments contracts relating to mortgages that are being refinanced that are not required for assistance payments contracts relating to mortgages insured under this subsection, shall be used by the Secretary for monitoring and evaluation of programs under the National Housing Act.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 235 of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1715z) is amended—

(1) in subsection (c)(1), by inserting ", other than a contract in connection with a refinancing under subsection (r)," in the second sentence after "any new contract";

(2) in subsection (c)(3)(A), by inserting "(except to the extent provided in subsection (r) for mortgages insured under such subsection)" in the second sentence after "refinanced,";

(3) in subsection (e), by striking "or (j)(7)," and inserting "(j)(7), or (r),";

(4) in subsection (h)(1)—

(A) by inserting "(other than obligations in connection with mortgages insured under subsection (r))" in the third sentence after "October 1, 1983";

(B) by inserting "(except under subsection (r))" in the sixth sentence after "under this section" the first place it appears; and

(C) by inserting "(other than a contract in connection with a mortgage insured under subsection (r))" in the seventh sentence after "under this section";

(5) in subsection (h)(3), by inserting after the period at the end the following: "The preceding sentence shall not apply to contracts in connection with mortgages insured under subsection (r).";

(6) in subsection (m), by inserting "(except a mortgage insured under subsection (r))" after "No mortgage"; and

(7) in subsection (n), by inserting "or to a mortgage insured under subsection (r)" before the period at the end.

(d) SAVINGS PROVISION.—Notwithstanding the termination of the program under section 235 pursuant to section 401(d) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 (12 U.S.C. 1715z note), the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall have authority to insure mortgages under section 235(r), to make assistance payments with respect to such insured mortgages, and to make any other payment or take any other action related to the refinancing of mortgages insured under section 235.

SEC. 127. SANCTIONS FOR IMPROPER CONVEYANCES UNDER URBAN HOMESTEAD PROGRAMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 810 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (12 U.S.C. 1706e) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(m) If the Secretary determines that any property transferred for use under an urban homestead program under this section has been conveyed or used under the program in a manner contrary to the provisions of this section, the Secretary may take action as the Secretary considers appropriate, including taking any of the following actions:

"(1) The Secretary may impose a civil penalty on the unit of general local government or the State or the qualified community organization or public agency designated by a unit of general local government, or the transferee of such entity, as appropriate, in an amount not less than any profit realized with respect to the conveyance or use of the property contrary to the provisions of this section.

"(2) The Secretary may revoke the conveyance of the property pursuant to subsection (b)(4) and revoke the transfer of the property to the unit of general local government or State or the qualified community organization or public agency designated by a unit of general local government, except that the Secretary may not revoke the conveyance of any property under this paragraph if the Secretary determines that the conveyance was made to an individual or family who has substantially complied with the requirements of this section for participation in an urban homestead program and who has no knowledge of the conveyance or use of the property contrary to the provisions of this section. If any tenants of any property for which a conveyance is revoked under this paragraph would be displaced by such revocation and the Secretary determines that the tenants are not responsible for or involved in the actions for which the revocation has been imposed, the Secretary shall, if practicable, take actions that would allow the tenants to remain on the property and maintain the property under an urban homestead program.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 810(b)(4) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 1706e(b)(4)) is amended by inserting before the semicolon at the end the following: "or by the Secretary under subsection (m)(2)".

(c) APPLICABILITY.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any property transferred for use in an urban homestead program under section 810 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 1706e) after January 1, 1981.

SEC. 128. ANNUAL ADJUSTMENT FACTORS FOR SECTION 8 RENTS.

(a) EFFECT OF PRIOR COMPARABILITY STUDIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In any case in which, in implementing section 8(c)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, the use of comparability studies by the Secretary as an independent limitation on the amount of rental adjustments resulting from the application of an annual adjustment factor under such section has resulted in the reduction of the maximum monthly rent for units covered by the contract or the failure to increase such contract rent to the full amount otherwise permitted under the annual adjustment factor, the Secretary shall provide to the project owner an amount equal to the benefit resulting from any increase in the maximum monthly rents permitted under the contract due to the application of the appropriate annual adjustment factor (not utilizing the comparability study) to the difference of the contract rent less any debt service for the project.

(2) APPLICABILITY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) shall apply with respect to any use of comparability studies referred to in such subsection occurring before the effective date of the regulations issued under subsection (e).

(B) FINAL LITIGATION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any project with respect to which litigation regarding the authority of the Secretary to use comparability studies to limit rental adjustments under section 8(c)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 has resulted in a judgment before the effective date of the regulations issued under subsection (e) that is final and not appealable (including any order of settlement).

(b) 3-YEAR PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall provide the amounts under subsection (a) over the 3-year period beginning on the effective date of the regulations issued under subsection (e). The Secretary shall provide such amounts from amounts reserved for the original contract for such projects. There is authorized to appropriated such sums as may be necessary to provide any amounts under subsection (a) not covered by amounts described in the preceding sentence.

(c) COMPARABILITY STUDIES.—Section 8(c)(2)(C) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437f(c)(2)(C) is amended by inserting after the period at the end of the first sentence the following: "In carrying out the requirement of the preceding sentence, the Secretary may conduct studies regarding the comparability of rents only as provided under this subparagraph. The Secretary may conduct such studies upon the request of any owner of any project, or as the Secretary determines appropriate and shall establish an annual adjustment factor for such market area, as the Secretary shall designate, that is geographically smaller than the applicable housing area used for the establishment of the annual adjustment factor under subparagraph (A). The Secretary shall establish the annual adjustment factor under this subparagraph on the basis of the results of a study conducted by the Secretary of the rents charged, and any change in such rents over the previous year, for assisted units and unassisted units of similar quality and age in the smaller market area.".

(d) APPLICATION OF ANNUAL ADJUSTMENT FACTOR.—Section 8(c)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437f(c)(2)) is amended by inserting at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) For any project for which any amounts available to the owner that are in excess of operating expenses, debt service, and any reasonable reserve requirements exceed (i) in the case of a project for elderly tenants, 6 percent of the project equity, or (ii) in the case of a project for nonelderly tenants, 10 percent of project equity, the Secretary shall apply the annual adjustment factor to only the portion of the contract rent that does not include debt service.".

(e) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue regulations to carry out this section and the amendments made by this section. The Secretary shall issue such regulations not later than the expiration of the 180-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle C—Federal Housing Administration Reforms

SEC. 131. ANNUAL AUDITED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS.

Title V of the National Housing Act (as amended by the preceding provisions of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"ANNUAL AUDITED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

"SEC. 538. With respect to fiscal year 1989 and for every fiscal year thereafter, the Secretary shall make available to the public audited financial statements of the insurance funds established under this Act that will present their financial condition on a cash and accrual basis, consistent with generally accepted accounting principles. Each financial statement shall be prepared by an independent accounting firm selected by the Secretary.".

(a) RETENTION OF PUBLIC AND NONPROFIT INVESTOR OWNERS.—Section 203(g)(3) of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1709(g)(3)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting the following: ", or any other State or local government or an agency thereof;"; and

(2) in subparagraph (B), by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting the following: ", or other private nonprofit organization that is exempt from taxation under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and intends to sell or lease the mortgaged property to low or moderate-income persons, as determined by the Secretary;".

(b) ELIMINATION OF PRIVATE INVESTOR-OWNERS.—Section 203(g) of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1709(g)), as amended by subsection (a), is further amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (2); and

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (3) and (4) as paragraphs (2) and (3), respectively.

(c) APPLICABILITY.—The amendments made by this section shall apply only with respect to—

(1) mortgages insured—

(A) pursuant to a conditional commitment issued on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; or

(B) in accordance with the direct endorsement program, if the approved underwriter of the mortgagee signs the appraisal report for the property on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(2) the approval of substitute mortgagors, if the original mortgagor was subject to such amendments.

(d) TRANSITION PROVISIONS.—Any mortgage insurance provided under title II of the National Housing Act, as it existed immediately before the date of the enactment of this Act, shall continue to be governed (to the extent applicable) by the provisions amended by subsections (a) and (b) as such provisions existed immediately before such date.

SEC. 133. LIMITATION ON SECONDARY RESIDENCES IN SINGLE FAMILY MORTGAGE INSURANCE PROGRAM.

(a) LIMITATION ON SECONDARY RESIDENCES.—Section 203(g)(1) of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1709(g)(1)) is amended by inserting after the period at the end the following: "In making a determination with respect to the occupancy of secondary homes, the Secretary may not permit such occupancy unless the Secretary determines that it is necessary to avoid undue hardship to the mortgagor. In no event may a secondary residence under this subsection include a vacation home, as determined by the Secretary.".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to—

(1) mortgages insured—

(A) pursuant to a conditional commitment issued on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; or

(B) in accordance with the direct endorsement program, if the approved underwriter of the mortgagee signs the appraisal report for the property on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(2) the approval of substitute mortgagors, if the original mortgagor was subject to such amendment.

(c) TRANSITION PROVISIONS.—Any mortgage insurance provided under title II of the National Housing Act, as it existed immediately before the date of the enactment of this Act, shall continue to be governed (to the extent applicable) by the provisions of section 203(g)(1) of the National Housing Act, as such provisions existed immediately before such date.

SEC. 134. CREDIT REVIEWS OF PERSONS ACQUIRING MORTGAGED PROPERTIES UNDER SINGLE FAMILY PROGRAM FOR LIFE OF MORTGAGE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 203(r) of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1709(r)) is amended—

(1) by amending the first sentence to read as follows: "The Secretary shall take appropriate actions to reduce losses under the single-family mortgage insurance programs carried out under this title.";

(2) by amending paragraphs (2) and (3) to read as follows:

"(2) requiring that at least one person acquiring ownership of a one- to four-family residential property encumbered by a mortgage insured under this title be determined to be creditworthy, whether or not such person assumes personal liability under the mortgage (excluding acquisitions by devise or descent); and

"(3) in any case where personal liability under a mortgage is assumed, requiring that the original mortgagor be advised of the procedures by which he or she may be released from liability."; and

(3) inserting after the period at the end the following: "In order to ensure full compliance with the requirements under this subsection, the Secretary may require inclusion in each insured mortgage of a due-on-sale provision permitting the mortgagee to accelerate and require payment of the mortgage obligation. Any such due-on-sale provision shall not be subject to section 341(d)(6) of the Garn-St Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982.".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to—

(1) mortgages insured—

(A) pursuant to a conditional commitment issued on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; or

(B) in accordance with the direct endorsement program, if the approved underwriter of the mortgage signs the appraisal report for the property on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(2) the approval of substitute mortgagors, if the original mortgagor was subject to such amendments.

(c) TRANSITION PROVISIONS.—Any mortgage insurance provided under title II of the National Housing Act as it existed immediately before the date of the enactment of this Act, shall continue to be governed (to the extent applicable) by the provisions of section 203(r) of the National Housing Act, as such section existed immediately before such date.

(c) OFFICE OF INDIAN AND ALASKA NATIVE PROGRAMS.—The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall administer grants to Indian tribes under title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 through the Office of Indian and Alaska Native Programs of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue any regulations necessary to carry out this section and the amendments made by this section in a manner and by such time to provide for the effectiveness of such regulations with respect to amounts appropriated for fiscal year 1991 under section 103 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974.

(e) APPLICABILITY.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to amounts approved in any appropriation Act under section 103 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 for fiscal year 1991 and each fiscal year thereafter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ].

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the House to pass H.R. 1, the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989, which contains vitally needed provisions designed to reform practices that led to fraud and abuse at HUD and several other provisions, including an extension until September 30, 1990, of the prepayment moratorium provisions contained in the 1987 Housing Act. This bill represents the efforts put forth by our Housing Subcommittee members, particularly Representatives SCHUMER, FRANK, MORRISON, and KANJORSKI who have each contributed a great deal to this bill. Provisions have been added from legislation contained in H.R. 3191 and H.R. 3391 introduced by Representative SCHUMER. H.R. 3377, introduced by Representative ROUKEMA and H.R. 3145, introduced by Representative KANJORSKI. This bill would not have been possible without the extensive cooperation of the ranking member of the full committee, CHALMERS WYLIE, and the ranking minority member of the subcommittee, MARGE ROUKEMA. Both were indispensable to this effort.

We are on the floor today to take up one part of the comprehensive housing authorization package the subcommittee developed in H.R. 1180—the HUD reform provisions—because of the tight timeframe before we recess this year. I fully expect to take up the other portions of H.R. 1180 before the House during the 101st Congress. I believe that the bill before the House today allows us to get the HUD scandals behind us and to get to the consideration of the more fundamental programmatic housing and community development reauthorization provisions.

It must be clear that the provisions relating to the cleaning up of fraud and abuse at HUD can be done for the most part administratively without legislation. In this bill, however, we have put these administrative provisions in the statute in order to assure that future HUD administrations will be bound by statute instead of administrative regulation insofar as influence peddling and similar abuses are concerned.

The House should take great pride in the fact that the Housing Subcommittee spotted the problems at HUD early on in 1981, the first year long before the dreary story we read recently. This bill is a culmination of efforts that began in 1984 when I first raised the need to investigate widespread complaints about officials and former officials abusing the HUD programs.

H.R. 1 was marked up and reported out by the Housing Subcommittee on Thursday, November 9, 1989, by voice vote. The Housing Subcommittee recognizes the need to pass these HUD reform provisions in as expeditious a fashion as possible. Given the fact that the Congress received the Bush administration's HUD reform provisions on October 30, 1989, I believe the Housing Subcommittee has met this legislative challenge. We are now hopeful that the Senate will consider this legislation as expeditiously as the House has done.

H.R. 1 contains three titles. Title I contains reforms to the Department of Housing and Urban Development including HUD ethics, management and Federal Housing Administration [FHA] reforms.

Title I includes various provisions designed to reform practices that led to fraud and abuse at HUD including: A proposal to institute fair and open competition for Federal housing funds; a proposal to require all consultants doing business with HUD to register with the Department and to fully disclose their fees; a requirement that all regulatory waivers be published in the Federal Register; a proposal to establish a chief financial officer at HUD to oversee the financial management of programs; and proposals to restore financial soundness to the FHA mortgage insurance programs, including the termination of high-risk programs of land development and vacation homes.

Title II contains provisions relating to emergency low-income housing preservation including the extension of the prepayment moratorium until September 30, 1990, applies the prepayment requirements to the voluntary termination of insurance, prohibits prepayment of rural housing loans, and provides equity takeout incentives for new rural housing loans. We always intended that the 1987 Preservation Act was applicable to any termination of low-income occupancy use restrictions, by whatever means, including the termination of mortgage insurance, changes in the regulatory agreement or prepayment of the mortgage. We are aware that several such terminations have occurred and it is the Congress' position that they are contrary to the act. This amendment was necessary only to clarify what was intended by the passage of the original 1987 Housing Act.

Title III provides various reforms of the section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program, extends the flexible subsidy program through fiscal year 1991, extends the section 235 homeownership through fiscal year 1991, and eliminates the 3-year restriction of the availability of economic rents for public housing tenants.

The Housing Subcommittee has deleted the provisions on the Inspection General originally included in the subcommittee print of the bill. This was done to afford the committee of jurisdiction, the House Government Operations Committee, an opportunity to review the role of the Inspector General's Office in hearings it plans to hold soon. We have also clarified any concerns that the House Judiciary Committee had on provisions contained in title I of the bill. Finally, we have included the revision of the Indian CDBG Program so that this program is no longer funded through the Secretary's discretionary fund.

I ask that the House pass H.R. 1, the HUD Reform Act of 1989.

SUMMARY OF H.R. 1, THE DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT REFORM ACT OF 1989

On Thursday, November 9, 1989, the House Housing Subcommittee by voice vote reported out H.R. 1, the HUD Reform Act of 1989, which contains provisions that statutorily mandate certain reforms of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). In addition to programmatic revisions, provisions are also included such as Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program improvements and an extension until September 30, 1990, of the prepayment provisions contained in Title II, Preservation of Low Income Housing provisions of the 1987 Housing Act (P.L. 100-242).

TITLE I—REFORMS TO HUD

Subtitle A—HUD Ethics—would require HUD to allocate housing assistance on a formula basis contained in regulation taking into account (1) relative needs of States, areas and communities, (2) population, poverty, and housing conditions, and (3) program characteristics. The Subtitle would require public announcement of HUD funding decisions and housing assistance allocations, prohibit advance disclosure of funding decisions, and provide civil money penalties for any violations, would require HUD to consider low-income tax credits in calculating HUD assistance. The Subtitle would reform the HUD headquarters reserve for housing assistance, the CDBG discretionary fund, and revises the Indian CDBG Program so that it is operated through the Office of Indian Housing and no longer under the CDBG Secretary's Discretionary Fund; and defines CDBG technical assistance. HUD would be required to submit program regulations in writing and notify the public in the Federal Register of any waiver of regulations. The Subtitle would impose civil money penalties for violations due to fraudulent practices by HUD-approved mortgagees and Title I lenders, multifamily mortgagors, Sec. 202 mortgagors, GNMA mortgage-backed security issuers and for violations by land developers under the Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act. HUD consultants and lobbyists would be required to register with HUD, report fees for services rendered and would be subject to civil penalties per violation of these requirements. Program applicants would also be required to maintain records and file information annually on the use of consultants and lobbyists.

Subtitle B—HUD Management Reform—would establish a HUD Chief Financial Officer, a Federal Housing Administration (FHA) Comptroller and would expedite HUD rulemaking by changing Congressional review of rulemaking to 15 calendar days and requiring that HUD rules be published within 30 calendar days. The Subtitle would increase from 60 percent to 75 percent the percentage of Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program assistance that must be used to benefit low and moderate income persons. The Subtitle would authorize up to $25 million in FY 1991 for HUD program evaluation and monitoring and authorize HUD to refinance Sec. 235 mortgages and to use any recaptured funds for FHA monitoring. The Subtitle would provide sanctions for improper conveyances under the Sec. 810 Urban Homesteading Program and would provide modification to the HUD calculations of annual adjustments factors for Sec. 8 new construction and substantial rehabilitation rents.

Subtitle C—Federal Housing Administration (FHA) Reforms—would require HUD to have annual audited FHA financial statements, eliminate private investor-owners from the FHA Single-Family Mortgage Insurance Program, limit the insuring of secondary residences under the FHA program, require credit reviews on all FHA assumptions, and repeal the Title X Land Development Program. The Subtitle would impose civil money penalties for improper dealer and loan broker participation in originating Title I Property Improvement Loans, require HUD to notify other appropriate federal agencies and secondary mortgage market institutions when mortgagees are suspended under an FHA Insurance Program. The Subtitle would require mortgagees to maintain foreclosed FHA properties until the properties are conveyed, require HUD to report on the feasibility of making FHA foreclosed homes available to disaster victims, and require HUD to submit to Congress a report on monitoring and supervision under the FHA Direct Endorsement Program within 6 months of the enactment date.

Title II—Emergency Low Income Housing Preservation—would also (1) extend through FY 1990 the prepayment provisions contained in Title II, Preservation of Low Income Housing provisions of the 1987 Housing Act (P.L. 100-628); (2) apply the prepayment provisions of the 1987 Housing Act to the voluntary termination of insurance contracts; (3) prohibit the prepayment of Sec. 514 and 515 rural housing loans insured or made after the enactment date; and (4) authorize to guarantee loans for equity takeout for rural housing loans to avoid prepayment.

Title III—Housing Program Extensions and Changes—would (1) provide various programmatic reforms of the Sec. 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program; (2) authorize the use of excess Sec. 236 funds for the Flexible Subsidy Program; (3) extend the Sec. 235 Homeownership Program through FY 1991; and (4) eliminate the 3-year restriction on the availability of economic rents for public housing tenants.

H.R. 1—DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT REFORM ACT OF 1989

Sec. 1. Short title and table of contents.

TITLE I—REFORMS TO DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subtitle A—Ethics

Sec. 101. Fund Allocation by Formula and Competition. Amends Section 213(d)(1) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 which requires all public and Indian housing development, Section 8, Section 202, Section 235 and Section 236 assistance to be allocated through a "fair share" formula. The formula must be based on the needs of different states, areas, and communities as reflected by population, poverty, housing overcrowding, housing vacancies, substandard housing and other criteria. The Department is required to develop formulas that take into account the unique characteristics, objectives, and eligibility requirements of each program for which a formula is developed. Formula allocation requirements do not apply to assistance that the Secretary determines incapable of geographic allocation, including existing contract amendments, contract renewals, assistance to families affected by prepayment, displacement assistance, and property disposition and loan management assistance.

To the maximum extent possible, allocations must be made to the smallest practicable area. Allocations to an area that are not likely to be used in a fiscal year cannot be reallocated to another state unless the Secretary determines that other eligible areas in the same state cannot use the allocations.

Allocations to specific recipient can only be made after formula allocations and according to specific and public competition criteria. The Department is required, to the maximum extent practicable, to time funding allocations at similar times and frequencies for each fiscal year.

Sec. 102. Public notice of funding decisions. Requires all grants, loans or other assistance decisions to be published at least quarterly in the Federal Register. Notices must include the name and address of each recipient, the project or activity name, the dollar amount of assistance and the law, regulation or other criteria under which the assistance was made. Requires "fair share" allocations to be published annually. Requires documentation of the basis for decisions.

Sec. 103. Information disclosure. Prohibits applicants, their employees, and consultants from knowingly soliciting information regarding the selection process under any grant, loan guarantee, direct loan or other assistance program that requires competitive selection. Prohibits Department officials from knowingly disclosing selection information to persons other than those authorized by the Secretary. Information subject to the prohibition includes information found in any application, about the Secretary's decision, or confidential information. The prohibition does not apply to mortgage insurance or to information regarding actual program requirements or the timing when a decision will be made.

If the Secretary reasonably concludes that a violation has occurred, the Secretary may terminate the selection process involved, rescind a funding decision, impose sanctions on the violating applicant, and determine whether to permit the applicant to continue participating in the program.

The Secretary may impose a civil money penalty of up to $10,000 on Department employees who violate prohibitions. The Secretary must establish procedures for imposing penalties. Employees have an opportunity for a hearing on the record and may appeal decisions to the appropriate U.S. court of appeals.

Department employees, applicants, or consultants who wilfully violate prohibitions are subject to criminal penalties, including 5 years imprisonment, fines, or both.

Sec. 104. Consideration of Tax Credits in Awarding Housing Assistance. In calculating the amount of assistance to be provided to any housing, the Secretary must consider the extent to which tax credits are provided under Section 42 of the 1986 IRS Code.

Sec. 105. Reform Headquarters Reserve. Amends Sec. 214(d)(4) of the 1974 Act to permit up to 5 percent of assistance available for allocation under the fair share formula to be reserved for the Headquarters Reserve. Only four categories are eligible for funding under the Headquarters Reserve: unforeseen housing needs due to disasters; housing needs due to emergencies other than disasters; housing needs due to settlement of litigation; and housing to support desegregation efforts. Unused amounts must return to program budgets in the following fiscal years. Effective FY 1991 and applicable to the Indian public housing program.

Sec. 106. Reform of CDBG Discretionary Fund. Amends Sec. 107 of the 1974 Act by replacing the Discretionary Fund under CDBG with Special Purpose Grants. New Communities, Indian Tribes, and Special Project grant authority are eliminated. Special Purpose Grants may be used for territories and trusts, for correcting CDBG allocation errors, for historically Black colleges, and for technical assistance to States, local governments, Indian tribes or community planning organizations. Technical assistance is defined as facilitating the skills for planning, developing, and administering eligible CDBG activities, including assessing programs.

CDBG grantees must give public notice of the availability of technical assistance funding and establish and publish criteria for awarding technical assistance. The Secretary must award technical assistance grants according to criteria that are published together with notices of the availability of technical assistance grants. Criteria must be established in regulation.

Sec. 107. Regulation and Handbook Waivers. Requires that approval of a regulation waiver be in writing, specifying the grounds for approval. Waivers must be made by the Secretary, Assistant Secretary, or equivalent level staff authorized to issue waivers. Waivers must: be published in the Federal Register; identify the activity; describe the regulation waived; identify the official approving the waiver; describe the grounds for approval; and state how to obtain more information on the waiver. Handbook waivers must be in writing, specify the grounds for approval, and be maintained and available for public inspection for three years.

Sec. 108. Civil Money Penalties on Mortgagees and Lenders. Amends Title V of the National Housing Act to authorize the Secretary, other HUD officials, or the Mortgagee Review Board to impose civil money penalties on HUD-approved mortgagees and Title I lenders for the following violations of FHA program requirements: (1) transfers of a mortgage to a mortgagee not approved by HUD; (2) transfer of a Title I loan to a lender that does not have a valid insurance contract with HUD; (3) failure to properly segregate escrow funds and use of these funds for purposes other than that which they were received; (4) violation of any contract with HUD; (5) submission of false information, or falsely certifying, to HUD; (6) knowingly hiring an individual suspended or debarred from HUD programs; or (7) any other written program requirements.

The penalty is $5,000 per violation with a $1 million cap per violator. An opportunity is provided for an administrative hearing on the record and judicial review by a U.S. court of appeals. In certain cases, the Secretary is required to notify the Attorney General.

Sec. 109. Civil Money Penalties on Multifamily Mortgagors. The Secretary may impose civil money penalties against mortgagors of properties that have five or more living units and have mortgages insured, coinsured or held under the National Housing Act. Penalties may be imposed for violations of (A) an agreement entered into as a condition of transfer or physical assets, a flexible subsidy loan, a capital improvement loan, a modification of the mortgage terms or a work-out agreement; or (B) the regulatory agreement executed by the mortgagor. The maximum penalty for violations under (A) could not exceed the loss HUD would experience at a foreclosure sale, or a sale after foreclosure. Penalties under (B) would be capped at $25,000 for each violation. An opportunity is provided for an administrative law hearing on the record and judicial review by a U.S. court of appeals.

Sec. 110. Civil Money Penalties Against Section 202 Mortgagors. Adds a section to Title II of the Housing Act of 1959 providing civil penalties against mortgagors of Sec. 202 elderly/handicapped housing. The Secretary may impose civil penalties against mortagors who fail to use non-project income for mortgage payments, rehabilitation payments or other payments, when such payments are a condition of a change in the mortgage terms, a work-out agreement, a flexible subsidy loan, a capital improvement loan, or an agreement to transfer physical assets. The penalty may not exceed the amount of the loss the Secretary would incur at or after a foreclosure sale.

The Secretary may also impose civil money penalties for violations of the regulatory agreement. Such violations include: transferring the property without the Secretary's written approval; physically modifying or demolishing the property without the Secretary's approval; requiring tenants to deposit more than 2 months rent; failure to maintain the property, records, and other items in a condition ready for audit; failure to furnish an annual financial report within 60 days of the end of each fiscal year; and failure to make prompt payments. The penalty may not exceed $25,000 per violation. Penalties are deposited in the Sec. 202 mortgage insurance fund. A hearing on the record is provided with appeal to the appropriate U.S. court of appeals.

Sec. 111. Civil Money Penalties for GNMA Issuers. Amends Title III of the National Housing Act to authorize the Secretary to penalize GNMA mortgage-backed security issuers or GNMA custodians for the following violations: (1) failure to make timely payments; (2) failure to properly segregate cash flow from mortgages; (3) improper use of escrows; (4) transfesr of pool servicing to an issuer not approved by GNMA; (5) failure to maintain minimum net worth; (6) failure to notify GNMA of a change in business status; (7) submission of false information or false certification to GNMA; (8) knowingly hiring an individual suspended or debarred from HUD programs; (9) violation of any contract with GNMA; (10) failure to comply with any other program requirements.

Penalty is $5,000 per violation with a maximum of $1 million per violator. An opportunity is provided for an administrative hearing on the record with judicial review by a U.S. court of appeals.

Sec. 112. Civil Money Penalties for Violations of the Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act. Amends Sec. 1418 of the Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act to authorize HUD to impose civil money penalties against land developers for violations of the Act which relate to: the failure to register non-exempt subdivisisons; the failure to provide full and accurate disclosure to consumers; and the use of deception, misrepresentation, or fraud in the promotion and sale of properties. The penalities are $1,000 per violation, up to $1 million per year per violator. Provides for administrative hearing on the record and judicial review under the existing provisions of the Interstate Lands Sales Full Disclosure Act.

Sec. 113. Consultant Reforms. Adds a new section to the Dept. of HUD Act. Funding applicants must maintain records for 2 years of consultants and individuals hired to influence the Department and the fees paid for such services. Applicants must file information with the Secretary at the beginning of each calendar year. Requirements apply to expenditures over $10,000 per year. The Secretary must keep records available for inspection for 2 years and publish the information in the Federal Register after the end of the calendar year.

Any person being hired to influence any award or financial assistance must register with the Secretary within 14 days of being retained by an applicant and disclose who retained them. Consultants and lobbyists must dislose if they have been employed with the Federal Government during the prior 2 year period. Consultants and lobbyists must report fees received and expended to perform services and for what purposes if all such fees exceed $10,000 per year.

Failure on the part of applicants or consultants to abide by these provisions may result in a civil penalty of up to $10,000 per violation or the amount in fees received. Violators have an opportunity for an administrative hearing on the record and may appeal to the appropriate U.S. court of appeals.

Consultants who are fined are barred from being paid to perform services for any applicant for 3 years after receiving a penalty. Violating this provision is a felony, subject to fines and/or imprisonment for up to 5 years.

Subtitle B—Management reform

Sec. 121. Appoints a Chief Financial Officer to advise the Secretary, implement a financial management system, supervise financial operations, assist in executing the Department's budget, and issue policies regarding the financial management of the Department.

Sec. 122. Establishes the Federal Housing Administration Comptroller, responsible for overseeing the financial operations of the FHA.

Sec. 123. Expedited Rulemaking. Amends Section 7(o) congressional review procedures by changing Banking Committee review period to 15 calendar days in which to review a proposed rule before it is published. Rules could not be final until 30 calendar days after publication.

Sec. 124. Program Evaluation and Monitoring. Adds a subsection to Sec. 7 of the HUD Act to authorize $25 million for FY 1991 for evaluating and monitoring the following programs: Sec. 8 public and Indian housing, Sec. 202, Sec. 106 nonprofit sponsor assistance, Fair Housing, CDBG, Urban Homesteading, Flexibile Subsidy, Congregate Housing Services, Public Housing Childcare Grants, Fair Housing Initiatives Program, and McKinney homeless assistance.

No more than 50 percent of evaluationm authority may be used for grants, contracts or interagency agreements. Amounts not used for grants, contracts or interagency agreements must be used to increase the Department's own monitoring and evaluation abilities. In conducting evaluations, the Secretary must assess the need for additional staff and funding for evaluation and monitoring. The Secretary must report to Congress the funds used for evaluation, an analysis of the ability of the Department to evaluate and monitor programs, and a statement of any staff or funding needs.

Sec. 125. CDBG targeting. Under Sec. 104(b)(3), grantees must target 75 percent of CDBG funds to benefit low/moderate-income persons. (This is an increase from 60 percent.)

Sec. 126. Section 235 Refinancing. Authorizes HUD to insure mortgages resulting from the refinancing of Section 235 mortgages. Authorizes assistance payment contracts for refinanced mortgages. Excess recaptured funds to be used for FHA monitoring.

Sec. 127. Sanctions for Improper Conveyance under Urban Homesteading. Amends Sec. 810 of the 1974 Act to authorize the Secretary to take actions upon determining that property assisted through the urban homesteading program has been conveyed or used contrary to program requirements. The Secretary may impose a penalty not less than the profit realized from the conveyance or contrary use. The Secretary may revoke conveyance unless it is found that the owner has complied with program requirements.

Sec. 128. Section 8 Annual Adjustment Factors. In determining Sec. 8 contract rent adjustments for Sec. 8 new construction or substantial rehabilitation owners: where such rents were reduced or not adjusted upward by the application of the automatic annual adjustment factor, the Secretary shall make rental adjustments by applying the appropriate annual adjustment factor to the contract rent of the project unit, minus the debt service of the unit. This procedure applies to projects where the reductions or less than full adjustments were applied prior to the effective date of regulations to implement this section.

For annual contract adjustments after enactment, the owner may request or the Secretary may establish an annual adjustment factor for a submarket area based on a comparability study of rents charged in assisted and unassisted units of similar quality and age in the submarket area.

In the future, in projects where HUD has verified that project profits are in excess of 6 percent return on equity for an elderly project and 10 percent return on equity for a family project, the appropriate annual adjustment factor shall be applied to the contract rent of the Sec. 8 project minus debt service. Regulations shall be issued within 180 days of enactment. The plaintiffs covered by the 9th Circuit Court decision in Rainier View Associates v. the U.S. are not affected by these changes.

Subtitle C—FHA reform

Sec. 131. FHA Financial Statements. Requires HUD to prepare and make available annual audited financial statements of the FHA funds. Statements will be prepared by an independent accounting firm.

Sec. 132. Elimination of FHA Private Investors. Amends Sec. 203(g)(3) of the National Housing Act. Eliminates private investor-owners from participation in the FHA single-family insurance programs. Non-profit housing providers and state and local housing finance agencies may continue to participate. Amendment only affects mortgages insured after date of enactment.

Sec. 133. Limitation on Second Residences. Amends Sec. 203(g)(1) of the National Housing Act to limit FHA authority to insure secondary residences such as vacation homes. Permissible cases include situations where the mortgagor is required to move but is unable to sell the first home or where seasonal employment requires two residences.

Sec. 134. Credit Checks on FHA Assumptions. Amends Sec. 203(r) of the National Housing Act to require lenders to undertake a credit check of any person seeking to acquire an FHA-insured single-family property. If the assumptor takes on liability, the original mortgagor must be informed how to be released from liability. The Secretary may include a due-on-sale clause in any FHA single-family mortgage in order to accelerate mortgage payment only if the credit check is not properly undertaken.

Sec. 135. Repeals Title X land development insurance program under the National Housing Act.

Sec. 136. Civil Money Penalties in Title I Program. Sec. 2(b) of the National Housing Act is amended to authorize the Secretary to impose civil money penalties on individuals who have a financial interest in Title I home improvement loans, who assist borrowers in applying for such loans, and knowingly submit false information to lenders or the Secretary regarding such applications. Civil penalties are the same as those that apply to mortgagees and lenders under Section 118 above ($5,000 per violation up to $1 million).

Sec. 137. Notification Regarding Suspended Mortgagees. Amends Sec. 203 of the National Housing Act that upon suspending a mortgagor from a mortgage insurance program, the Secretary must notify the Veterans Administration, the Federal National Mortgage Association, The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, the Farmers Home Administration and the appropriate regulatory agency that oversees the type of financial institution suspended.

Sec. 138. FHA Foreclosed Properties. Amends Sec. 204(a) of the National Housing Act requiring mortgagees to properly maintain foreclosed FHA properties until properties are conveyed to FHA or otherwise disposed of.

Sec. 139. Report on Foreclosed Properties to Disaster Victims. The Secretaries of HUD and FmHA must study and report to Congress the feasibility of making available properties owned by the Secretaries to low-income persons whose homes in declared disaster areas were destroyed by hurricane Hugo or the Loma Prieta earthquake. The report is due within 90 days of enactment, containing conclusions and any legislative recommendations for providing the properties.

Sec. 140. FHA Direct Endorsement Report. Within 6 months of enactment, the Secretary must submit a report on the actions necessary to improve the monitoring of the FHA direct endorsement program, reduce defaults under the program, and decrease fraud in the program.

TITLE II—EMERGENCY LOW INCOME HOUSING PRESERVATION

Sec. 201. Amends Section 203(a) of Title II of the 1987 Housing Act to extend the low-income housing mortgages prepayment and preservation provisions until September 30, 1990.

Sec. 202. Amends Title II of the 1987 Housing Act to apply prepayment provisions to the voluntary termination of mortgage insurance contracts on eligible low-income housing at any time during the term of the mortgage.

Sec. 203. Amends Section 502 of the 1949 Housing Act to prohibit the prepayment of Section 514 and 515 rural housing loans insured or made after enactment of this legislation.

Sec. 204. Adds a new subsection to Section 515 of the 1949 Housing Act authorizing the Agriculture Secretary, to the extent approved in appropriations acts, to guarantee loans to owners of certain Section 515 projects for the purpose of accessing equity and maintaining projects for the intended low-income beneficiaries. Such loans can be made no sooner than the 20th year of the original 515 loan. Equity loans may not exceed the lesser of 90 percent of the appraised value of the property or 75 percent of the equity in the project. A sinking fund is established by a contribution of $2 per month for each unit which will be used to offset any rent increases that might occur as a result of the additional costs associated with the equity take-out loan.

TITLE III—HOUSING PROGRAM EXTENSIONS AND CHANGES

Sec. 301. Amends Section 8(e) of the 1937 Housing Act to reform the Moderate Rehabilitation Program. Limits assistance in any project (which may contain more than 100 units total) to 100 units or less; requires rehabilitation costs to be at least $3,000 per unit; requires HUD to take benefits from tax credits into account when determining assistance; assistance must be allocated by formula and awarded by competition; requires HUD to maintain a listing of assisted projects at Headquarters.

Sec. 302. Extends until September 30, 1991 the authority to use excess Section 236 rent charges for the Flexible Subsidy Program.

Sec. 303. Extends Section 235 homeownership assistance payments authority, insurance authority, and housing stimulus authority until September 30, 1991 and removes Section 235 program sunset.

Sec. 304. Economic Rent. Amends Section 3(a)(2) of the 1937 Housing Act to eliminate the 3-year restriction on the availability of economic rents (which are less than 30 percent of income) for public housing tenants.

Sec. 305. Indian Tribes as CDBG Entitlement Communities. Amends Sec. 102 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 to eliminate Indian tribes from the definition of nonentitlement communities. Sec. 106 is amended to reserve 1 percent of CDBG funds for allocation for Indian CFBG activities. The Indian CDBG program is revised to be administered through the Office Indian and Alaska Native Programs.

Mr. Speaker, with that I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would follow the example of the chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], and revise and extend my remarks and not get too specific as to the provisions of the bill but rather indicate my reasons as to why we need to pass this bill here this evening.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development came to us early, through Secretary Jack Kemp, who moved quickly and promptly and forthrightly to respond to the revelations of waste, fraud, and favoritism in the HUD programs.

On October 31, 1989, Secretary Kemp submitted his legislation to the House of Representatives. On November 1 I joined the distinguished chairman of our Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], and our ranking member, the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], in introducing the Secretary's legislation as House bill H.R. 3570.

Mr. Speaker, we can take pride in the bipartisan spirit in which the Banking Committee has worked to craft a good HUD reform package. Without the exemplary leadership of our committee chairman, HENRY GONZALEZ, this could not have been achieved. Through effective compromise and fair-handed discussion, the concerns of all parties, including the administration, were addressed, and the bill was quickly and successfully reported out of Committee.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation before us today, is based in large part on Secretary Kemp's reform proposal. H.R. 1 was modified by the Banking Committee to include various legislative proposals from House Members, as well as reform task forces within HUD. In addition, the Government Operations Committee will be addressing the provisions regarding HUD's inspector general, which were included in the bill as reported by the Banking Committee, but were deleted in recognition of the jurisdiction of that committee.

Two specific provisions recommended by Secretary Kemp were not included in H.R. 1: The CDBG antipoverty strategy; and the proportional counting amendment to CDBG. The committee believes that the changes proposed by the Secretary in these two cases need further consideration. Chairman GONZALEZ has stated his intention to hold hearings on these CDBG issues early next year in the context of the continuing markup of housing authorization legislation. In addition, during this markup, other issues such as section 312 property disposition also will be considered by the committee.

Several of the key provisions in H.R. 1 deserve to be highlighted. These include:

A proposal to institute fair and open competition for Federal housing funds;

Proposals to eliminate discretionary funding and require public notification of all funding decisions and housing assistance allocations;

A proposal to require all consultants doing business with HUD to register with the Department and to fully disclose their fees;

A requirement that all regulatory waivers be published in the Federal Register;

A proposal to authorize funding to support adequate evaluation and monitoring of HUD programs;

An effective compromise proposal to resolve the Ranier View dispute over section 8 contract rent adjustments;

A proposal to establish a chief financial officer at HUD to oversee the financial management of programs; and

Proposals to restore financial soundness to the FHA mortgage insurance programs, including the termination of high-risk programs of land development and vacation homes.

In addition to HUD reform, this bill includes two additional titles. Title II extends the moratorium on prepayment provision originally created in the 1987 Housing Act to September 30, 1990. That moratorium is set to expire on February 5, 1990. This extension will allow time to develop a more permanent solution through the authorization process. Title III contains several extensions to current housing programs which have already expired.

Mr. Speaker, this is a fair and workable bill addressing the systemic flaws in our housing and community development programs which have come to light in the past several months. I must say that H.R. 1 represents a determined effort to reduce the susceptibility of HUD programs to waste, fraud, abuse, and political influence. I urge consideration and passage of H.R. 1 as the significant first step in reforming HUD.

I believe that passage of this reform bill will set the stage for passage of needed comprehensive housing legislation during the second session. In this regard, I welcome the announcement last Friday by President Bush and Secretary Kemp concerning the administration's new housing initiative. This forward-looking plan for housing is called HOPE—Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere. This proposal, along with others now pending before our committee, will contribute significantly to the adoption of comprehensive housing legislation next year.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I will include in the RECORD an explanation of specific sections of the bill.

COMMENTS ON SPECIFIC SECTIONS OF H.R. 1

SEC. 101—ALLOCATION OF HOUSING ASSISTANCE

This proposal is designed to eliminate the "total discretion" and the "political" emphasis that characterized all too many of the Department's housing assistance programs in the past. Problems were first identified in the Section 8 Mod Rehab program, and in funding from the Headquarters Reserve. A competitive process with publicly articulated selection factors will help ensure a fair funding system for all HUD housing assistance programs.

SEC. 102—PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT OF FUNDING DECISIONS AND HOUSING ASSISTANCE ALLOCATIONS

The disclosure requirements in this section are designed to eliminate program funding based on political favoritism. Publishing funding decisions in the Federal Register quarterly should eliminate the possibility of "secret processes" based on "who you know."

SEC. 113—REGISTRATION OF CONSULTANTS

Would-be influence peddlers will be subject to full public scrutiny. Consultants and lobbyists doing business with HUD would have to register with the Department, and could be legally penalized for not doing so. This proposal should eliminate instances in which, for example, nontechnical consultants in the Mod Rehab program were paid $1,000 per unit to arrange funding awards in advance of public notice.

SECS. 121, 122—ESTABLISHMENT OF HUD CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER AND FHA COMPTROLLER

Recent testimony from the GAO states that "an important part of the solution to HUD/FHA's problems is to establish a Chief Financial Officer within HUD and a corresponding Comptroller within FHA." These positions would be responsible for ensuring the maintenance of sound internal control and financial management systems. As the "Robin HUD" scandal clearly illustrated, such financial controls in the past received inadequate attention.

SEC. 124—PROGRAM EVALUATION AND MONITORING

The recent revelations of program mismanagement and abuse have, among other things, identified a significant void in the management structure at HUD. Whether it occurred as a result of continual reductions in Departmental staff or neglect on the part of HUD's previous managers, or because in its struggle over the past eight years to authorize new housing programs the Congress failed to consider the additional administrative burden new programs imposed upon the Department, HUD is now fundamentally incapable of operating its programs effectively.

What this provision would do is to institutionalize program monitoring and evaluation within the Offices of Housing, Public and Indian Housing, Community Planning and Development, Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity, and Administration. Oversight entities would be established and operated through annual appropriations with an authorization of $25 million for Fiscal Year 1991. Initially, to enhance expertise within the HUD staff, outside experts could be used (just as the private firm of Price Waterhouse might support GAO). However, the intent is for HUD to develop a dependable institutional review and evaluation process, which will not happen until adequate funding for this function is provided.

SEC. 125—TARGETING OF COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT BLOCK GRANTS FOR LOW- AND MODERATE-INCOME BENEFICIARIES

This section includes the recommendation made by Secretary Kemp, which requires that at least 75 percent of the aggregate total funds under CDBG must be used to principally benefit low- and moderate-income persons. The Committee supports increased overall targeting for CDBG, as demonstrated by the 51% to 60% change made in the 1987 Housing Act.

SEC. 126—REFINANCING OF SECTION 235 MORTGAGES

The bill contains a provision for HUD to initiate a program to offer incentives for homeowners who refinance Sec. 235 FHA-insured loans. Many homes insured under Sec. 235 carry high interest rate mortgages, on which HUD pays for all interest over a certain level. HUD will realize substantial savings, therefore, if it can induce homeowners to refinance. At current market rates, the Treasury could recover an estimated $200 million by refinancing. It is expected that HUD will implement this provision in a manner that will not unnecessarily impact secondary market operations, home buyers, state pension funds, and savings and loans. The money saved from these refinancings will go directly into a fund for HUD program monitoring and evaluation.

SEC. 128—ANNUAL ADJUSTMENT FACTORS FOR SECTION 8 RENTS

Retains Rainier View 9th Circuit Court decisions:

1. First, the amendment does not interfere or modify in any way the court's decision in the Rainier View Associates v. U.S.

Retroactive Treatment:

2. With respect to the retroactive treatment and procedures, which HUD will put in place, in determining Section 8 contract rent adjustments in any year for Section 8 project owners (excluding the 9th Circuit Court Plaintiffs) where such rents were reduced or not adjusted upward by the application of the automatic annual adjustment factor the Secretary of HUD shall make such rental adjustments for such year by applying the appropriate annual adjustment factor to the contract rent of the project unit minus the debt service of the project unit. This procedure shall apply to all such projects prior to the effective date of the regulations issued to implement these changes.

Prospective Treatment:

3. With respect to the prospective treatment of annual contract rent adjustments (made after the date of enactment), the Secretary shall implement the following procedures. Either the project owner may request or HUD may establish an annual adjustment factor for a submarket area based on a comparability study of rents charged in assisted and unassisted units of similar quality and age in the submarket area.

In projects where HUD has verified that project profits are in excess of 6 percent return on equity for an elderly project and 10 percent return on equity for a family project, the appropriate annual adjustment factor shall be applied to the contract rent of the section 8 project minus debt service. In the event that the submarket comparable projects are not available, the Secretary shall be permitted to utilize the broader market annual adjustment factor. Regulations shall be issued within 180 days of enactment.

SEC. 131—ANNUAL AUDITED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

Annual audited financial statements are the most basic of all management requirements. Yet, FHA did not have annual reports from 1974 until 1989, which resulted in an absence of necessary accounting controls and reporting. Whereas FHA had claimed a $856 million loss of FY 1988, the GAO reported a $4.2 billion loss based on an audited annual financial statement. This provision will require published statements prepared by an independent accounting firm, and the newly-created position of FHA Comptroller will be accountable for the results.

SEC. 132—ELIMINATION OF PRIVATE INVESTOR-OWNERS FROM SINGLE FAMILY MORTGAGE INSURANCE PROGRAM

FHA's single family programs are designed to provide homeownership opportunities to families who will occupy their own homes. Investors are much more likely to walk away from their homes in an economic downturn, and are responsible for the majority of the fraudulent schemes in FHA programs. Investors account for only 2.5% of FHA's new policies, yet roughly 15% of the losses. In the future, private investors will be excluded from FHA insurance in homes they do not occupy. Public purpose investors, such as state and local housing finance agencies, and multi-unit structures (living in one unit and renting out the other) will still be permitted. Also, this provision is not intended to preclude model homes used by subdivision developers from being eligible for mortgage insurance. Model homes would be classified as new homes for the purpose of eligibility for mortgage insurance.

SEC. 133—LIMITATION OF SECONDARY RESIDENCES IN SINGLE FAMILY MORTGAGE INSURANCE PROGRAM

Under existing law, an FHA borrower can qualify as an "owner-occupant" for more than one home. A "secondary residence", occupied for part of the year, is eligible for an FHA loan with a 15% downpayment. This loophole allowed for high-risk investment properties used as vacation homes to be insured under FHA. This provision closes the loophole, allowing for second homes only in bona fide hardship cases.

SEC. 135—TERMINATION OF TITLE X LAND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

Of the 58 Title X Land Development projects endorsed for insurance since 1977, 25 have defaulted at an estimated loss of almost $100 million. The program was intended to help build subsdivisions, but instead went towards highly speculative residential communities with little regard for affordable housing. The program will be terminated.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I wish to first thank my distinguished colleague, the ranking minority member of the full committee, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], who has been most active on the housing front, for his kind and generous remarks.

I want the RECORD to show were it not for the leadership and total cooperation of the gentleman from Ohio so that we could work as we have successfully up to now this whole year in some of the most critical legislation that has faced this committee in its history, we could not have done it successfully if it had not been for his ability and leadership and willingness to reconcile differences and march along a mutual path of advancement.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from South Carolina [Mrs. PATTERSON], a member of the subcommittee.

Mrs. PATTERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1, the HUD Reform Act. Over the past few months, we have all been disgusted by the reports of past fraud and mismanagement in the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The waste, political favoritism, and influence peddling have harmed our ability to reach out to this country's poorest citizens.

I commend Chairman GONZALEZ and the ranking minority member, Mrs. ROUKEMA, for their leadership in taking swift action to address the need for reform at HUD. I also commend Secretary Kemp for his actions in dealing with scandals that were not of his making. He has moved swiftly to fix the things that needed fixing and to return HUD's focus to its mission.

The bill contains a number of excellent reforms. The registration of consultants, the prohibitions against inside information and the creation of a chief financial officer for HUD are significant reforms that deserve our support. They will create greater accountability in HUD and ensure that the funding goes where it belongs.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to extend my thanks to the members of the subcommittee on both sides of the aisle for their support of the provision in this bill to investigate the feasibility of using properties in the HUD inventory to alleviate the housing problems resulting from the recent natural disasters in South Carolina and California. The magnitude of the destruction from these disasters demands that we investigate every possibility of aid to those left homeless by them.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

□ 1940

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1. I commend the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ].

Mr. Speaker, on August 3, I introduced H.R. 3101, the first comprehensive HUD reform bill designed to clean up shoddy practices and prevent future abuse at the Department. I am pleased that the Housing Committee has included many of my provisions in the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989, H.R. 1, being considered today.

One such provision requires competitive bidding for assisted housing application processing. Under current law, regulation of project bidding is under the control of HUD officials, not Federal statute. Reports have indicated that in the past HUD officials have frequently bypassed these regulations in the award of projects. Federal investigators have pointed to the lax regulation of the bidding process as the source of recent Department problems regarding influence peddling.

Another adopted provision requires public disclosure of Federal housing assistance allocations. It is vital that we ensure that the HUD grants reach needed projects, and not the pocketbooks of the developers. By shedding light on the activities at HUD, we can avoid some of the shady practices of the past.

My bill suggested that the Department's discretionary fund be limited to 5 percent of annual HUD appropriations. Although not addressing discretionary funds, H.R. 1 does reform HUD headquarter reserves so that the Secretary cannot retain more than 5 percent of housing assistance for unforeseen circumstances, such as natural disasters and settlement of litigation. This ceiling on headquarter reserves reduces the potential for abuse of programs at the highest levels of HUD while giving the Secretary some latitude to cover contingencies.

My HUD reform package strictly forbids the use of HUD funds for lobbying Congress or HUD officials for housing assistance approval. Additionally, it prohibits housing assistance applicants for hiring consultants except for limited, technical purposes, Unfortunately, the HUD Reorganization Act takes a less stringent approach. It simply requires applicants who hire consultants or lobbyists to influence HUD officials to register and maintain records of services and fees. Although this is a move in the right direction, it does not eliminate the possibility of influence peddling using taxpayers' money.

As addressed in my bill, H.R. 1 also orders the Secretary to review all loans under the Section 235 Lower Income Home Ownership Program for possible refinancing. The HUD inspector general said that in 1987 this would have saved $844 million in program costs.

I am encouraged that the committee included these pieces of my reform package in their final bill. The American people expect and deserve an efficient, honest Federal housing programs that does not benefit special interests. Congress must ensure that funds go toward needed housing projects, not into the pockets of developers. The Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989 is a positive step forward.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5½ minutes to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] who had a considerable amount to do with the drafting of this legislation and seeing that we are here today.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, as the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Housing and Community Developmemt, I have been especially concerned about the "swamps" at HUD, to use Secretary Kemp's term, which have come to light over the last several months.

Again, as I have many times, I want to compliment Secretary Kemp for facing the problems squarely and providing admirable leadership to solve them. I also want to thank the chairman of our subcommittee, Mr. GONZALEZ, for his leadership and cooperation, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE] for his help.

This is a major and urgently needed package of reforms. It would not have been possible to put this kind of legislation together if we had not had dedicated people of sincere purpose on both sides of the aisle working together to frame a tough effective bill which passed our subcommittees without dissents.

The package before us now contains a great deal of what the administration requested, much of what I and other members had proposed in earlier reform bills introduced earlier. Significant portions of proposals by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KANJORSKI] are included.

Among the most egregious abuses exposed during the Government Operations investigations were:

Well-connected consultants, many of whom are former administration officials, used their influence to obtain HUD grants and benefits for their clients. Usually, these consultants collected a fat fee, as influence peddlers plain and simple. In the case of former Secretary Jim Watt, for example, he did little more than make a couple of phone calls to Sam Pierce, his former Cabinet colleague, and for that he picked up in excess of $300,000 from the developer.

Often these consultants had the advantage of insider information, not available to everyone. In the case of the section 8 Mod Rehab Program, for example, there was no formal system of determining distribution of the grants. There was not even public notice that grants were available.

And, in at least one instance uncovered, it has been alleged that Ms. Debbie Dean, the Secretary's executive assistant, passed valuable Department information along to a friend and developer outside the Department, giving that friend an unfair advantage.

These are just some of the most serious examples of loopholes in the law and mismanagement by top Department officials. This bill seeks to close those loopholes in several ways.

One of the most significant provisions requires public disclosure of consulting activities. Entities hiring consultants and the consultants themselves would have to register with the Department and disclose payments made to the consultant, contacts made with Government officials, and other pertinent information, such as consultants' names and addresses. Violations of this provision can carry either civil penalties of $10,000 per violation or a criminal penalty of up to 5 years in prison. Further, anyone violating this section would be barred from HUD-related activities for 3 years.

This legislation also requires that the Department publish in the Federal Register any time it vacates a current rule or regulation. This bill would also make illegal the advance disclosure by a Department official of any information which could benefit from the information. Again, I cite the example of Ms. Dean passing along valuable information to her friend. Such abuses occurred during the last administration, and, as I have said many times during the course of this scandal, "If such activities were not illegal, they should have been." Well, here are two good examples of where we are making it illegal. And, again, if there are violations, we provide both civil money penalties—$10,000 per violation—and criminal penalties—5 years imprisonment.

Probably all of us could agree that the financial management practices of HUD during the last administration were repleat with incompetence, mismanagement, and abuse. Perhaps most serious, there was incredible neglect of financial transactions. Hard as this is to fathom, many officials at the Department simply did not pay any attention to whether financial matters were being handled in a standard, business-like way.

Important financial transactions were left to the private sector, and, in some cases, there was no oversight or followup by Department officials. This was the height of irresponsibility, and may have involved malfeasance or conspiracy to defraud. One of the most outrageous examples involved a woman who has been dubbed "Robin HUD." She was not an employee of the Department, but was a private settlement agent under contract to dispose of FHA foreclosed properties. Well, she disposed of the properties but kept the money, calculated to be approximately $5 million. The unbelievable part of the story, however, is that no one at HUD was overseeing this, no one asked her for the money.

Therefore, one of the most important reforms was recommended first by GAO, and is one which I include in my bill. The administration endorsed it, and I am pleased to say that in this bill we create a chief financial officer at HUD.

This official will supervise and coordinate all financial management activities and operations of the Department. This will be a new watchdog position at HUD, one which will have authority and responsibility to oversee financial matters, a position of importance and with the teeth of enforcement. The chief financial officer will be responsible for all internal control systems, financial reporting systems, credit, and cash and debt management. This is simply elementary financial practice which any business would employ.

If only we had had such management over the last several years.

There are, of course, many other reforms contained in this bill, too many to list individually, but there are other management reforms and reforms of certain FHA procedures.

Now, let me be absolutely clear. I helped put this compromise package together, and I support it strongly.

However, there are three other items which I must mention and about which I am deeply disappointed.

First, I included in my reform bill several provisions to strengthen the investigative functions of inspectors general. These were designed to create in that office a vigorous watchdog and a whistleblower in the best meaning of those words. The Banking Committee included these and one or two others in this bill.

These would have:

Granted IG's subpoena power for testimony, as they now have for documents;

Required the IG to report directly to Congress if he found serious and flagrant abuses, and the Secretary failed to report to Congress;

Established an Office of Legal Counsel within IG's office;

Required the Secretary to provide Congress an "accountability report" on his actions following recommendations by the IG; and

Given the HUD IG a fixed term of 5 years in order to increase his independence.

The Inspector General Act falls under the jurisdiction of the Government Operations Committee.

I have worked closely with the members of that committee this year, especially the Employment and Housing Subcommittee, as the investigations into the scandals continued.

I had hoped that the leaders of that committee would review what we have done with respect to the IG provisions, and would conclude that they are reasonable, and, therefore, they would not insist on their jurisdictional prerogative.

Unfortunately, that is not the case, and these very important provisions related to the IG have been dropped out of the bill.

From my communications with the Government Operations Committee, I understand that this does not necessarily reflect any substantive opposition to any of the provisions. Rather, this action is strictly the result of committee jurisdiction.

Further, I am informed that the Committee on Government Operations intends to hold hearings on these and other IG issues early in the spring.

Removing the IG powers greatly diminishes the effectiveness and impact of these reforms. This is a major omission. Unless there is immediate action by the Committee on Government Operations, the IG's will be hampered in their efforts to uncover mismanagement and wrong-doing.

However, I do understand the committee system, and I look forward to working with the members of the Government Operations Committee in the near future on these matters.

Second, this bill contains a section increasing the CDBG targeting from 60 to 75 percent. This will cause significant difficulty for many communities in my district, many of which would have to radically change the kinds of projects they are planning in order to try to comply. This really is not a reform proposal in the first place, and should not even be in this bill. I hope to work with others to see if some type of compromise can be reached at some point.

Third and last, current law provides a de facto moratorium on the prepayment of certain mortgages under the 236 and 221(d)(3) programs. This moratorium is due to expire February 5, 1990. I do not like the moratorium. We need to find some type of permanent solution to entice the owners of these projects to retain them for low-income use.

However, the committee really had no choice but to extend the moratorium for 9 months to give us time to work out that permanent solution. Clearly, we could have not have simply let the moratorium expire; that would have raised the possibility of thousands of elderly, low-income families, and women and children being displaced and evicted from their homes.

While we have not solved the problem yet, this extension will not give us time to work on the permanent solution we all seek.

In summary, Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill. It represents significant reforms; and they should be important additions to the arsenal of powers Secretary Kemp needs. I strongly support passage and urge my colleagues to vote for this urgently needed bill.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, for his leadership, and working together with the ranking minority member on what is a very important piece of legislation.

We ought to, once again, remind ourselves that just because something is not controversial does not make it unimportant. This legislation, which is going to pass apparently with little opposition, since almost every Member I see on the floor here is waiting to claim credit for the bill, so I do not think there is any Member here who will object to it, and justly, since a lot of people worked together for it. It is a very important bill.

We have, sometimes, been criticized for lack of followthrough. In this case, we are seeing very important followthrough. The subcommittee under the Committee on Government Operations, the Subcommittee on Employment and Housing, working in conjunction with members of the Subcommittee on Housing and Community Development, had a very good bipartisan set of hearings about problems with HUD. Some of those problems are the result of individual failings, and Members cannot legislate against there being people who do not do their job well for lack of personal commitment. In other cases, the hearings showed that there were structural problems.

What we have today is a piece of legislation which came in part from the information developed in the hearings. It was jointly produced by the Secretary, by Republican and Democrat members of the subcommittee, and with the exception of the Inspector General, as the gentleman from New Jersey mentioned, and we believe those will be in a subsequent bill to be passed next spring that had to be left out because we have jurisdictional sharing here with the Committee on Government Operations, I am not aware of any idea for reform that was not incorporated in this bill. That is, we now have given the Secretary, I believe, everything he has asked for, everything that has been thought of. In fact, we have reached a point where some of those who may be governed by this are nervous.

That is one thing I want to mention. I was visited today by some who managed housing for HUD, and I want to pay tribute to the great majority of people who managed housing for HUD.

They are decent and reasonable. There are a minority who abuse things. There was some fear on their part that the broad powers that we give the Secretary in this bill to find people in a civil proceeding might be abused.

Mr. Speaker, I have spoken to the chairman, and I have spoken to the ranking minority member, and I think I speak for all of us when I say that we did not give these powers with any intention that they be used cavalierly. We believed that the Secretary will use them in a judicious fashion, and we also, I would hope, would have some hearings so that we could make clear with the Secretary and with those who are going to be regulated that we expect this to be done in a fair way.

So, I think we want to reassure people that this is not going to be used punitively.

The next point to make is a very important one. This is part of the housing bill. This is a compromise which says to the Secretary, "Yes, we will give you the reform pieces now, but we need to do more on the constructive side in terms of getting housing," and again I think all of us agree, the chairman, and I was pleased to hear the ranking minority member of the subcommittee allude to the need for further legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this is only the first step, and we will have failed our obligations if we do not follow this up with a more comprehensive bill that does the program.

We were told that we could not expect simply to have visits as usual. We, I think, are meeting our obligation here. We are putting through a very tough reform bill. It is not controversial, but that is because frankly a good job was done of putting this together in a consensus way.

Mr. Speaker, it is a tough bill. Having passed this, I think we will have the right to come before our colleagues again and say that we have made HUD more efficient. We have protected the taxpayer. Now please cooperate with us as we try to build more housing for people who need it.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield an additional minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman fom Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], the minority member.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I want to say that I think the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] made a very significant statement. Apartment owners and HUD managers also came to me today, and they were quite apprehensive about the civil money penalty provisions in this bill in that we do get rather specific in some cases, and they were very apprehensive that HUD might examine some of the operations with minutia which might cause them some apprehensions as far as what could happen as far as imposing civil money penalties and so forth.

So, Mr. Speaker, I think that we do want to be sure that that does not happen, and, as I say, I think the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] made a statement that ought to be pointed out.

Mr. FRANK. Make it very clear. One, the bill gives these powers, not to minor functionaries, but to the Secretary, and that is some assurance. Two, Jack Kemp is not known, I think, as one whose life's mission is to lay waste to private enterprise. We have put these in the hands of Jack Kemp. We have a subcommttee to supervise, and I do not think people need to have those fears.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER].

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to state my concerns regarding a particular provision of H.R. 1 relative to the Community Development Block Grant [CDBG] Program. While I, in general, strongly support the Kemp reform package for HUD which is, for the most part, incorporated in H.R. 1, I have serious reservations about that part of their legislation which involves the CDBG Program.

I would like to commend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], the chairman, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], the ranking member, and the ranking member of the subcommittee and others who have crafted this legislation specifically to respond to the requests from Secretary Kemp to give him this reform legislation to help him bring order and improvement to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, and particularly to the chairman I would say, "Knowing some of the pressures that undoubtedly came on you to delay this or to put it a part of the overall comprehensive legislation, I am particularly grateful for your initiative."

This provision to which I object provides for the increase of CDBG targeting from the current 60 percent to 75 percent for low- and moderate-income individuals; that is a programmatic change and not a reform like the other provisions. I cosponsored the Secretary's reform package as introduced by Representative WYLIE (H.R. 3570) with the understanding that I would support any attempts to omit these CDBG changes from the measure.

On November 9, 1989, the House Banking Subcommittee on Housing and Community Development completed the markup of H.R. 1 which is now before this body. The bill as marked up includes a section which provides for the increase of CDBG targeting from the current 60 percent to 75 percent for low- and moderate-income individuals. Again, I expressed my opposition to the subcommittee with regard to this provision in H.R. 1 and indicated my further intentions to offer an amendment to delete this section during the full committee markup. However, the subcommittee took the unusual step of advancing the bill to the House floor without a full committee markup, which in turn preclude my efforts to offer such an amendment.

The CDBG Program since its inception was intended to develop viable communities by providing housing, economic opportunity, and quality living environments. It was developed to be flexible while primarily assisting low- to moderate-income people. It was developed to provide area as well as direct benefit.

The program is intended to meet the needs of the community but weighted to provide low- and moderate-income benefit. However, raising the low-moderate benefit requirement would make the qualification of CDBG projects more difficult to achieve, especially in smaller rural communities.

While HUD's Small Cities Programs involve communities with populations under 50,000, in my State of Nebraska it is in large part much smaller cities and villages that also benefit from CDBG grants. In Nebraska in 1989, Nebraska received 82 applications requesting approximately $15.1 million. Of this total, $9.6 million in CDBG awards were made to 48 Nebraska communities. Twenty-four of these grants were awarded to communities in Nebraska with populations under 1,000. Of these 24 grants, 19 of them were made to communities with populations under 500. The smaller population base of these small communities means that they have less of an opportunity to meet the income targets for low- and moderate-income people. These very small rural communities will be unduly hurt by the increase in the low-moderate benefit requirement.

Now, I would like to engage the chairman and ranking minority member of the Banking Committee in a colloquy if they are willing.

Under section 104(b)(3) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, provision is made for an exception to the low-moderate benefit requirement concerning urgent community needs in relation to existing conditions which pose a serious and immediate threat to the health or welfare of the community. In Nebraska over the last several years, a significant number of the CDBG awards were granted to small communities experiencing serious and immediate problems because of the pollution of their municipal water wells with dangerous levels of nitrates and carbon tetrachloride. Now, the question: I would ask the chairman of the Banking Committee and the ranking minority member of the House Banking Committee that, notwithstanding the increase in the low-moderate benefit requirement from 60 percent to 75 percent, would section 104(b)(3) still apply so as to provide an exception for these communities whose current water systems pose a serious and immediate threat to the health or welfare of the community for the reasons I've given or for other life-threatening conditions that municipalities might face?

Perhaps exercising undue caution, but nevertheless having a concern that relates to my own State, under section 104(b)(3) of the Housing and Development Community Act of 1974, as amended, provision is made for exception to low moderate benefit requirement concerning urgent community needs in relation to existing condition which poses serious and immediate threat to the health or welfare of the community. In my State over the last several years a significant number of the CDBG awards granted to small comunities experiencing serious and immediate problems because of the pollution of their municipal water wells with dangerous levels of nitrates and carbontetrachloride.

Mr. Speaker, the question I would ask the chairman of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], the ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs is that notwithstanding the increase in the low moderate benefit requirements from 60 to 75 percent, would section 104(b)(3) still apply so as to provide an exception for these communities whose current water systems pose a serious and immediate threat to the health or welfare of the community for the reasons I have given or for other life-threatening conditions municipalities might face?

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEREUTER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER] is correct. This change will not affect an individual community's ability to use CDBG for urgently needed projects. It will require, as the gentleman stated, the State to meet the 75 percent targeting requirement in the aggregate of all of its funds, but the gentleman is correct in his conclusions and interpretation.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] for that reassurance.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEREUTER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I would say to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER] that I believe he is correct also. Section 104(b)(3), as contained in title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, will continue to permit CDBG funds to be used in meeting urgent community needs as described by the gentleman, and the modifications made by H.R. 1 do not in my opinion affect this authority.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I note the response of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], the chairman, is that the aggregate requirement will still apply to the State for its communities, and that will create some additional problems that I am concerned about, but I appreciate the responses of both the gentlemen from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE].

I ask my colleagues to carefully consider the impact that this provision of H.R. 1 will have on our Nation's rural communities that are still struggling to survive. The economic boom in our country has not been felt by the majority of small communities in nonmetropolitan areas. Most rural areas have not seen their fortunes improve as a result of the rising economic tide. We must begin to work together to revitalize our small communities and rural America. We should not pull the rug out from under our rural communities by further burdening them with this change in the CDBG Program.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] who has had a separate package of reform and has been one of those who has been a main instrumentality in forging what we have today.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] for his unrelenting and persevering leadership on this issue. I also want to thank the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], the ranking minority member, for his concern and the many people who worked on this package of reform in this House.

Mr. Speaker, I worked closely with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK], the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MORRISON], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KANJORSKI], as well as the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], and it is an excellent bipartisan effort.

What we did I think, Mr. Speaker, is very simple. We looked at what was the matter with HUD. We put together some of the reform package that some of us had introduced early on. Much of that reform package was reintroduced by the Secretary and modified some and took what we thought was the best parts of his package, added to it, deleted some of the policy suggestions from it, and I think this is an effort that is both bipartisan in terms of Democrat and Republican, as well as between the Congress and the executive branch, and it will go a long way.

Mr. Speaker, today is an eventful day. I sat through months and months of hearings and was appalled by what went on at HUD. Today begins the challenge of turning the ugly duckling known as the Department of Housing and Urban Development into, if not a beautiful swan, at least an efficient, accountable Federal agency. Having sat through the hearings of the Committee on Government Operations, which I must say were run superbly by the gentleman from California [Mr. LANTOS], the chairman, and many of the Members; I see the gentleman from Connecticut here who made such an outstanding contribution in those hearings, and I can assure this panel that there is much to do.

The picture of HUD during these hearings was an ugly one full of black and blue colors that depicts an American public beaten up by a shocking combination of negligence, greed, and unchecked corruption. Emerging from this rubble will require serious and thorough reform.

HUD is an agency that needs particular scrutiny. It is not like any other agency for a number of reasons. First, because very few of the housing programs, if any, are entitlements. There is tremendous discretion. We cannot avoid it. We would like to build 202's or section 8's in every little town in the country for every person who needs it. We do not have the money, so there is a lot of discretion. At the same time, the winner of each contract gets tremendous profit. That is reasonable, although this bill cuts back on it because they may get lost, and if we are going to ask someone in private enterprise to risk loss, then of course we have to give them some chance of profit.

□ 2000

But to put those two combinations together, discretion, a lot of money to be made, and you are looking for problems. This bill recognizes that. It says there may well be problems.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BILBRAY). The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] has expired.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield an additional 30 seconds to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. I guess I will have to sum up before I put in my written remarks here. I will put my entire statement in the RECORD after these remarks.

I guess what I would say, Mr. Speaker, is that we have pulled back the rug at HUD and discovered the grime underneath. After disposing of this mess, we must remove the rug itself, return the shine to the original foundation.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is just a beginning. We can reform HUD. Our next step must be to implement the kind of programs that bring housing in an uncorrupt and decent way to the people of this country.

Accountability must be restored at HUD. Last summer, I offered legislation to establish the safeguards that have so obviously been lacking. The bipartisan HUD reform package which is now before us includes many of these reforms.

Elements of my HUD reform bill which are now part of the bipartisan reform package include:

The prohibition of disclosure of insider information. Under this reform, HUD employees and officials would be prohibited from disclosing, and applicants and consultants would be banned from soliciting or obtaining, insider information in a HUD selection process.

This bill also includes the requirement that all consultants on HUD-related work disclose their involvement in HUD projects and their corresponding fees and profits, a provision which both Congressman KANJORSKI and myself proposed as well as Secretary Kemp.

Further, to eliminate the freewheeling award procedures that dominated the Pierce era, both Secretary Kemp and I have proposed that HUD be required to establish and adhere to standard criteria when making any fund selection decisions.

In addition, this legislation includes a requirement from my HUD reform bill that HUD provide documentation for every fund selection decision made in every HUD program.

This bill also includes several provisions, which I proposed, designed to cleanup the mess at FHA and restore FHA's financial health.

Finally, to ensure both efficient use of Federal dollars and defend against inflated costs, I proposed, and this bill includes, the requirement that proceeds from the low-income housing tax credit syndication be considered by HUD in awarding all HUD funds.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHAYS], a very active and effective participant in the hearings in the Employment and Housing Subcommittee of the Committee on Government Operations.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1, the Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989.

I also rise to congratulate the Members of the Subcommittee on Housing and Community Development of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs for bringing this bill forward so quickly. It has been 6 months since the Employment and Housing Subcommittee began its investigation of HUD, 20 hearings and 50 witnesses. We found problems everywhere we looked.

H.R. 1 begins to address many of these problems.

I am grateful for the bipartisan effort to clean up HUD and for the cooperation that exists between committees within the Congress, particularly the Government Operations Committee and the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, and also the cooperation that existed between Congress and the administration.

I am particularly grateful for the assistance we received from Secretary Jack Kemp. H.R. 1 may be just the beginning, but what a great beginning. I have nothing but admiration for those who brought it forward.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KANJORSKI].

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend our distinguished chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ]; the ranking minority member of the Housing Subcommittee, the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA]; the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER]; the gentleman from Massachusetts, the chairman of the Administrative Law Subcommittee [Mr. FRANK]; and the majority and minority staffs for their excellent work on the HUD reform bill, H.R. 1, in general, and the consultant disclosure section in particular.

As you are aware, I have taken a special interest in consultant disclosure ever since I first suggested to Secretary Kemp at the Housing Subcommittee's July 12, 1989, hearing that we needed a system to rack the activities of consultants, and to detect and deter actual influence peddling.

On August 4, 1989, I introduced the Consultant Disclosure and Fraud Prevention Act of 1989, H.R. 3145, comprehensive legislation to curb influence peddling at all Federal agencies.

On September 6, 1989, Whitney North Seymour, the independent counsel in the Mike Deaver case, issued a blistering attack on executive branch lobbying and called on the Congress to enact consulting disclosure requirements virtually identical to those in H.R. 3145. Seymour's report concluded, "The single most important result that could come out of the Deaver case would be enactment of legislation to require the disclosure of all high-fee lobbying contracts aimed at the Executive Branch." He further pointed out that, "The Congress of the United States is the only force that can effectively cry 'enough' to the unbridled lobbying of the Executive Branch of the Federal Government."

Today, the full House of Representatives acts to correct that abuse, and to close that loophole. The days of "Dialing for Dollars" at HUD will finally come to an end. The legislation we are considering is a mixture of the best parts of my bill, H.R. 3145, additional bills subsequently introduced by other Members, and the recommendations of the independent counsel.

When enacted into law it will put an end to the belief that at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, "Money talks, and merit walks."

Since the need to enact this high-priority legislation quickly has precluded the issuance of a full committee report on the HUD reform bill, I would like to establish legislative history, and the intent of the committee in adopting this section of H.R. 1, by reiterating several points made during the original markup of this legislation.

First, this legislation requires reporting not only by first-degree consultants who exceed the $10,000 threshold, but also by second-degree consultants who exceed the $10,000 threshold, that is, consultants to consultants. For example, if an applicant hires consultant A, and consultant A hires consultant B, both A and B have to file under this legislation if they meet the other requirements of the section.

Second, this legislation covers indirect, as well as direct efforts to influence the decisionmaking process at HUD. If, for example, an applicant hires a consultant and that consultant meets the other requirements of this section but uses an unpaid third party such as a political official to lobby HUD, the consultant is still required to file even though the consultant did not directly contact HUD.

Third, this legislation is designed to cover all forms of contact with HUD regardless of whether they are in person, over the phone, by letter, telegram, mailgram, or other form of electronic communication.

Fourth, the legislation requires that in addition to being published annually in the Federal Register, the information filed under this act with the Secretary is considered to be public information, available to the press and the public under the Freedom of Information Act.

As this legislation continues to work its way through the legislative process, I will be glad to work on a bipartisan basis with other members to refine the language of this section and to clarify the intent of the Congress.

Once again, I want to thank the chairman, Mr. WYLIE, Mrs. ROUKEMA, Mr. SCHUMER, and Mr. FRANK, and the majority and minority staff for their excellent work in this area. This important section of the HUD reform bill shows what bipartisan cooperation among the members of the committee, and with the administration, can accomplish.

Mr. Speaker, the former HUD officials who have been so prominent at the Government Operations Committee's hearings have disgraced their names and their positions by their unscrupulous, money-grubbing, influence-peddling activities. They succeeded in shifting Federal funds from the needy to the greedy. Today, we take the first step toward putting these funds back where they belong.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA.].

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1 and to take the opportunity to discuss a number of provisions in the bill which are budget concerns.

I want to state clearly that H.R. 1 is a priority legislative item which deserves strong support. This legislation represents the necessary action by the Congress to ensure that we do not have a repeat of the HUD scandals. However, this legislation must be further supported by the clear and total commitment by the President and the Congress to make sure that our scarce low-income housing dollars are carefully spent.

The provisions which raise budget policy concerns include the refinancing of section 235 loans, the elimination of investors from the FHA mortgage programs, and the provision providing for changes in the annual adjustment factors for section 8 rents.

The refinancing of the section 235 loans is clearly meant to save the Federal Government moneys but this bill would use some $30 million in recaptured funds for program monitoring whereas the just-enacted VA-HUD appropriations bill would rescind these funds. There are ways to resolve the differences in these two positions so that no budget concerns were inolved.

The provision to eliminate investors from the FHA mortage programs results in a CBO estimated loss of $14 million from lower FHA premiums in 1990. While I am concerned about the loss of premiums in the current fiscal year, I do support the intent of the legislation which will yield savings and improve the FHA programs.

The provision that adjusts the annual section 8 rental adjustments reflects a recently decided Federal court decision in the ninth circuit court, the Rainer View housing project case. The bill extrapolates this decision on a national basis and intends to reduce Federal expenditures by changing the methodology for rent adjustments to more clearly reflect true inflation costs. However, the budget resolution baseline did not assume the settlement of this court case nor did it reflect the potential national costs involved. While on a technical basis this provision could be viewed as new spending not assumed in the budget resolution, the costs would be greater if this change were not made.

Again, I believe that the concerns raised by these provisions can be effectively addressed at a later stage in the legislative process, and I believe that when this legislation is enacted it will address these concerns appropriately.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes of my time to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ].

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to yield time out of this additional 5 minutes that the gentleman from Ohio has yielded to me.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in reluctant support of this legislation, H.R. 1, that will provide for necessary statutory reforms at the Department of Housing and Urban Development and for an extension of the moratorium on the conversion of subsidized housing through September 30, 1990.

My support for a cleanup of the incredible abuses at HUD should be self-evident. As a Member, who for 8 years worked for the often thwarted quest for decent affordable housing for all Americans during the previous administration, it is fair to say, that I and others have been both angered and astonished by the outrageous actions of HUD personnel, and the private sector abuse of HUD programs. Within 20/20 hindsight, it appears that for the past 8 years, HUD political appointees functioned as facilitators in reality reverse Robin Hoods; robbing from the poor to give to the rich.

However, I am disappointed that the compromise worked out last week precluded the retention most housing programs needs. Where is the rest of H.R. 1? Where is the beef, the laws for new policy that was the core of H.R. 1? Apparently the reason that this measure is H.R. 1 has been lost to reform enthusiasm, the headstrong rush to be in favor of HUD reform. I am disappointed that in our haste to accommodate the Secretary of HUD in his October 29, 1989 request for reform legislation, the committee has overlooked our overall responsibility to examine and improve our housing programs, and deferred on our obligation to authorize these programs for the coming fiscal year. We have left almost all the important Housing programs behind.

Mr. Speaker, despite my serious concerns regarding timing, and omissions HUD reform is needed some now, more tomorrow. This proposal will redirect the allocation of housing assistance on a formula basis and focus sunshine on HUD funding decisions by requiring public announcements of allocations. This measure will impose a number of reforms on the use of consultants, including registration and civil money penalties for violations of requirements. It established a Chief Financial Officer and a Federal Housing Administration [FHA] Comptroller to focus on fiscal soundness. Program evaluation and monitoring will occur through a specific $25 million authorization in 1991 for those purposes.

Additionally, the bill will increase the community development block grant [CDBG] low- to moderate-income targeting requirement from 60 percent to 70 percent of funding. It provides programmatic reforms of the section 8 moderate rehabilitation program along with extending through fiscal year 1990 the incentives for low-income housing preservation that were approved in the 1987 Housing Act to address the prepayment issue. These reforms are good as far as they go, but the best laws and rules will not work if the Presidential appointees spurn them. The current administration appointees deserve our support.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this bill while at the same time hope that they will keep in mind the original and remaining unmet need the real spirit of H.R. 1 introduced as the first bill of the 101st Congress. This need for housing must once again wait. While the House rightly thumps it chest in reform of HUD but says thumbs down to housing for those with need in 1989. The poor have paid the most in the past because of these HUD abuses. I only hope that these reforms today smooth the path for good housing policy tomorrow.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE].

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the chairman and the subcommittee for their work on this reform package, and having sat on the Employment and Housing Subcommittee for many hearings, I know what they are up against.

I am hoping this will help redirect housing funds to the people who desperately need them. Low-income citizens should not have to depend upon high-income consultants for their housing.

Mr. Speaker, there is an issue I would like to explore further with the chairman as he works on the reauthorization bill next session. I am concerned, because there are rural areas such as in West Virginia rural areas with a population under 50,000 that are not receiving adequate housing assistance, particularly under the fair-share formula. HUD does not target these areas, and in many cases neither does Farmers Home. Farmers Home regulations allow them to target only areas basically under 10,000, sometimes between 10,000 and 20,000, but there is a large crack that develops in areas between 20,000 and 50,000.

There are many people in rural areas, either homeless or living in substandard conditions, caught in these 20,000 to 50,000 areas, and I look forward to working with the chairman in the next session to correct this.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the remainder of my time.

Mr. Speaker, the administration has just sent word that it strongly supports the passage of this bill and says H.R. 1 represents a serious effort to make the Department of Housing and Urban Development [HUD] less susceptible to waste, fraud, abuse, and political influence.

The administration does have some concerns about H.R. 1 which I mentioned a little earlier during debate. However, the administration feels that this is a good, comprehensive package and will restore ethical integrity to HUD's program.

H.R. 1 includes most of the ehtics reforms proposed by the administration. Accordingly, the administration strongly supports provisions to institute fair and open competition in the allocation of housing funds, stringent limitations on the use of discretionary funds by HUD, public notification of funding decisions, and strict disclosure requirements for consultants doing business with the Department.

In addition, H.R. 1 contains civil money penalties requested by the administration.

We have an excellent bipartisan bill which I urge all Members to support.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1, the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989 and I thank the distinguished Banking Committee chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], the Ranking Republican member from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], as well as the gentlelady from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], for their diligent efforts to bring this legislation before Congress.

Mr. Speaker, it continues to be my belief that one of the most pressing issues facing our great Nation today is the matter of affordable housing. If our Nation is to live up to its potential for greatness, all Americans must believe that they are shareholders in the American dream of one day being able to own a home.

However, today too many Americans find home ownership virtually an impossible dream. The lack of decent, safe, affordable housing has become so pronounced in some regions of the country, as in my own 22d Congressional District, that many people despair that they will never have a home that they can call their own.

For this reason, I am a strong supporter for H.R. 1, which will provide reform initiatives to govern the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

This legislation will provide many welcome initiatives which Secretary Kemp has requested in his attempt to clean up the special interest influence which currently plagues HUD and its programs.

Mr. Speaker, throughout the past year we have heard much discussion with regard to HUD's past mismanagement and conduct. However, today we have a chance to vote for this reform legislation in order to enhance the continuation of the American dream and I would like to commend the Secretary for his continuing efforts to win the war against homelessness and affordable housing.

Mr. Speaker, Secretary Kemp and H.R. 1 provide the support needed to have the administration to establish a policy enhancing decent, affordable housing for the people of the United States. We cannot afford to let an essential ingredient to the American dream—permanent homeownership—remain only a dream and not a reality. For this reason, I urge my collegues to support H.R. 1.

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1, and I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this important reform legislation.

I particularly want to congratulate Secretary Jack Kemp for his dedication to restoring integrity to HUD and placing it above reproach. I am sure that his first 10 months at HUD have seen him focus on a different agenda than he had planned. But internal reforms must be made before new authorizations and reauthorizations take place. It would make no sense to authorize more of the same without knowing what works and what doesn't; where fraud and abuse is and where it isn't.

At the same time, we must recognize that the goal of creating more affordable housing alternatives for the American people is both a challenge and a goal that must be addressed upon completion of this reform package.

Mr. Speaker, over the last two decades, American taxpayers from coast to coast, border to border, have paid taxes to help house families who could not afford decent shelter otherwise; to help rebuild communities and neighborhoods that were slowly crumbling away; and to help expand homeownership opportunities to all who were willing to work toward that dream. But instead of helping people at the end of the line, many of those tax dollars went to pad the bottom lines of unscrupulous developers, investors, and consultants.

Our job today, then, is to restore the confidence of the public by closing the doors of unethical influence peddlers and opening the door, again, for those who need our help.

The legislative package before us contains over 50 specific legislative changes that replace business as usual with good business practices. Under this reform package, our housing and community development dollars will be allocated using formulas that determine what people need rather than who people know. The bill establishes strict standards of conduct for people working at HUD and for people outside the Government who want to influence them. H.R. 1 enacts civil penalties—and in some cases criminal penalties—to punish misconduct and to deter those who are tempted to challenge these reforms. The bill tightens evaluation and monitoring procedures for all of HUD's programs and restores control and accountability to the FHA insurance fund.

In short, the HUD reform package barricades the avenues to abuse that have been traveled far too often by too many people in past years, and lays the groundwork for a new direction for housing in the years ahead.

There are one or two provisions in the bill that concern me, however, and I would be remiss if I did not mention one here—the change in the Community Development Block Grant Program. The CDBG Program has not been the subject of any scandal, reports of abuse, or any rumor of either. Indeed, by allowing the States and local governments the flexibility to use these funds in ways best suited to their communities, the CDBG Program has been the source of some great successes.

Mr. Speaker, I think we all want to help those who most need our assistance, but by further restricting the targetting provisions, I am concerned that many smaller entitlement cities and nonentitlement communities will have difficulty qualifying for CDBG funds. As a result, some extraordinarily good projects may be left at the wayside, and that troubles me.

I should also note that Secretary Kemp would like to refocus the CDBG Program into strictly a poverty-fighting program. As I believe this would be a significant change in thrust for CDBG's, I am pleased that the committee left that question for next year when we consider comprehensive housing legislation. This will give us the opportunity for hearings and more analysis.

Mr. Speaker, a fine and dedicated group of people were mobilized and motivated to bring this reform package to fruition. Secretary Kemp and the honest, hardworking people at HUD—at all levels—deserve our thanks for their candor, recommendations, and desire to solve HUD's problems swiftly and surely. The chairman of the Housing Subcommittee and the full Banking Committee, our esteemed ranking members, and indeed the members of the subcommittee from both sides of the aisle should be congratulated for their firm, quick, bipartisan action to ensure the passage of a reform bill this session.

But let me save my last works for those who, by their inexcusable actions, made H.R. 1 necessary.

Today we seek to arm Secretary Kemp and all future Secretaries with the resources they need to ensure that such arrogant abuses are no longer expensive for the American taxpayer—but become very expensive indeed to those who think they stand above the law and the will of the people.

And I strongly recommend that anyone who believes that HUD reform is a passing fancy listen carefully to what we say here and to the message this bill sends: What once happened behind the scenes will now be displayed in the full, bright glare of public disclosure. What used to be met with winks and nods will now be met with fines and incarceration. The American public will not tolerate the abuse of their trust. And waste, fraud, and abuse at any level, to any degree, and by anybody will draw the full weight of the law. Consider this fair warning.

Mr. PRICE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 1, a bill to reform the Department of Housing and Urban Development [HUD]. This is the first step toward ensuring that our housing programs begin to work once again for the homeless, the ill-housed, and those aspiring to homeownership, rather than for bureaucratic wheeler-dealers, lobbyists, and political insiders.

I want to compliment the chairman of the Housing Subcommittee, HENRY GONZALEZ, and the ranking Republican, MARGE ROUKEMA, for working to build a consensus on these important reforms. Secretary Kemp proposed some very important initiatives, and the House Banking Committee has, in my view, improved on these in major ways.

This bill is only part of the solution; many of the necessary reforms at HUD can only be accomplished administratively. This scandal for the most part is a failure of administration, not a lack of legislative authority, and the most critical task facing Congress in the future is aggressive oversight of HUD. No matter how committed Secretary Kemp is, he still has to overcome the perception of favoritism created in past years and the weak management structure left by the past administration, which bears direct responsibility for this outrage.

The bill today proposes many critical reforms. It will open up the selection process at HUD to public scrutiny. Assistance will have to be allocated on the basis of fair share rather than on whom you know. And the insider trading of information regarding selection decisions will be stopped.

H.R. 1 will also allow the Secretary of HUD to assess civil money penalties on lenders and mortgagees who violate the FHA program requirements, on mortgagors who have mortgages insured or coinsured under the National Housing Act, and on Ginnie Mae mortgage-backed security issuers. It strengthens the Office of Inspector General in HUD so that the IG has more independence and is less subject to the whims and fancies of the HUD Secretary.

Because of the leadership of Mr. Kemp and our colleague, CHUCK SCHUMER, the bill also makes some important changes in the FHA program. It requires HUD to prepare and make available annual audited financial statements of FHA funds. It requires lenders to undertake a credit check of any person seeking to acquire an FHA-insured single-family property. And it eliminates private investor-owners from participating in the FHA single-family insurance programs. These reforms, I believe, will go a long way toward ensuring the continued viability of the FHA program which is so critical to first-time homebuyers. With these reforms in place, I hope we can make changes in the next session of Congress to make the program even more responsive to the needs of first-time homebuyers.

The reforms today are a first step toward ensuring that HUD plays a constructive role in our Nation's housing policy. In the next session, we must focus our attention on a new and innovative housing policy which responds to the need of the homeless, the near-homeless, and first-time homebuyers.

I was glad to see the President finally recognize the housing problems facing our country. His speech last week finally acknowledged that something needs to be done.

There were several features of the Bush plan that particularly caught my eye. He touted an IRA proposal, which House Democrats had already proposed, and Mr. Bush helped to defeat. And he tied the fate of the low-income housing tax credit to the passage of capital gains tax cuts. It is unfortunate that in his quest for his own pet tax break, he would be willing to sacrifice a popular bipartisan incentive for the creation of housing. President Bush does have some promising initiatives like grants to increase homeownership opportunities for low-income families and increased assistance for the long-term homeless, who are not adequately served by the current homeless programs. But in general his program is lacking in vision and commitment and it will be up to Congress to find cost-effective and fair solutions to the housing problems we face.

I ask my colleagues to support the reform package before us today. It is necessary if we are to ensure that HUD once again serves the people it was intended to serve rather than those with big-time political connections and insatiable appetities for consulting fees and tax writeoffs. And this reform bill will lay the foundation for our future efforts to address our Nation's housing needs.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of H.R. 1, the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989. I commend Secretary Kemp, and the distinguished chairman and ranking minority member of the Housing Subcommittee, Mr. GONZALEZ and Mr. WYLIE, for their work on this vital legislation.

It is imperative that this reform package is approved before adjournment. H.R. 1 will help to prevent any future abuse of HUD program funding, and will also go a long way toward raising the morale of the HUD employees who have made, and continue to make substantial contributions to meeting our Nation's housing needs.

The bill includes provisions to institute fair and open competition for Federal housing funds, and to require public notification of all funding decisions. The legislation would require full disclosure and registration of all consultants who do business with HUD, and would require any waivers to be published in the Federal Register. Funding would be authorized to ensure adequate oversight of HUD programs, including the establishment of a chief financial officer to oversee the financial management of programs. Provisions are also included to restore the financial well-being of the FHA mortgage insurance programs.

I urge my colleagues to support this worthy package of reforms, and I applaud the work of Secretary Kemp and the members of the Housing Subcommittee.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Speaker, as a cosponsor of the recently introduced Housing and Urban Development reform legislation, on which the current version of H.R. 1 is based, I rise in support of this bill. For several weeks our Housing Subcommittee has worked to perfect legislation to address the long-standing and systemic problems that have plagued HUD for years. The bill we have here today does not solve all those deficiencies, but it is a good start and should be passed.

This bill does make the most urgently needed changes, including:

Instituting fair and open competition for Federal housing funds;

Requiring public notice of all funding decisions and allocations, eliminating discretionary funding;

Requiring full disclosure of all HUD contracting arrangements;

Stronger monitoring of HUD programs;

Establishment of a chief financial officer to tighten the Department's financial management; and

Improvements in the financial soundness of the Federal Housing Administration's mortgage insurance programs, by ending high-risk insuring practices.

This bill is essential for two reasons: First because HUD must end the waste of taxpayers' funds at this agency and apply these resources more efficiently to local housing needs, and second because it is our job to insist on high standards of integrity in the Federal establishment. I share the public's outrage at the misuse of public funds and the bureaucrats' subversion of the housing programs which Congress has enacted over the years to address housing needs. HUD must do better and with Secretary Kemp's leadership, we have a completely new team and a new attitude. This bill today is as much a product of his leadership as it is of our committee's.

However in passing this bill, we must not lose sight of the fact that there is a more basic problem with Federal housing programs. Too much of the focus has been on providing funds to middlemen, both private and governmental, instead of directing the funds to those who need it: American families.

That is why I favor a shift of policy toward the use of housing vouchers. We have proven that they work well. In Green Bay, WI, we conducted a successful experiment under which more than 1,000 families received direct Federal assistance. We need to apply the lessons we learned in that project across the Nation.

We need to enact H.R. 1 immediately, but I urge my colleagues to join me in returning to work in the Housing Subcommittee on a more basic redirection of Federal housing programs to meet the real needs of American families. That is my goal. Today we have taken the first step. Now, let's finish the job.

Mr. KYL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1, the HUD Reform Act of 1989, and I want to commend Chairman GONZALEZ and the ranking member of the Banking Committee, Congressman WYLIE, for moving this legislation to the House floor so quickly.

During the last 6 months, the Government Operations Committee's Employment and Housing Subcommittee, on which I serve, has been investigating alleged fraud and mismanagement which occurred at the Department of Housing and Urban Development over the last 20 years.

What the subcommittee has found are conflicts of interest, vastly inflated "consultant fees," influence-peddling, and years of negligence by both Democratic and Republican administrations. Funding decisions were being made not on the basis of the relative merit of housing projects, but rather on who was promoting the specific projects.

Some of the projects were quality projects, and may have been funded in any event. But, when we are all dealing with scarce resources, projects ought to compete against each other. That way, everyone has an equal chance of securing funding for their project, and we can be sure that only those that are the most beneficial receive taxpayer support.

The Bush administration was quick to recognize the problem at HUD. Secretary Jack Kemp immediately suspended the section 8 moderate rehabilitation program when his inspector general reported that its allocation process was not competitive and that a strong perception of favoritism existed. He also suspended the title X Land Development Program and the Retirement Service Centers Program due to fundamental problems in their operations.

Secretary Kemp made it clear he would not reopen the programs until reforms were implemented. He subsequently proposed sweeping reforms of these and other HUD programs so that projects are judged on their merits and that any future problems will be discovered and dealt with quickly. The bulk of those reforms are included in H.R. 1, which is before us today.

This legislation will ensure that funding decisions are subject to public scrutiny every step of the way. It will establish stiff penalties for those who defraud the Government or violate agency guidelines. It will restrict the ability of lobbyists to influence HUD decisions. It will establish the new positions of Chief Financial Officer and FHA Comptroller at HUD to better track Department funding and ensure that tax dollars are used as wisely and efficiently as possible.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this very important legislation.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BILBRAY). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend Federal laws to reform housing, community and neighborhood development, and related programs, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 1, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

RESIGNATION AS CONFEREE AND APPOINTMENT AS CONFEREE ON H.R. 2712, EMERGENCY CHINESE ADJUSTMENT OF STATUS FACILITATION ACT OF 1989

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following resignation as a conferee:

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC, November 10, 1989.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: As you know, on October 4, 1989, I was appointed as a House conferee on the bill, H.R. 2712, the Emergency Chinese Adjustment of Status Facilitation Act of 1989. As passed by the House on July 31 of this year, H.R. 2712 responds to the Chinese government's repression of the pro-democracy movement and actions against pro-democracy students by granting those students a waiver from the requirement that they return to China for two years before being eligible to change their immigrant status.

It now appears that the House may be concluding the business of the First Session within the next few days. I would not want my absence from the Congress for medical reasons to impede the enactment of this critically needed piece of legislation, leaving thousands of Chinese students in doubt as to their immigration status. Accordingly, in order to expedite resolution of this matter, I am submitting my resignation as a conferee on this bill.

With every good wish, I am

Sincerely,

JACK BROOKS,
Chairman.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the resignation is accepted.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the Chair appoints the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER] as a conferee to the bill, H.R. 2712, to fill the existing vacancy.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will notify the Senate of the change in conferees.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 1989

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3532) to extend the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3532

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "The Civil Rights Commission Reauthorization Act of 1989".

SEC. 2. REAUTHORIZATION.

The United States Commission on Civil Rights Act of 1983 is amended—

(1) in section 7, by striking "1989" and inserting "1990"; and

(2) in section 8, by striking "six years after its date of enactment" and inserting "on May 31, 1990".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the ordering of the second, and on that I demand tellers.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my motion.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 1989

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3532) to extend the United States Commission on Civil Rights.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3532

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "The Civil Rights Commission Reauthorization Act of 1989".

SEC. 2. REAUTHORIZATION.

The United States Commission on Civil Rights Act of 1983 is amended—

(1) in section 7, by striking "1989" and inserting "1990"; and

(2) in section 8, by striking "six years after its date of enactment" and inserting "on May 31, 1990".

SEC. 3. STAFF DIRECTOR.

Section 6(a)(1) of the United States Commission on Civil Rights Act of 1983 is amended by striking "the President with the concurrence of a majority of".

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, point of parliamentary inquiry. It is my understanding that the gentleman from California had withdrawn the motion to consider the very bill which he now brings to the desk again. What is the difference between the original motion made and then withdrew and the presentation of the matter as it now obtains?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The original motion was with an amendment. The bill presently before the House is as introduced originally.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, further parliamentary inquiry, does not the gentleman's motion to suspend the rules include the amendment that was adopted by the Committee on the Judiciary this morning?

Mr. EDWARDS of California. That was correct, the first motion.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. And a further parliamentary inquiry, the motion to suspend the rules contains the provision that takes away the power of the President to appoint the staff director of the Commission invested in the Commission itself?

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Is that a parliamentary inquiry to me, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair can only answer that the bill offered for passage under the pending motion is the bill as introduced and referred to committee.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. I thank the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS].

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3532 simply buys Congress more time, 6 months, to address the future of the Civil Rights Commission. If we do not extend the Commission for 6 months, the Commission will die on November 30, 1989.

The Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, which I chair, began reauthorization hearings in April, 1989. There was clear consensus then, from Members on both sides of the aisle, that this Nation needs a strong, independent, credible and effective Civil Rights Commission. But no one then had an effective plan of how to bring this about.

It was not until October that proposals were finally introduced on the Commission's future. Four proposals have been introduced within the last month, and all deserve careful and respectful study.

The President asked Congress, in June, to join him in a new partnership to reauthorize the Civil Rights Commission, with the goal of launching a renewed civil rights mission. But he did not present a proposal until November 8, last week.

The White House proposal does not address the serious financial and administrative management problems found by the GAO in 1986, and never acted upon by the Commission. The White House proposal simply extends the Commission for 6 more years.

Like the other proposals, the White House proposal will be carefully considered by the Subcommittee as soon as we return after the recess. But it should not be rammed through in the closing rush of Congress.

I received a letter last week from the White House, dated November 7. The President's Chief of Staff, Governor John Sununu, indicated that the President is troubled by the contentious nature of the Commission in recent years.

I, too, have been troubled by this contentiousness. But the problems and troubles of the Commission extend beyond contentious meetings and conflicting personalties. The Commission has been troubled by management problems which have not been addressed.

In the mid 1980's, allegations were raised regarding administrative and financial mismanagement at the Commission. The General Accounting Office reported its findings of mismanagement to the Congress in 1986, yet the Commission has taken no actions to address the troubling issues raised by the GAO.

The Commission has been without a permanent staff director since 1986. The President has authority to appoint the staff director, but has not done so. I was hopeful that upon taking office the President would have appointed a permanent staff director, as a critical first step toward revitalizing the Commission.

It would not be good public policy to extend the Commission for a substantial period of time, such as 6 years, without addressing fundamental problems at the Commission. A 6-year extension, as proposed by the White House, does not address these problems.

A number of interesting proposals have been introduced in the last month, including one from the gentleman from Wisconsin. These proposals merit careful consideration by the Congress, but this cannot be accomplished in the closing days of the session.

Finally, Governor Sununu claims that the President will not be able to attract top quality people to serve on the Commission for only 6 months.

But this differs from the facts. A number of prominent and well qualified Americans have already indicated their eagerness to serve as members of the Commission as Presidential appointees. A 6-month extension gives the President the opportunity to appoint these people to the Commission.

I am pleased to note that this bill, the 6-month extension, is endorsed by the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, a coalition of 185 national civil rights organizations.

This will be our only chance to vote on whether to continue the Civil Rights Commission. I urge my colleagues to vote for this short term extension. Don't vote to kill the Commission.

□ 2020

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER].

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, on November 8 of last week the Washington Post ran a five-column headline that reads, "Bush Accuses Congress of Blocking Everything I Try to Do."

Here we are, at 8:21 in the evening before an empty Chamber, and the majority party is attempting to thwart the will of the President of the United States again.

Let the record be clear: this motion to suspend the rules is not the bill that was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary this morning which extended the life of the Civil Rights Commission for 6 months. It adds one extra element, and that is that it transfers the power to appoint the staff director of the Civil Rights Commission from the Office of the President of the United States and places it in the hands of the Commission.

If that will not guarantee that this bill will be vetoed, I do not know what will.

So this is an attempt to further politicize a Commission that has been very contentious for the past several years. It is a move purely and simply designed to ensure failure for President Bush's first Commission on Civil Rights.

Now, let us look at what has been going on in the Civil Rights Commission. The Commission was reauthorized 6 years ago, in 1983. Four of the members of the Commission were appointed by the President without confirmation by the Senate, and one member each of the Commission was appointed by the majority and minority leaders of both the Senate and the House of Representatives, for a total of eight members of the Commission.

The Commission has denigrated itself into personal name calling, and contentious backbiting so that it has become a laughing stock in the Nation, and is a waste of the taxpayers' money.

Both Republicans and Democrats have joined to significantly reduce the funding of the Commission. If this Commission continues the way it is going, it deserves to die a peaceful death when its present lease on life expires on November 30, 1989.

The terms of four of the members of the Commission expire within the next month. With a 6-month extension, it will be impossible for the President, the Senator from Kansas, [Mr. DOLE], and the Republican leader, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL], to find qualified persons willing to serve for this short period of time while the fate of the Commission rests in the hands of Congress.

Furthermore, there is no permanent staff director in the Commission. It will be even harder to find someone to do those managerial improvements that the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS] and I both agree are essential if this Commission is to get back on track and serve a useful purpose, advancing the cause of civil rights in this country.

All Members have known that the life of the Civil Rights Commission expires on November 30, and it is at this late hour that a move is made in Congress to suspend the rules and pass a bill that will continue all of the problems that we have been discussing for another 6 months while the Commission's members and while the Commission's mission are left dangling to the winds that blow in this U.S. Capitol Building.

Mr. Speaker, it is for this reason that the Chief of Staff at the White House, Governor Sununu, wrote the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS] and myself, stating that the President is opposed to a 6-month extension.

Governor Sununu's letter reads in part:

> The administration would be unable to attract the qualified kind of individuals the President seeks to serve on the Board, given the uncertainty associated with the 6-month reauthorization. We view such a short reprieve as a hollow gesture that constitutes a disservice to the Commission and to the cause of civil rights in this Nation, while merely delaying a decision we should be prepared to make today.

The administration has come out in favor of a 6-year reauthorization of the Commission, leaving the appointment structure the same as it is now.

While I would prefer that all of the Members of the Commission be presidential appointees with Senate confirmation, I am willing to yield to this desire on the part of the White House.

The White House also would like to make sure that the Commission can start afresh and that none of the existing members of the Commission who have contributed so greatly to the backbiting and personal bickering and the disgrace that has come upon this Commission will be on a reconstituted Commission.

So I have an amendment which I would have offered had this bill not come up in a nonamendable form to reauthorize the Commission for 6 months, to have a 1-day gap so that the terms of the holdover commissioners would expire and all the members of the Commission would start afresh beginning on December 2, and to provide a savings clause so that the Civil Service employees would be transferred from the old Commission to the new Commission without losing their jobs.

If we really want to stop a hemorrhage of the managerial mismanagement, the backbiting, and the waste of taxpayers' money that this Commission has gotten itself so unfortunately and regrettably involved in, then the motion to suspend the rules by the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS] should be defeated when it comes up for a vote.

If we really want to depoliticize this Commission, the worst thing in the world to do would be to turn the power of appointment of the staff director from the President to the Commission itself, because this will certainly result in a veto of the bill, and then there will be no Commission, we will have a lot of ill will when we start afresh looking at what to do about this Commission, and it would be better to stop the ill will now, once and for all, by defeating this motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. MOORHEAD].

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I am concerned about what is happening to the Civil Rights Commission. I believe that our country needs a strong and effective Commission to guarantee the civil rights of the people of this country.

Certainly this 6-month extension guarantees that we will not have an effective Commission over the next 6-month period. We will only be continuing the problems that exist there at the present time.

After the month of December there will be only four members of the Commission that remain. The other terms will have expired.

The administration strongly supports a 6-year extension of the Civil Rights Commission, time enough to have an opportunity to work out the commitment of this President to civil rights.

The bill does not even give him a chance to succeed. It would be impossible over a short period of 6 months to get people who would serve on the Commission, who would actually take time away from their employment to do the kind of work that is necessary if the Civil Rights Commission is to be effective.

Mr. Speaker, I urge a "no" vote on H.R. 3532 and urge my colleagues to support the administration's proposal when it is allowed to be offered to reauthorize the Commission for 6 years with the 1-day gap to relieve the current Commissioners and staff director of their duties.

Let us give the President a chance to make a difference in civil rights.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, let me point out to my colleagues that the life of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights expires. The Commission dies in 2 weeks unless this bill is passed. A "no" vote on this bill that we have before us tonight is a vote to kill the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I have seen this happen quite often during the time I have been in the Congress of the United States with a Republican President, Reagan and now Bush, it seems that the Congress time and time again in so many fields has forgotten or is willing to ignore the fact that those individuals were elected by a majority of the people of the United States to be President, not just to occupy the White House but to give them the fundamental power of appointment to the courts, to the commissions, to the various functions that the President has the duty to fill through the power of appointment.

Here we have, again, a supreme example of the majority party in the House attempting to defy the President, rob him of that inherent constitutional power of appointment, which ironically the Congress conferred on him in the first place with respect to the Civil Rights Commission.

Here is an opportunity for us to sit down again with a "no" vote on this suspension tomorrow or however we can set this aside and allow a proper process to allow the President of the United States to do the duty for which he was elected by a majority of the people of the United States and not to allow the Congress to meddle with that any further.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, the debate over H.R. 3532 and over the future of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights is nothing less than a battle for the soul of the Bush administration on civil rights issues.

H.R. 3532 would extend the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights for a 6-month period, during which time the civil rights activists here in Washington will deliver an ultimatum to President Bush. They will look him in the eye and say: Either you accept our view on a race-conscious civil rights agenda, complete with quotas and results-oriented legislation, or we will oppose your efforts in this area, no matter how reasonable. We will oppose your nominees to important civil rights posts in the administration; we will oppose your legislation initiatives; and we will oppose your regulatory interpretations of recent Supreme Court decisions.

In short, if the Bush administration insists that the appropriate course is to adhere to the color-blind policy envisioned by the late Senator Hubert Humphrey, these civil rights activists will sabotage the President's civil rights agenda.

The 6-month reauthorization in H.R. 3532 is inappropriate because it would hold the Commission hostage to political considerations during this period and prolong the agony, the bickering, and the intolerance of the current Commission. A 6-year reauthorization, however, would enable the administration to attract top quality candidates for the open slots and address the emerging issues of the nineties, including the discrimination practiced by universities across America against highly qualified Asian-American students.

The recent attempts to silence the outspoken former Chairman of the Commission, William Allen, call to mind some observations by former Judge Robert Bork in his excellent new book, "The Tempting of America." Describing the tactics of the radical left to influence the courts on civil rights matters, Bork observes:

The American left regularly bypasses rational argument to challenge the moral character of those with whom it has substantive differences. The techniques is one of intimidation and it has sometimes been at least partially effective with Courts that were sensitive about their image with the press and in public perception.

Such is the strategy to prevent former Chairman Allen from expressing his opinion on a wide range of matters affecting the civil rights of all Americans. Allen, with his enormous intellect and his rare gift for eloquence, poses a difficult target for the ideologues on the left. But, unfortunately, a concerted and well-organized campaign of intimidation to prevent him from airing his views ultimately prevailed, forcing him to relinquish his position as Chairman, although he remains on the Commission.

If this bill passes, President Bush faces a choice. He can kowtow to the left and nominate Commissioners who will adhere to the leftist party line of group entitlements and results-oriented legislation, or he can stand tall and nominate men and women like former Chairman Allen, who will advocate laws and policies that promote a society where no person will be judged on the basis of his or her membership in a particular group, and where merit will be the final arbiter of the fruits of our society, including hirings, promotions, and admittance to educational institutions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BILERAY). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3532.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SENSENBRENNER) there were—ayes 4, noes 3.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed until tomorrow.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill just considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 2712, EMERGENCY CHINESE IMMIGRATION RELIEF ACT OF 1989

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 2712), to facilitate the adjustment or change of status of Chinese nationals in the United States by waiving the 2-year foreign residence requirement for "J" nonimmigrants:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. 101-360)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2712) to facilitate the adjustment or change of status of Chinese nationals in the United States by waiving the 2-year foreign residence requirement for "J" nonimmigrants, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment to the Senate amendment, insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Emergency Chinese Immigration Relief Act of 1989".

SEC. 2. STATUS OF CERTAIN NATIONALS OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA.

(a) WAIVER OF FOREIGN RESIDENCE REQUIREMENT FOR "J" NONIMMIGRANTS.—The 2-year home country residence and physical presence period requirement under section 212(e) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(e)) is hereby waived in the case of any national of the People's Republic of China (in this Act referred to as "China") if—

(1) the alien is present in the United States on the date of the enactment of this Act (or who would have been present in the United States but for a brief, casual, and innocent departure from the United States),

(2) the alien would otherwise be subject to that 2-year home residence requirement because of having had the status of a nonimmigrant described in section 101(a)(15)(J) of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(15)(J)), and

(3) not later than 4 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the alien files a nonfrivolous application for adjustment or any change of status under section 245 or 248 of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1255, 1258).

(b) PRESUMPTION OF CONTINUOUS RESIDENCE FOR CERTAIN PRC NATIONALS.—For purposes of any adjustment of status under section 245 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1225) of any change of status under section 248 of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1258) in the case of an alien who is a national of China and who, as of June 5, 1989, was present in the United States in the lawful status of a nonimmigrant (or who would have been present in the United States in that status but for a brief, casual, and innocent departure from the United States), such an alien shall be considered as having continued to maintain lawful status as such a nonimmigrant (and to have maintained continuously a lawful status) for the period described in subsection (d).

(c) EMPLOYMENT AUTHORIZATION.—Any national of China described in subsection (b) who, as of June 5, 1989, was present in the United States in the lawful status of a nonimmigrant described in subparagraph (F), (J), or (M) of section 101(a)(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (or who would have been present in the United States in that status but for a brief, casual, and innocent departure from the United States) shall be granted authorization to engage in employment in the United States and shall be provided with an "employment authorized" endorsement or other appropriate work permit during the period described in subsection (d).

(d) DURATION OF STATUS.—The period referred to in subsections (b), (c), and (e) is the period during which the Attorney General has in effect a deferral of enforced departure for nationals of China.

(e) NOTIFICATION.—In the case of any alien who is a national of China and who is eligible for deferral of enforced departure pursuant to a directive of the Attorney General during the period described in subsection (d) and whose authorized period of stay as a nonimmigrant has expired, the Attorney General shall, instead of initiating deportation proceedings against the alien (including the service of an order to show cause) during the period described in subsection (d), issue to the alien a notice of expiration of nonimmigrant status. Such notice shall be nonadversarial in nature and shall contain an explanation of the options available to such aliens under the directive of the Attorney General and under the Immigration and Nationality Act.

SEC. 3. GUIDELINES TO BE APPLIED IN ADJUDICATING APPLICATIONS FOR ASYLUM, WITHHOLDING OF DEPORTATION, AND REFUGEE STATUS FROM CHINESE FLEEING COERCIVE POPULATION CONTROL POLICIES.

(1) IN GENERAL.—With respect to the adjudication of all applications for asylum, withholding of deportation, or refugee status from nationals of China filed before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this Act, careful consideration shall be given to such an applicant who expresses a fear of persecution upon return to China related to China's "one couple, one child" family planning policy.

(b) REGULATIONS ESTABLISHING GUIDELINES.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall promulgate regulations establishing guidelines to implement subsection (a). Such guidelines shall provide that an applicant described in subsection (a) shall be considered to have established a well-founded fear of persecution based on political opinion if returned to China if the applicant establishes that—

(1) the applicant (or applicant's spouse) has refused to abort a pregnancy or resisted sterilization in violation of China's family planning policy directives, and

(2)(A) in the case of an applicant for asylum or refugee status, there is good reason to believe that the applicant will be required to abort the pregnancy or to be sterilized or will otherwise be persecuted if the applicant were returned to China, or (B) in the case of an applicant for withholding of deportation, there is a likelihood that the applicant will be required to abort the pregnancy or to be sterilized or will otherwise be persecuted if the applicant were returned to China.

Such regulations shall be effective immediately on an interim basis pending the promulgation of final regulations and shall be applied throughout the Department of Justice.

(c) CONSIDERATION OF OTHER FACTORS.—All other factors (such as overt political activities, membership in an ethnic or religious minority, and family background and history) which may contribute to a determination that an applicant described in subsection (a) is eligible for asylum, withholding of deportation, or refugee status are to be given additional weight.

And the House agree to the same.

BRUCE A. MORRISON,
HOWARD L. BERMAN,
Managers on the Part of the House.

EDWARD M. KENNEDY,
PAUL SIMON,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the Senate amendment to the bill (H.R. 2712) to facilitate the adjustment or change of status of Chinese nationals in the United States by waiving the 2-year foreign residence requirement for "J" nonimmigrants, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment to the Senate amendment to the text of the bill struck out all after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the House amendment to the Senate amendment to the text of the House bill with an amendment which is a substitute for the Senate amendment to the text and the House amendment to the Senate amendment to the text. The differences among the Senate amendment to the text, the House amendment to the Senate amendment to the text, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

SCOPE OF WAIVER OF 2-YEAR FOREIGN RESIDENCE REQUIREMENT

The Senate amendment limited the availability of the wiaver of the 2-year foreign residence requirement to Chinese nationals who are "otherwise eligible for adjustment of status under the Immigration and Nationality Act" during the period of time during which the Attorney General has in effect a deferral of enforced departure for nationals of the People's Republic of China.

The House amendment to the Senate amendment made the waiver available without regard to the alien's eligibility for adjustment of status and imposed no limitation on the period of time during which aliens would have had to apply for the waiver.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision with two modifications. First, the waiver would be available during a 4-year period (beginning on the date of enactment). Second, in order to qualify for the waiver an alien would have to file, during the four-year period, a nonfrivolous application for adjustment of status under section 245 (immigrants) or change of status under 248 (nonimmigrants) of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

The Conferees note that the substitute language does not make the availability of the waiver contingent upon the alien's ultimate success in obtaining adjustment of status. Instead, any timely application for adjustment of status that on its face presents an honest and plausible case for adjustment shall have the effect of permanently waiving the foreign residence requirement that otherwise would have applied to that individual.

The Conference substitute, by waiving the foreign residence requirement for individuals who file nonfrivolous applications for adjustment, effectively lifts the limitations on adjustment of status of "J" nonimmigrants contained in section 248(3) of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

CHINESE FLEEING COERCIVE POPULATION CONTROL POLICIES

The Senate amendment require all adjudicators of asylum or refugee status to give the fullest possible consideration to applications from nationals of the People's Republic of China who express a fear of persecution upon return to that country because they refuse to abort a pregnancy or resist surgical sterilization in violation of Chinese Communist Party directives on population.

The House amendment to the Senate amendment included no similar position.

The conference substitute requires all officers and employees of the Department of Justice to give careful consideration to all applications for asylum, withholding of deportation, and refugee status filed by Chinese nationals who express a fear of persecution upon return to China because of China's one couple, one child family planning policy. The substitute also requires the Attorney General to promulgate regulations that specify that an applicant who has violated that policy by becoming pregnant or by refusing to abort a pregnancy or resisting sterilization shall be considered to have established a well founded fear of politicial persecution if evidence exists that the individual will be persecuted if returned to China.

THE PRESIDENT'S HOUSING PROPOSALS

(Mr. FRANK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, the President correctly last week acknowledged the fact that we have got a housing crisis in this country and proposed some measures to help. The measures he proposed in themselves are good ones, but as the Washington Post points out in an editorial today, they are hardly enough.

The entire thrust of the President's proposal is to help poor people buy homes. I am for helping poor people buy homes. But we ought to understand that when people buy homes, they will not be poor anymore.

In fact, trying to give every poor person a chance to buy a home would clearly exceed our financial capability.

Home ownership as one part of a program for some small percentage of the poor is a good idea. But a program like the President's, which ignores those who rent, ignores the various forms of rental assistance, which ignores trying to get more housing constructed for low-income people where they can live and rent, as the Washington Post points out, will do very little in terms of its cumulative impact.

The President is right in his analysis of the problem but his solution, as the Washington Post points out, simply leaves most of those who are hurt by the housing crisis untouched.

The article referred to follows:

THE PRESIDENT'S HOUSING PROPOSALS

One thing to do when an answer get too hard is to change the question. That is what the president did in his housing speech last week in Dallas, saying that "the true measure of success isn't how many families we add to housing assistance rolls" but "how many families move up and out, and into the ranks of homeowners."

The speech was accompanied by the administration's HOPE (Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere) initiative, a series of proposals aimed mainly at helping poor people buy either the public or subsidized housing units they now rent or residential properties on which the government has had to foreclose. This has long been a dream of housing secretary Jack Kemp, who describes such conversions as a step toward the weaning and empowerment of the poor. The proposals also included the enterprise or tax-forgiveness zones he has long urged as a way of inducing businesses to return to or start up in inner cities, thereby in theory providing the poor with jobs.

It would be a great mistake to denigrate Mr. Kemp's enthusiastic vision. In an area where successes have been depressingly few, his strongly held ideas deserve the trial that the president now asks that they be given. But it would be an equal mistake to think that these ideas go anywhere near the central housing problem of the poor. Most poor people rent, and it is not defeatist to say that as far as the policy eye can see, they will continue to. The rents they are called upon to pay far outstrip their incomes.

The government already spends $15 billion a year on subsidized housing, yet fewer than a third of the renting poor are covered by the programs—in part because many of the more than 4 million units go to the almost equally needy near-poor. Some 45 percent of the renting poor, or most of those not covered by the government programs, pay more than 70 percent of their already meager incomes in rent. What does that leave? Preferable as it would be to see housing-assisted families move into their own homes, a decent policy now requires that we actually add families to the housing assistance rolls. The program decribed last week will add too few.

In fairness, most of the alternatives put forward in Congress would also add too few. The problem is money. But on that, too, the president hid behind a diversionary tactic, attacking Congress for failing to reduce spending and the deficit even as he proposed another unfinanced program to increase both. Where, if not from the tax increase he continues to resist or the spending cuts he will not specify, will the money for even his own modest housing program come? Busily denouncing fiscal irresponsibility, he does not say. The president embraced some interesting ideas last week, but they do not amount to a serious national housing program.

MEDITERRANEAN SUMMIT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. ECKART. I thank the Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, this is indeed a very exciting time in the history of the world. It was just almost 45 years ago that two preeminent leaders of the world joined by another colleague were also traveling on battleships in the Mediterranean Sea to provide for a fundamental redrawing or a carving-up, if you will, of the map of Europe.

Almost 50 years later, leaders from both the Soviet Union and the United States will once again be traveling on Navy ships in the Mediterranean Sea, not to carve up the Earth, as was once done before, but to participate in the most open dialog and the greatest opportunity since World War II to help shape the face of democracy.

In this evening's special order I will be joined by my colleagues from the States of West Virginia, New Jersey, and Florida to talk a little bit about the expectations, the opportunities for this summit. Indeed, for a President who has wandered like an accidental tourist in the foreign policy realm, the opportunities for Mr. Bush indeed here are legendary.

The first of my colleagues to participate in this special order, representing the State of New Jersey, is my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI].

Mr. Speaker, I yield to my colleague such time as he may consume.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and for giving us this opportunity this evening.

As the gentleman from Ohio notes, history is taking a dramatic turn. The recent events in Europe assure the world, as we have known it for four decades, is going to be different. Indeed, it is never going to be the same again.

Mr. Jefferson's idea of human dignity, the idea of universal sufferage and freedom is now becoming the dominant form of government in the world. Indeed, perhaps for the first time in human history, democracy could represent more than half the people on this globe.

□ 2040

For America, for all Americans, it should be a great triumph. We have, after all, lost thousands of lives in this struggle, and spent billions of dollars. Tragically it would appear that the administration is not meeting this challenge with either the vision nor the courage that has typified either our history or our very participation in this struggle.

It has been a blessing of America that at each time of challenge in our history, be it Lincoln, during a great division in the Republic, or Wilson or Roosevelt or Kennedy, even within the struggles of this cold war, we have the good fortune of bold leadership. People who were as large as the opportunity, who understood not only the dangers but the opportunities, and rose to them.

Well, Mr. Speaker, now my fears at this moment of triumph. Something different is happening in our land. There is a fear, there is a hesitancy about change, a hesitancy to act. It is as if we have won the battle of the cold war and now are prepared to lose the larger struggle itself. Not because of a failure of our ideas. Our ideas are prevailing. Not because of a lack of resolve of our people. Indeed, we are not triumphing the cold war because of the resolve of our people, but because of a timidity, a lack of vision by our leader.

The loss, I believe, takes on many aspects. For one, it is a loss defined by the fact that a new generation in the world will never fully understand that it is American ideas, American idealism, and American resolve which will have brought the blessings of democracy to all corners of the Earth. But also, a failure that as a new world takes form, borders are changed, security changes, trading routes are redrawn. American hands will not be molding a new future. It appears, Mr. Speaker, that rather than being inspired by these possibilities, we are fearing change. It is almost as if the administration harbored some nostalgia for the dark days of the cold war when the world was simpler, if not far more dangerous. This hesitation, I believe, is producing one of the great ironies of history. That is, that after 40 years of American allied sacrifice for a new generation of people on this Earth, it is Mr. Gorbachev and his nation who are going to be credited with having brought the blessings of freedom and an end of conflict. For all of his contributions, for all the vision Mr. Gorbachev might have that is a distinction that he does not deserve. That distinction, based on our sacrifices and our leadership should be American.

There is still time. In only a few days President Bush will go to the Mediterranean for his summit meeting with President Gorbachev. The question is whether he is going to listen, or whether he is going to lead. Whether he can be as large as the opportunity, whether he will bring proposals and seize the initiative, or simply listen and continue to cower in the fear of change. That is an open question.

Mr. Speaker, what should be done I believe is clear. Go to that summit with clear, with precise, with bold proposals to challenge the Soviets to reduce troops in Europe now; to integrate the Soviet economy into the world economy lest they never have the incentive again to go their separate ways; to restructure the divisions and the conflicts of Europe; to think in as bold, as large of terms as the opportunities.

Mr. Speaker, there are dangers in delay. Not only the failure to perceive America's role or sacrifices, not only the loss of leadership in the Western world, but other larger delays. Dangers in those delays because as quickly as opportunities have appeared, opportunities can be lost, for if reforms are not rewarded they, too, can be lost. Incentives must be clear for continued reform and change, or they will be too late.

Mr. Speaker, if this chance is lost to alter the course of history, to make permanent the events of the last few days, to make the blessings of democracy available for all people, history will never forgive Members. It is, Mr. Speaker, a tragedy that America, facing a first-rate opportunity to remake the world as we have known it has, perhaps, a second rate leadership. However, it is not too late. He is the only President we have. We wish George Bush well and hope that he can think in terms as large as the opportunity.

I thank the gentleman for yielding the time to me.

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH], who in his service on the Committee on Foreign Affairs has persistently and consistently raised questions of great significance to the United States.

It is just a few hours from this moment that at that very podium, from the areas from which my friend, the gentleman from New Jersey just spoke, one of the great leaders who has helped create an aura, an opportunity in Europe, will be addressing this august body. The leader of Solidarity, Lech Walesa, represents for many Members, the tremendous ideals, some of whose spirits are emblazoned on the walls of this very Chamber; a rainmaker, Mr. Walesa, has helped bring about this tide, the flood of democracy which he idealed for 8 years, and it took less than 8 weeks in East Germany.

However, to my friends from Florida who have worked hard on the question of human rights and our introduction, we welcome this opportunity to share with Members the kind of items that will be necessary in order to have a successful summit in the next 3 weeks.

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I very much appreciate his asking for the time this evening on this special order so that we may discuss some of the challenges that face not only those countries emerging from behind the Iron Curtain, as it crumbles, emerging into the light of day, into the sphere of freedom and democracy that is the hallmark of Western Europe, but also as we face challenges ourself.

The United States is at, and I do not mean to use an old worn phrase, but it really applies, the United States is at the crossroads of history. It has been to a large degree, because of the actions of the United States from Yalta, now to Malta, that the whole range of democracy options have been put into place from the time that the agreements were made, literally setting up Soviet domination over Eastern Europe, and ensuring that a number of states would become Communist, and the Iron Curtain became a reality. From the time the United States has set about in almost every way possible to get the Iron Curtain lifted, to bring about a change. It has taken over 40 years, but it worked.

Now we are faced with the fruits of our labor. We are faced with what could not be accomplished by the Second World War, and the loss of so many American lives, as well as the lives of many others, and the armies, and of course the civilian losses on the Allied side. We are now faced with the possibility that we will achieve, after all those years, after over 43 years that the war has ended, we will now achieve the very thing we fought for then, and that is not only peace, but freedom, democracy, pluralistic societies in many of the Eastern European countries as well as the Western.

Mr. Speaker, we ought to be proud of that. It is something unique. It is something incredibly joyful in a way to watch as one country after another, almost like children learning to walk, discover that standing upright gets them there faster, and when they begin that movement forward, things begin to happen.

We visited, a number of us, Hungary just 1 year ago, just 1 year ago in November, Mr. Speaker, and we went with parliamentarians, the speaker of the Hungarian house and a number of his colleagues, and they told us about their grandiose plans. And what were their grandiose plans, their dreams 1 year ago? To try to get a parliament that could pass some small pieces of legislation that would be implemented without the necessity for the approval of the Communist Party and the possibility that would exist that they would have some kind of multicandidate, not multiparty, just multicandidate elections, all supervised by the Communist Party.

Mr. Speaker, we met with dissident groups who were thinking that maybe for the first time they might have a small voice, some opinion, that could be voiced without their being beaten over the head or arrested, and 1 year later what do we see? Not just Hungary, where they have had multiparty, multicandidate elections, where they have cut down the fences between themselves and other nations, where they now have changed the name of the Communist Party; it does not exist any longer in Hungary; but we see Poland, the second country, which moved from a repressive society with an almost dictatorial figure at its head to a country where Solidarity, as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART], my friend, has just indicated, actually won elections, that which was 9 years ago started in a shipyard and has now moved forward to actually be the governing sentiment and party taking most of the seats in the first open election they had in over 40 years.

And now East Germany, where just a few weeks ago Mr. Honecker stepped down, appointed a man whose first utterances were that there would be no reforms at all, Mr. Krenz. That is almost a direct quote, that there will be no reforms at all. A month later, the wall, the Berlin Wall, that despised symbol of the Iron Curtain of repression, of people penned in, is almost gone. We are waiting right now for the section of the wall that is in front of the Brandenburg Gate, the most, I guess, notable section, because it separates the highway that runs between what is East Berlin and West Berlin; that main highway in front of the Brandenburg Gate is about to be taken down, and we are waiting for it, the most symbolic act that would have happened so far for the East and West Berliners, that which our President in 1963 went to see, John F. Kennedy, and talked about its disastrous effect on the people inside that wall and talked about being a Berliner in his heart, as many Americans felt, solidarity with those people walled in, penned in by a system which was repressive and totalitarian. And now in just a matter of a few weeks they have broken out, and they are announcing more reforms. And this is what we are faced with.

Mr. Speaker, where are we? Mr. Speaker, we see Helmut Kohl, the Chancellor of West Germany, going to Poland, sitting down at a table and setting up by treaty, by agreement, trade, economic and other multilateral and bilateral ties with Poland, meeting in East Germany and talking with the leaders of East Germany. We have at the North Atlantic assembly, the political arm of NATO, both representatives from Poland and Hungary invited to the meeting that we had in October. We see participation by groups all over Western Europe in aiding these new countries.

What do we see mostly? We see in the Soviet Union a regime which has made no attempt whatsoever to stifle these reforms and these changes. We see a man, Mr. Gorbachev, who has problems in his own country, but to his credit, for the most part, has refused to become repressive, who has not at all attempted to stifle what we want in Hungary or Poland, and now in East Germany, and which may be catching even to the extent that in Bulgaria the 35-year Mr. Zhivkov—35-year dictator—just resigned.

What a challenge to us, but sadly, Mr. Speaker, as my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] has indicated, what has been the reaction of this administration and this President? The President was quoted as saying yesterday as to his lack of any kind of real response, "I'm not an emotional kind of guy."

Mr. Speaker, that is really very nice. Nobody asked the President to jump up and down and clap his hands. What we expect from the President is leadership.

What are we going to do about what is going on? How are we going to seize the advantage? How are we going to help these countries institutionalize these reforms so that they cannot slide back? Where are our programs? Hungary for over a year, Poland for the last 8 or 9 months? Even now, East Germany in just a few short weeks? Have we announced any program other than the President saying he wanted a small package of economic aid which both this House and the Senate, people from his own party, as well as Democrats, were gravely disappointed in because they were too little, too short-sighted without a real challenge to them in capability to allow us to help them?

What happened to this country and its administration as these incredibly unique, important and, in very many ways unexpected things took place? We stayed with our old line. We have to be cautious. Mr. Speaker, we do. We have to be cautious. But caution should not mean indecision. And we have to be politic. But politic does not mean indifference.

Mr. Speaker, that is what we are beginning to see that our policy is just that, indifference, and to some degree an incapability to devise some strategy to do what others are doing in their political sense. We have had on the table at the negotiation that we have been involved with, for instance, proposals to reduce tremendous amounts of troops in Eastern and Western Europe. We have tabled significant proposals. In the last few months the Soviet Union has scooped us, literally, while we were fighting about small little items. Mr. Gorbachev tabled the proposal to reduce troop strength by 50 percent. We were unprepared. They talked about reducing military hardware by huge numbers. We were unprepared. Not only the United States, even the NATO allies, and we have yet, frankly, to come back to them with any significant proposal.

Now, in that area, of course, caution is very important. These reforms are not institutionalized. These reforms still could be reversed. The possibility still exists of Soviet tanks being used like they were in Hungary in 1956 or in Czechoslovakia. That could happen. But what are we doing to ensure that it does? At the moment, practically nothing.

Giving Mr. Walesa a Medal of Freedom is a wonderfully symbolic thing to do, but helping the people that he represents build their country's infrastructure, giving them an economy that will push them in the direction of free enterprise, give people jobs and make people want to stay in the sphere of freedom and democracy and put the lie to those who say you can only get along in a Communist society where the state runs everything should be our goal. I have yet to hear any statement from the administration on how they intend to do that. So these symbolic acts must be matched by on-the-table proposals.

Mr. Speaker, what is going to happen when Mr. Gorbachev and Mr. Bush sit down on those naval ships near Malta? Well, we pray that it will not be as it was in 1945 at Yalta. But are we going to do?

It is quite conceivable that the Soviet Union will come in and Mr. Gorbachev will table a proposal to take all of the American and Soviet forces out of Europe. Are we prepared for that? What would happen?

Our President has been calling this a meeting, a discussion, not wanting to use the word "summit," not wanting I guess to raise, but rather to lower expectations about what can be accomplished. But the timing of this could not be better to accomplish a major step toward world peace. It could not be better, and if the President insists on downplaying this to a mere discussion, then he is missing and his advisers are missing and the Secretary of State is missing a unique opportunity not only to break that curtain completely, but to move it apart forever by virtue of the kind of new reforms that could be adopted in the military, in the economic, in the social and in the political arena by discussions with a man who still to some degree has sway over that orbit.

Will we reduce our troops? Will they? Will we build mutually beneficial security facilities which are monitored, which are verified? Will we reduce our missiles, our tanks, our planes? Will they do the same on their end? These things need to be discussed now.

And what needs really to be discussed is how we are going to accomplish institutionalizing what has happened in those countries and what we and the Soviets will now decide to do vis-a-vis our alliance commitments, they with the Warsaw Pact and us with the NATO allies.

Mr. Speaker, the Poles have already indicated, as have the Hungarians, that they want Soviet troops out of their country. Well if they succeed, how are we going to justify keeping 350,000 troops in Western Europe? These are all questions of grave importance.

What about the missiles and their technological upgrades, the modernization of our missile force, if, in fact, the missiles of the Soviets are pulled back behind the Urals and many dismantled, as they are very possibly going to do? These are questions of grave importance, and I would hope that the President of the United States would not miss this opportunity to begin to discuss these now.

But that is not the only question, and that is why this summit is so important. Will we discuss the broadening of human rights, of the capability to institutionalize democratic process reforms for elections and for open and free markets and for the free transit of people across borders? Will we do all of that? This is the challenge. This is again the unique crossroads challenge for the United States.

I hope that the President of the United States sees this challenge the way many of us in this Chamber do, both Democrats and Republicans. We hope that he rises to this challenge. We hope that he believes, as we hope he can believe, that he is equal to this task. It is a grave important task.

The future of many of these countries and the future of our country to a large degree rides on what Mr. Bush will be able to accomplish in these next few months, and the programs and policies that the foreign policy of the United States will dictate that he come up with.

We hope, Mr. Speaker, in short, that the United States will again be the leader and will reap the fruits of its policies that it has followed for the last 45 years.

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from Florida, for his comments and participation.

My colleague, the gentleman from Florida, briefly mentioned that President Bush's aides have been instructed to call this a meeting, not a summit. It is said this is going to be a time in which they are to get to know each other, as the President said, "Getting acquainted."

Well, Mr. President, this is not a blind date. You have met Mr. Gorbachev before. In fact, you were riding in the car with him just about a year and a half ago when he decided to get out and make that famous walk down the street in Washington to meet the real people on the sidewalks.

Mr. President, this is not a time simply for talking and sharing and being together. You did not get this appointment by calling a 1-900 number because you were lonely somewhere. This represents a real opportunity for significant breakthroughs, as my colleague, the gentleman from Florida has suggested.

One of my colleagues, the gentleman from West Virginia, who has followed the question of nuclear arms and trade reductions as well has an important point to make in that regard.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE].

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

I just point out that I agree with the gentleman also that the President and Mr. Gorbachev have met before. I mean, here are two guys out on warships. They do not need a male bonding experience. They are going to have the opportunity, and it is going to be very serious.

Mr. Gorbachev is coming with a map, make no mistake about it, and he wants to move things around on that map. They may be troops, they may be missiles, they may be arms depositories, conventional arms agreements, or whatever, but he is going to make some significant proposals.

The question is whether we will be prepared to meet those or whether we are going to be simply participating and sitting and being a spectator, and then as has happened in Reykjavik, be embarrassed because we are not able to adequately respond.

I think that it is important that our administration be preparing in nuclear arms. What is it we intend to be doing? Do you know what we want out of this? It is not just a question of what we hope to get out of it, what the Soviets want. Do we know what we want, what goals we have?

The nuclear arms, for instance, how much of a reduction can we absorb at one point? What do our NATO allies want?

Remember what happened at Reykjavik, where a 50-percent reduction was proposed and immediately we find out that that is not what our NATO allies wanted. Indeed, the Pentagon had some grave misgivings about it.

In conventional arms reductions, the Soviet Union has already put something on the table. I am not saying it is something that should be adhered to, but the point is they are showing leadership. Where are we? Where are our proposals?

In trade relations, my goodness, all the economies that are up in the air right now, the transit back and forth in East Germany and West Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and so on.

Do we know what we will give in concessions? Do we know what we will give in assistance?

Lech Walesa will stand in this Hall tomorrow. When George Bush visited Lech Walesa, Lech Walesa said, "Our country needs $10 billion to move into this new era."

George Bush offered $100 million. He was matched within a couple days by one heiress to the Johnson & Johnson fortune who wrote a $100 million check to the Gdansk shipyard. One individual matched what the entire U.S. Government said that they would put on the table. Happily, due to a democratic initiative, that amount has been ante'd up.

To those who say, and I understand the concern for foreign aid, we cannot just be throwing money at problems. We spend conservatively over $100 billion a year maintaining NATO forces. NATO is now up in the air. So how many millions is it worth not to spend the hundreds of billions of dollars that are spent over a several year period of time? Billions on NATO or millions for peace?

George Bush says that he is a prudent man, and I respect prudence, but I know what is going to be on that warship off Malta.

You are going to have someone making hard proposals, and so prudence is one thing, and people can always say, "I understand and respect prudence," but they respect, they admire and, more significantly, they follow real leadership.

I would just note that many, many years ago when the Berlin Wall was being constructed and before John F. Kennedy actually went himself as that wall was being constructed, he sent his Vice President. As that wall is coming down, should we not be doing something more significant? Should we not be participating?

I note that the East German and West German mayors stretched their hands out across the wall and shook hands and then walked in each other's area. I note that the President of France has already called for a summit. I note that German leaders of East and West Germany have already agreed to their own summit meeting sometime before the first of the year.

Where are we in Europe? Are we going to a conference on the warships off Malta, are we going to a conference in which, once again, we are forgetting to consult somebody and to talk to somebody and to get their advice; namely, those being the people, the NATO allies, whom we say we represent?

There are so may issues that have to be prepared, for we are all excited, and we want the best for the President, but we want also the President to be at this best as he represents us.

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague.

As he mentioned the question of prudence, I think we all should really closely keep in mind that there is a significant difference, as a columnist mentioned today, between prudence and paralysis. Unfortunately, this administration has all too often substituted one for the other.

Both of my colleagues who serve on the Foreign Relations Committee touched upon in their remarks, the need for significant changes, not to come home empty-handed.

One of the most important matters that I would think which would be part of it is the time this country has spent in leading along with a number of other nations efforts at human rights reforms; the Helsinki commitments which we are so interested in preserving and expanding. It would occur to me, and I would welcome my two colleagues' discussion of the opportunities to involve this summit in a major initiative on the Vanik-Jackson law passed here so many years ago by my immediate predecessor, Congressman Charles Vanik from the Cleveland, OH, area.

Let me ask my colleague from New Jersey and my colleagues from Florida and West Virginia, as well, to comment on the significance of a major breakthrough in the area of Vanik-Jackson as a part of the terms for a successful summit.

Mr. TORRICELLI. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

There is virtually a constellation of opportunities, of different measures that George Bush can bring to this meeting with Mikhail Gorbachev, and one of those is certainly to recognize the dramatic changes in Soviet emigration.

Our goal, and the United States established some years ago, was under the pressure of withholding normal trade relationships with the Soviet Union in Jackson-Vanik, to withhold that relationship unless the Soviet Union made some dramatic changes in the rights of emigration, a basic human right for its citizens.

In recent months, indeed, throughout this year and last, the numbers of those Soviet Jews, ethnic Germans, evangelists, Christians who have been permitted to leave the Soviet Union has grown into the thousands, indeed, beyond our own ability to absorb them.

Have the Soviets made all the changes we would like? Of course, they have not. There are still things to be done. We would like to see them codify the law. We would like to see some more domestic respect for differences among their population, but the fact is there have been these dramatic changes.

My fear is that this opportunity will be lost, to go to Mr. Gorbachev and say, "We recognize the dramatic changes that have been made and, therefore, under the powers of the Jackson-Vanik law, we will not repeal it until those changes in your country are permanent, but we will waive it," and the President has that power today for a year, for less if he chooses, to provide both a recognition and an incentive particularly within the internal politics of the Soviet Union that those who would be reformers clearly can return home with a recognition that we have responded, and those who would counsel that there is no improvement in relations with the West, no chance for a better relationship with America no matter what actions are taken, would be proven wrong.

Does that involve a risk? I do not think so, because the President can reenact the law if he does not like actions that are taken, but I suppose what bothers me most as the administration prepares for this summit is the belief that no risks should be taken.

I would remind my colleagues in these last 40 years we have risked everything to bring this day about when the triumph of democracy might be realized. We have risked every life in this country in the possibility of conflict. We have spent precious resources. We have spilled blood. We are now failing to respond, to offer alternatives, to challenge the Soviets to go further, because we are afraid of the risks. Mr. Bush seems to cite caution as a virtue. I would suggest this to the Members, that caution in the face of opportunity is careless.

The administration's policy, if they do not seize these intiatives, is careless, and the gentleman correctly notes that Jackson-Vanik is one of those opportunities. I hope the President thinks about his possibilities when he travels to Malta.

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I think the gentleman makes an excellent point about the opportunities that exist.

Let me first say that it is interesting to note, as the gentleman from New Jersey pointed out, that at least for the previous administration and this one, it seems as if the risk of war was less of a risk to them than the risk for peace. Not only did we put our lives on the line and risk everything, but the nuclear deterrent which was the United States role to a large degree in the NATO alliance put us at risk significantly for our European allies, and we were willing to take that risk. Now when that risk is rolling itself back because of the actions of people in those, what were once satellite countries, we have not come up with anything on the civic, political, and social side which matches the risk that we were willing to take on the military/nuclear side. That is a very surprising posture for the United States to be in, and it is a challenge for us that we ought to be able to meet, the kinds of intentions we have in this country, the kind of capability, but more so, the desire to help the people that we have helped over those years.

The gentleman from West Virginia rightly points out that we have spent in this country billions upon billions upon billions. Last year about $80 billion alone was spent to protect the countries in Western Europe. We, in fact, have spent ourselves into a huge deficit because we operated the military to meet all of these theoretical challenges that existed from the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact countries.

What is our response now that the walls are crumbling? We have none. We have none. Even Mr. Cheney, the Secretary of Defense, admits that NATO will have to be revised significantly. But we need to start talking about that.

With reference now to the challenge of, as my friend from Ohio likes to refer to it, Vanik-Jackson, and since Charlie Vanik is a wonderful man and one of the authors, we shall refer to it as the Vanik-Jackson, and while I agree with most of what the gentleman from New Jersey said, I take a slightly different tack, and that is that while I am willing to use Vanik-Jackson as a lure for the Soviets to continue to be forthcoming, I do not believe that until some institutionalization is in fact made and ensured that we ought to be still as quick to extend the virtues of that economic policy that Jackson-Vanik represents.

I believe it is very important for us to continue to hold that out as a carrot. The Soviet Union needs it desperately, and they ought to be able. They were a much more advanced society than many of these other satellite nations in terms of their political capability. They ought to be able to institutionalize some of these reforms so that they cannot go back either.

The one thing we have to be very scared about is that Gorbachev will fail. If he fails, we can see worse repression. There will be another Brezhnev, another Stalin even perhaps.

Are we prepared to help him do that? We have to be, as much as it strikes us as unique and odd that we are now looking to help a person and society who just a few years ago the President of the United States called the evil empire.

The point is, however, it is in our best interests to do that. We may be able some day to bring about this peace, save American lives, put America less at risk, save American dollars, and have a world that looks a whole heck of a lot more like we wanted it to look back in 1945.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleagues from New Jersey, West Virginia, and Florida for their participation.

In the concluding moment here, let us not fail to remember, as the Nation that liberated Berlin in 1945, that sustained Berlin in 1948, that has, as my colleague from New Jersey reflected so wonderfully, exported its most viable products, its ideals and its idealism throughout the world, expects a lot from this summit. The American people expect much; the world population wants much; and all of us who hope for peace know that we need concrete results.

This headline, "Bush Administration Taken by Surprise as Events Unfold," must not be the hallmark of this summit. Mr. President, as Ronald Reagan was known as the great communicator, we hope you are not known as the great hesitator.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

"ETHICS" BILL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CRANE] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, on Thursday we are scheduled to take up an ethics reform/pay raise bill.

The underlying premise behind the Government Ethics Reform Act of 1989 is that if we reform our errant ways, we are entitled to a 25-percent pay raise in 1991. To link these two issues is, to me, indefensible. Moreover, I would challenge both what is being defined as unethical behaviour as well as the package designed to guarantee ethical reform.

Outside earned income, with some interesting exceptions, is assumed to be unethical. The Founding Fathers, who never anticipated the concept of career politicians, would have deemed this absurd. They wanted citizen legislators, who derived their primary source of income outside of government, to bring some of that private sector experience and talent to Washington in the service of their country.

To be sure, times and institutions change. On the other hand, lecturing for a livelihood is a time-honored profession. I lectured professionally to help pay my way through graduate school. And with six children at the time, there is no way I could have afforded the luxury of teaching history at Bradley University without substantially augmenting my salary through outside lectures.

After coming to Congress, my wife and I had two more children. Faced with the expenses we had as a family, I continued lecturing professionally. But working overtime this way came at the cost of being away from my family more than I liked. Yet my family situation dictated it. Those with no children or grown children were under no pressure to Moonlight. It varies from Member to Member.

I do not favor any limitation whatsoever on outside earned income. With full disclosure requirements, it is a matter to be resolved between a Member and his constituents. If any Member were invited to Japan and paid $2 million for a couple of speeches, I can assure you that it would do more than raise the eyebrows of any Member's staunchest supporters back home.

Then again, all the major media personalities—some with million dollar salaries—dwarf Members of Congress in the amounts thay are paid in the form of honoraria, and yet they have not come under public condemnation for it.

But there are other actions this bill implies are unethical. Why should a physician or dentist, for example, be required to give up his practice as a condition for holding a seat in Congress. Yet, that is required under this so-called ethics bill.

Somehow, teaching—another honorable profession—is exempt from this prohibition. As a former history professor, I am flattered. Yet, I don't understand the rationale behind viewing the practice of medicine as unethical while teaching is not.

On the question of this package guaranteeing ethical reform, there are some provisions that jump out at one that raise questions. For example, there is no cap on spousal honoraria. I look forward to traveling with my wife and listening to her speak for a change. This will permit an enormous increase in our family income, on the one hand, and permit me more time on the golf course at these conventions on the other. This kind of ethical reform I could get used to.

Then there is no ban on royalties from book sales. Recent Ethics Committee investigations have focused on alleged improprieties in putting book deals together to circumvent the misguided restrictions on outside earned income. Why should royalties from book sales be classified any differently than earning honoraria for speaking engagements? One of the charges against former Speaker Jim Wright was that his staff "suggested" to organizations, once the Speaker had reached his limit in honoraria, book purchases in lieu of honoraria. This would still be permissible in this "ethics reform" package. What ethical objective is being served by pressuring Members into creative financing of this nature? Why not be up front? With full disclosure of outside earnings, let that most important jury—each Member's constituency—render their judgment on their Member at the ballot box.

And for those Members who complain that only the powerful Members of Congress get invited to speak, would not the same apply to the popularity of one's book? Is this not the basis for most of the criticism Sarah Ferguson has received over her controversial budgie books? Of course, Fergie doesn't have to stand for election, but there should be a lesson there for those who do.

Another questionable ethical reform has to do with the repeal of the grandfather clause enabling Members who came to Congress before 1980 to retire and keep all the money they have in their campaign accounts. I have not favored this double standard for Members. If it is wrong for one, it should be wrong for all. We shouldn't have two classes of Members. The ethics package does indeed call for an end to the grandfather clause. It states that a Member can only retire with what he has in his campaign account at the time of passage of the bill and that he must retire before January 1993 to be able to keep this money personally.

Since the 25-percent pay raise would go into effect in January 1991, why didn't the reformers make that the deadline for pocketing one's campaign kitty? According to "Roll Call" it was designed to recruit support for the package from some of the senior Members of Congress.

Our retirement pay is based upon the 3 highest years of earnings on the Government payroll. With a 7.9-percent cost-of-living adjustment in 1990, and then a 25-percent pay hike in 1991, these Members could significantly enhance their retirement benefits while still keeping handsome amounts in their campaign accounts.

Is this kind of ethical reform really designed to inspire confidence on the part of American voters?

Frankly, I think the questions should be separated. No voter is going to fall for this excuse for a pay raise: namely, either perpetuate unethical practices at no expense to the taxpayer, or enact ethical reforms at the expense of a tax increase to the voters. If, in fact, this package constitutes ethical reform, pass it on its own merits. If Congress deems a pay raise in order, vote for it on its own merits.

Contrary to what some of my colleagues believe, I can support a pay raise. And it can be funded at no increased cost to the taxpayers. Take it out of the franking allowance. Simultaneously, lift all restrictions on outside earned income, with full and timely disclosure, and let the folks back home be the judge as to the propriety.

REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

In compliance with Public Law 601, 79th Congress, title III, Regulation of Lobbying Act, section 308(b), which provides as follows:

(b) All information required to be filed under the provisions of this section with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate shall be compiled by said Clerk and Secretary, acting jointly, as soon as practicable after the close of the calendar quarter with respect to which such information is filed and shall be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate jointly submit their report of the compilation required by said law and have included all registrations and quarterly reports received.

REGISTRATIONS

The following registrations were submitted for the third calendar quarter 1989:

(NOTE.—The form used for reporting is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective headings. This page (Page 1) is designed to supply identifying data.)

PLEASE RETURN 1 ORIGINAL TO: THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, OFFICE OF RECORDS AND REGISTRATION, 1036 LONGWORTH HOUSE OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20515

PLEASE RETURN 1 ORIGINAL TO: THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE, OFFICE OF PUBLIC RECORDS, 232 HART SENATE OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

PLACE AN "X" BELOW THE APPROPRIATE LETTER OR FIGURE IN THE BOX AT THE RIGHT OF THE "REPORT" HEADING BELOW:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

Is this an Amendment? ☐ YES ☐ NO

IDENTIFICATION NUMBER

NOTE on ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)

(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.

(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

☐ CHECK IF ADDRESS IS DIFFERENT THAN PREVIOUSLY REPORTED

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports. ☐

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed.)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

QUARTERLY REPORTS*

*All alphanumeric characters and monetary amounts refer to receipts and expenditures on page 2, paragraphs D and E of the Quarterly Report Form.

The following quarterly reports were submitted for the third calendar quarter 1989:

(NOTE.—The form used for reporting is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective headings. This page (Page 1) is designed to supply identifying data, and Page 2 deals with financial data.)

PLEASE RETURN 1 ORIGINAL TO: THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, OFFICE OF RECORDS AND REGISTRATION, 1036 LONGWORTH HOUSE OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20515

PLEASE RETURN 1 ORIGINAL TO: THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE, OFFICE OF PUBLIC RECORDS, 232 HART SENATE OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

PLACE AN "X" BELOW THE APPROPRIATE LETTER OR FIGURE IN THE BOX AT THE RIGHT OF THE "REPORT" HEADING BELOW:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

REPORT

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER
	1st	2d	3d	4th
(Mark one square only)

IDENTIFICATION NUMBER

Is this an Amendment? ☐ YES ☐ NO

NOTE on ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)

(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.

(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

☐ CHECK IF ADDRESS IS DIFFERENT THAN PREVIOUSLY REPORTED

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have ☐ terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed.)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

STATEMENT OF VERIFICATION

[Omitted in printing]

NOTE on ITEM "D."—(a) IN GENERAL. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—§ 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In general. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multi-purpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In general. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.

D. RECEIPTS (INCLUDING CONTRIBUTIONS AND LOANS):

Fill in every blank. If the answer to any numbered item is "None," write "NONE" in the space following the number.

QUARTERLY REPORTS*

*All alphanumeric characters and monetary amounts refer to receipts and expenditures on page 2, paragraphs D and E of the Quarterly Report Form.

The following reports for the second calendar quarter of 1989 were received too late to be included in the published reports for that quarter:

(NOTE.—The form used for report is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective headings. This page (Page 1) is designed to supply identifying data, and Page 2 deals with financial data.)

PLEASE RETURN 1 ORIGINAL TO: THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, OFFICE OF RECORDS AND REGISTRATION, 1036 LONGWORTH HOUSE OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20515

PLEASE RETURN 1 ORIGINAL TO: THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE, OFFICE OF PUBLIC RECORDS, 232 HART SENATE OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

PLACE AN "X" BELOW THE APPROPRIATE LETTER OR FIGURE IN THE BOX AT THE RIGHT OF THE "REPORT" HEADING BELOW:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

Year: 19 . . . . .

REPORT

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER
	1st	2d	3d	4th
(Mark one square only)

IDENTIFICATION NUMBER

Is this an Amendment? ☐ YES ☐ NO

NOTE on ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)

(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.

(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

☐ CHECK IF ADDRESS IS DIFFERENT THAN PREVIOUSLY REPORTED

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports. ☐

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed.)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

STATEMENT OF VERIFICATION

[Omitted in printing]

NOTE on ITEM "D."—(a) IN GENERAL. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—§ 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In general. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multi-purpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In general. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.

D. RECEIPTS (INCLUDING CONTRIBUTIONS AND LOANS):

Fill in every blank. If the answer to any numbered item is "None," write "NONE" in the space following the number.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

THE ELECTORAL PROCESS IN NICARAGUA

HON. ROBERT J. LAGOMARSINO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, A recent commentary by Allen Weinstein published in the November 10 edition of the Wall Street Journal offers an insightful analysis of the electoral process in Nicaragua and the threat to elections represented by Daniel Ortega's decision to cancel the cease-fire.

Mr. Weinstein is president of the Center for Democracy, which is one of the few officially recognized organizations tasked with observing the electoral process in Nicaragua. I believe his comments bear serious attention.

[From the Wall Street Journal, Nov. 10, 1989]

SAVING THE NICARAGUAN ELECTION

(By Allen Weinstein)

The fate of next February's Nicaraguan election may be decided today at the United Nations, as representatives of the Sandinista government, the anti-Sandinista resistance and the Honduran government meet with U.N. and Organization of American States officials. The discussions, which began yesterday, will focus on prospects and preconditions for the voluntary demobilization of the Honduran-based Contra rebels, as called for in the Central American peace accords.

President Daniel Ortega's announcement that the Nicaraguan army would discontinue its cease-fire—agreed to by earlier Sandinista-Contra negotiations—has thrust the prospect of full-scale renewed warfare between the two sides squarely into the middle of the current election campaign. Should the electoral climate within Nicaragua become re-militarized, it is difficult to see how a calm, civilian-run election campaign and vote can take place.

Prior to Mr. Ortega's announcement, the mood among ordinary Nicaraguan voters in recent weeks seemed upbeat, despite the backdrop of a decade-long civil war. Registration figures were high (over 1,750,000 registered voters—more than 90 % of those eligible) and enthusiasm for the electoral process ran even higher.

The shift from indifference to active enthusiasm is especially encouraging if one considers that several serious electoral problems remain unresolved: the presence of armed soldiers at some polling places as "electoral police"; uniformed paramilitary troops in similar roles at many more polling places (a change into civilian grab and storage of the AK-47s would deal with this problem on election day); and an unbalanced allocation of media time to the opposition. these are negotiable issues, of course, but the full renewal of large-scale military action in the midst of an election campaign—with its obvious capacity for intimidating voters—must also be negotiable.

What steps taken in New York today might save the fragile Nicaraguan electoral process form falling victim to a fully renewed civil war? Three seem particularly appropriate within any overall settlement. If accepted by both sides in the framework of a demobilization agreement, they could put the election back on track.

(1) Part of any demobilization and repatriation agreement should include a provision for special registration of Contras and their families planning to return to Nicaragua so that they can still participate fully in the electoral process. Our center's efforts to raise this issue—and the related one of registering the Nicaraguan refugees now living elsewhere in Central America—failed to elicit meaningful government interest when broached on a number of occasions in recent months. Nevertheless, an absolute commitment that the Contras can exchange bullets for ballots would ease the road to reconciliation in Nicaragua.

(2) Both the government and the opposition coalition—headed by presidential candidate Violeta Chamorro—have identified various towns, villages and voting places as trouble spots where they claim their representatives have been harassed or worse. Why not organize unarmed, joint patrols of observers from the U.N. and the OAS, accompanied by government and opposition representatives, to cover such areas? This could be done after the fashion of joint U.S., British, French and Soviet patrols in Austria during a pivotal postwar period in that country's history. If reducing the level of fear is a necessary precondition to holding fair and free elections in Nicaragua, these "electoral patrols" could be a valuable aid to the process.

(3) The immediate goal of reaching agreements such as those above would be to strengthen the "confidence-building measures" required to make fully credible both Contra demobilization and the overall Nicaraguan electoral process. One byproduct could be the opening of bilateral discussions between the governments of Nicaragua and the U.S. on restoring full diplomatic relations between the two countries and on other issues of pressing concern to both parties.

Assuming the good faith of all those involved in the Nicaraguan electoral process, it is difficult to see how any group or side loses through adopting these proposals. But without steps that ease the current confrontation and raise the level of trust on all sides, it will be difficult for the Nicaraguan election of 1990 to serve as the catalyst for democratization, economic development and national reconciliation—all of which that embittered and impoverished nation desperately needs.

UNITED NATIONS FINDS NICARAGUA OPEN-MINDED AND FLEXIBLE ON ELECTION PREPARATIONS

HON. GEO. W. CROCKETT, JR.

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. CROCKETT. Mr. Speaker, from time to time I am inserting in the RECORD, for the information of my colleagues, objective information about the Nicaraguan elections.

Today I would like to share with my colleagues the conclusions of a U.N. report issued October 17 entitled "Evolution of the Electoral Process in Nicaragua: First Report of the United Nations Observer Mission to Verify the Electoral Process in Nicaragua to the Secretary General."

Following the concluding section of that report, I include a Center for International Policy press release on the report entitled "U.N. Finds Nicaragua Open-Minded and Flexible on Election Preparations."

This information constitutes further encouragement to believe that the election will be free and fair.

The material follows:

VI. CONCLUSIONS

49. The present report covers the period between 5 July, the date of the exchange of letters between the Government of Nicaragua and the Secertary-General of the United Nations by which the Mission was established, and the end of September. During that period, all levels of the electoral authority were put in place, and the main stages in the organization of parties and coalitions were completed.

50. With regard to the composition of the electoral authority, and despite the fact that the make-up of certain electoral bodies may not entirely meet the opposition's expectations or demands, the fact of the matter is that an objective analysis of the specific decisions adopted by the Supreme Electoral Council reveals that to date no undue benefits have accrued to FSLN. There is no reason to infer that partiality has been shown towards that party; rather, there is appreciable concern on the part of members of the Council to ensure the broadest possible participation by political groups and citizens in the electoral process and to take a broad-based and flexible approach against the background of a receptive general attitude. Since, however, the question of the impartiality of the electoral authority is central to the electoral process, the Mission will continue to moniter, on a permanent basis, any decisions adopted.

51. The process of organizing political parties and coalitions cannot be considered to have been completed altogether, because candidates still have to be nominated for the municipal councils and the regional councils of the autonomous regions of the Atlantic coast. But the most important phase, the acquisition of legal status by a number of parties (a controversial issue in the past), has reached a satisfactory conclusion. There have been no problems with regard to the formation of coalitions or the registration of candidates for the executive and legislative branches. The only significant complaint on the part of certain opposition parties is about the composition and the aforementioned decisions of the Council of Political Parties, decisions that were later rescinded by the Supreme Electoral Council.

52. The parties began political and electoral activity at an early stage, and already there have been certain differences of opinion concerning the mobilization of political parties and campaigning, items that come under the Mission's terms of reference. Perhaps the most sensitive issue has to do with mobilization for reservist military service. On this and on other matters referred to in the report, the sole aim has been to outline the main aspects of the disagreement and the positions of the parties, inasmuch as the items are still under discussion. As suggested in the text, some of them will be dealt with in later reports.

U.N. FINDS NICARAGUA "OPEN-MINDED AND FLEXIBLE" ON ELECTION PREPARATIONS

The United Nations' election-monitoring unit in Nicaragua reported on October 17 that the Nicaraguan electional authority has granted "no undue benefits" or partiality to the governing Sandinista party and has extended legal status to nine more opposition parties, making a total of twenty legal opposition parties in the country. The acquisition of legal status for these parties, the UN reported, has "reached a satisfactory conclusion."

Rather than favoring the Sandinista party, the Supreme Electoral Council's decisions on important issues do "not reveal bias towards the governing party. On the contrary, the decisions referred to show the Council as open-minded and flexible and its decisions seem rather to benefit the opposition parties." The decisions included extending the deadlines for opposition representation on regional and local electoral commissions and for appointment of opposition poll-watchers.

Also, the UN said, the electoral council relaxed the rules for formation of political parties and for foreign political contributions. It said that various controversies have arisen over mobilization of political parties and campaigning. Among these, "perhaps the most sensitive issue has to do with mobilization for reservist military service."

In an August agreement with the political parties, the government promised to defer conscription for the "Patriotic Military Service" until next March. However, it has continued conscription for reservist military service, which opposition parties have labeled a violation of the agreement. The government says it only meant to defer active-duty service. Commenting, the UN report noted a Defense Ministry pledge not to draft into the reserves any leaders or activists of the political parties until next March. It termed the wording of the joint declaration of the government and the political parties on conscription "infelicitous" and "regrettable" for its lack of precision.

The UN concluded, "With regard to the composition of the electoral authority, and despite the fact that the make-up of certain electoral bodies may not entirely meet the opposition's expectations or demands, the fact of the matter is that an objective analysis of the specific decisions adopted by the Supreme Electoral Council reveals that to date no undue benefits have accrued to FSLN. There is no reason to infer that partiality has been shown towards that party; rather, there is appreciable concern on the part of members of the Council to ensure the broadest possible participation by political groups and citizens in the electoral process and to take a broad-based and flexible approach against the background of a receptive general attitude. Since, however, the question of the impartiality of the electoral authority is central to the electoral process, the Mission will continue to monitor, on a permanent basis, any decisions adopted."

The report was the first issued by the United Nations Observer Mission to verify the electoral process in Nicaragua (ONUVEN in Spanish acronym). Establishment of the mission was proposed by the five Central American presidents at the summit meeting in Tesoro Beach, El Salvador last February.

UN Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar named former U.S. Attorney General and Secretary of Defense Elliott Richardson as his personal representative to oversee the mission's activities. On October 18, Richardson arrived in Managua to begin a five-day visit in order to, in his words, "personally assess the progress of the electoral process."

Commenting on the U.S. Congress's decision to spend $9 million on the Nicaraguan electoral process and opposition, Richardson said, "The nine million will help the election process in a number of ways including strengthening the electoral machinery whereby the election itself is conducted.

"Some of the funds will also support the opposition parties," Richardson added, declining comment on that decision.

Richardson was scheduled to meet with the Supreme Electoral Council, President Daniel Ortega and opposition presidential candidates, and Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo. He was also to visit Granada, Leon, and Matagalpa to observe voter registration.

The Nicaraguan mission is the UN's first observation of an election in a sovereign country; its previous monitoring was of emerging colonies and territories.

DON'T EVEN IGNORE THEM

HON. DAVID R. OBEY

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, sometimes the only thing that stands between the kooks and the oblivian they really deserve is the attention they get from the media or the politicians.

Recently, Gregory Johnson, who burned the flag at the Republican Convention showed his willingness to go to any absurd extent to generate attention for himself and his views. The Milwaukee Sentinel this week has written an editorial which in a clearheaded fashion tells us wisely that the most effective thing we can do to fight the destructiveness that some of these oddballs display is to deny them the attention and the publicity that they are so cynically seeking.

I commend the Sentinel editorial to my colleagues:

DON'T EVEN IGNORE THEM

Whatever the fate of federal legislation banning desecration of the American flag, United States attorneys have found a way to keep Gregory Johnson from making a martyr of himself over the issue.

Johnson was the man who was arrested for burning a flag at the 1984 Republican National Convention in Dallas, an act which led to a US Supreme Court finding that the Texas law under which he was charged violated his freedom of speech and was unconstitutional.

Congress subsequently approved a federal law forbidding physical desecration of the flag, which was designed to avoid constitutional deficiencies in the Texas statute. As expected, Johnson and three others challenged that law in a public flag burning demonstration in Washington, D.C.

US Atty. Jay Stephens dismissed the charges against Johnson, however, saying the evidence for his arrest was insufficient. Showing his true colors, Johnson called the dismissal "an act of cowardice."

Being pushed out of the spotlight really got his goat. And his petulance clearly shows that he, like many involved in similar incidents, are more concerned with calling attention to themselves than in any constitutional principle.

Some might argue that if Congress had passed a constitutional amendment banning flag destruction, this situation would not have occurred. But that's not so. Rather, it would have added to the misguided sense of importance flag burners attach to themselves.

Indeed, the next step may be for Johnson and his ilk to fight for a constitutional amendment requiring that all flag burners be put to trial.

The free speech issue involved, of course, is important. And flag desecration is a despicable act. But there is no sense tearing the Constitution apart to satisfy the egos of every reprobate who otherwise would be distinguished only by his own insignificance.

To borrow a phrase from Yogi Berra: Don't even ignore them.

H.R. 3630, THE EMERGENCY DRUG ABUSE TREATMENT EXPANSION ACT OF 1989

HON. WILLIAM E. DANNEMEYER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, the House passed H.R. 3630, the Emergency Drug Abuse Treatment Expansion Act of 1989 under suspension of the rules. There are some aspects of this legislation with which I disagree, notably the dilution of the State block grant through the creation of several new Federal programs authorized at $250 million to administer drug abuse treatment funds. Along with many of my colleagues on this side of the aisle, I want to retain the integrity of the current block grant so that States will enjoy the maximum amount of flexibility in applying Federal resources to the drug problem. The drug problem, as we all know, varies dramatically from State to State. The block grant approach recognizes that State officials are better equipped to address these needs than are Federal bureaucrats inside the beltway.

Having said that, I would like to draw my colleagues' attention to a provision which will greatly expand the level of voluntary HIV testing at drug treatment centers across America. The inclusion of this language in H.R. 3630 reflects the growing recognition that HIV testing, partner notification, and counseling should be a routine part of the health care services offered to high risk individuals, and to those who have sexual relations with these individuals or live in areas with significant pools of HIV infection. Glasnost, it seems, may have arrived in this arena of policymaking, and I welcome that development.

Intravenous drug abuse and the rapid increase in the use of crack cocaine, we all know, have contributed to the spread of HIV infection among persons who use drugs or who are the sexual partners of those who do. Especially on the east coast, intravenous drug-related AIDS is the most rapidly growing part of the epidemic. Unfortunately, in spite of the explosion of HIV infection among this group, routine HIV testing and counseling is not yet the norm at our nation's drug treatment facilities.

ROUTINE HIV TESTING AT ALL FEDERALLY-FUNDED DRUG ABUSE CLINICS

Under an agreement reached with the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Health, Mr. WAXMAN, these drug treatment centers will have to offer and encourage HIV testing and counseling to persons who use these facilities. The testing is purely voluntary, and cannot be linked to the receipt of other services offered by the clinic. The HIV counseling must include information on measures to prevent exposure to and transmission of the AIDS virus, along with information relating to the medical benefits of early diagnosis and treatment of the infection. The individuals will also have to be made aware of applicable State confidentiality and antidiscrimination laws, if any.

Voluntary HIV testing and counseling of drug abusers must be made an integral part of our drug treatment system. Study after study demonstrate the frightening spread of the HIV epidemic in drug-ravaged innercity neighborhoods across America. In many areas. AIDS now rivals drugs and homocide as the leading cause of death among young men and women. A recent study of patients admitted to the emergency room at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore in 1988 found that 28.8 percent of those who acknowledged using intravenous drugs were HIV positive, up from 21.8 percent the year before. This upward trend of infection in urban areas has been reported elsewhere and described by New York City Health Commissioner Stephen Joseph as an implosion of infection, with dire consequences for our health care system.

It is my hope that the HIV testing and counseling included in this legislation will help interrupt the spread of HIV among these vulnerable individuals.

For those who test positive, counseling will include the benefits of locating any person who the infected individual might have exposed to infection, or who might have been the source of the individual's infection. The counseling must also describe the availability of public health services to locate and counsel these individuals. Finally, infected individuals must be made aware of appropriate health care, mental health, social, and support services.

Partner notification efforts are crucial because too many drug users believe that they are not at risk. Significantly, a surprisingly high percentage of their partners do not use drugs. One study documented the sexual-behavior patterns of drug users and found that 40 percent of the women and 70 percent of the men have sex with people who do not use drugs. We need to do all we can to alert these unsuspecting individuals of their vulnerability to this fatal virus. This provision does much to guarantee that they will learn of their risk status at the earliest possible moment.

I want to thank Mr. WAXMAN for his willingness to work with me on this very important health issue.

TV NEVER LETS FACTS STAND IN THE WAY OF A GOOD STORY

HON. ANDREW JACOBS, JR.

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, truth crushed to Earth will probably not rise again on television.

But at least some correction should be included in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD inasmuch as this matter is of enormous historic proportions.

[From the Indianapolis New Times, November 1989]

CROSS OF FIRE—TV EXECS TEND NEVER TO LET THE FACTS STAND IN THE WAY OF A GOOD STORY

(By M. William Lutholtz)

I was elated when I heard last January that NBC was working on Cross of Fire, a TV mini-series about the life of D.C. Stephenson. Stephenson, of course, was the Grand Dragon of Indiana's Ku Klux Klan. In that capacity he quite literally controlled Indianapolis policies during a brief time in the 1920s.

At first I couldn't believe it. I, after all, have spent ten years conducting research for a biography of Stephenson, which I've finished. Typically, whenever I explain my project to people, they stare back at me blankly, as if to say, "Well, some people are fascinated by obscurity." So here was vindication of a sort—a major television network had agreed that Stephenson was worth talking about!

My elation quickly faded, however. Who was doing this project for the small screen? And how was it that, in ten years of research, I had never crossed paths with this person?

I started calling librarians and other researchers, asking if they'd heard of anyone working on a Stephenson screenplay. They had not. Hmm, I thought. Well, maybe the NBC screenwriter simply hadn't announced his project to the librarians.

I went back to the Indiana Historical Society, where key Stephenson materials must be signed before they can be examined. Again, no one had seen any TV guys working with the historical papers.

Had someone decided to write a screenplay based merely on the scant amount of previously published materials about Stephenson? At first I couldn't believe that anyone would do that. There is so little out there about that strange, bombastic man. Surely not enough to work into a four-hour mini-series!

HELLO, HOLLYWOOD? . . . HELLO?

I called NBC. But their publicity office in California was reluctant to discuss the project over the telephone. I wrote a letter, detailing my research and expressing my interest in sharing my information with them since they were still in the production stage. No reply.

A few days later, when I learned the name of the producer, I wrote directly to him, repeating the officer I'd made to NBC. More silence.

In the spring, I learned that the miniseries would be filmed in Kansas—historic Indiana shooting locations having been rejected by the production company.

Eventually, I got my hands on a copy of the Cross of Fire script—through neither NBC nor the producer—and soon realized why they had not replied to my offers of historical assistance. Theirs was to be a history from Hollywood, not from Indiana, nor, for that matter, from facts. Reality need not apply.

In fairness to the Cross of Fire script, it could have been worse. The writer had decided to leave the story set in Indiana in the 1920s. And he had focused on Stephenson's relationship with Madge Oberholtzer, the 28-year-old Statehouse employee who died of self-administered poison after Stephenson abducted her and attacked her sexually on a train bound for Hammond.

NEW, IMPROVED REALITY!

But in typically Hollywood style, the truth just didn't provide enough of that, oh, I don't know, certain something—the kind of thing that captures people's imaginations and causes them to tune in even at the expense of Married with Children or Unsolved Mysteries. A little sprucing up was needed:

Three real-life humans—Asa Smith, the Oberholtzer family attorney; Will Remy, the Marion County Prosecutor; and Stanley Hill, Madge's boyfriend—were condensed into one composite character. The fellow forms the third side of a romantic triangle with Madge and Stephenson and, after Madge's death, decides to get revenge by prosecuting her killer.

Madge herself benefits handsomely from NBC's make-over. In reality, she was just a downtown office worker. She ran a lending library for school teachers. But in the script she becomes a sort of Mother Teresa, driving out to the farms of poor black sharecroppers to teach children to read.

Boyd Gurley, the hard-drinking, office-bound editor of the Indianapolis Times, benefits similarly. On TV, he becomes "Boyd Curley," a crusading reporter/editor—sort of a cross between Lou Grant and Joe Rossi—who covers the trial and wins a Pultizer! The Times did, in fact, win a Pulitzer in 1928, but the award was for its subsequent investigation of the Klan, not its coverage of the trial. And the paper won the award—not Boyd. It's ironic that the reporters and editors who did the actual work on the story and who were not named by the Pulitzer committee back in 1928 continue to reside in obscurity in 1989.

Most glaringly of all, Cross of Fire assumes that the Indiana Klan of the 1920s was the same as the Klan of today—a group of white supremacists bent on making life rough for blacks. But in truth, there were no lynchings of blacks in Indiana during Stephenson's reign as head of the Indiana Klan. Stephenson was smoother than that. His group was a political organization, closely aligned with the state's Republican party. Most blacks in the state were Republican at that time ("Mr. Lincoln's party"), and so they didn't have to be terrorized into voting the "right" way. In fact, most acts of Klan violence in Indiana during the 1920s were directed against other whites—Democrats, Catholics, and Jews—not blacks. TV viewers, therefore, will continue to see the Klan as merely the "black man's problem" rather than as a universal scourge capable of leaping across racial boundaries. Perhaps network executives nixed the idea of portraying white Klansmen beating up on other whites because they thought it "too strange" for television audiences, who of course are used to thinking in stereotypes.

UPDATE! UPDATE! UPDATE: KEEPING THE STORY CURRENT

Just as the movie Mississippi Burning tried to rewrite the history of the FBI, Cross of Fire tries to rewrite a bizarre piece of Indiana's history to fit current moral notions about the Klan. Two black witnesses who testified at the trial against Stephenson are transformed into the heroes of the TV story since their testimony helps put the Grand Dragon away. A nice contemporary touch, but factually wrong. Stephenson was nailed by Madge's own "deathbed declaration" and the testimony of medical experts who convinced the jury that he was directly responsible for Madge's suicide/murder.

Fortunately, there are so many things that Cross of Fire misses that the Stephenson "gold mine" of stories remains virtually untapped. There's plenty of real material left if anyone wants to do the story right. There are even real locations around Indiana where filming could be done in the very rooms where it all happened.

Unfortunately, millions will watch the NBC docudrama and walk away believing that they understand what happened to Indiana in the 1920s.

TRIBUTE TO FRANK ZACCARIA, PRINCIPAL OF THE PASSAIC COUNTY TECHNICAL AND VOCATIONAL HIGH SCHOOL

HON. ROBERT A. ROE

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join in honoring a man of great compassion and selfless ambition, Mr. Frank Zaccaria, the principal of the Passaic County Technical and Vocational High School which, I am proud to say, is located in my Eighth Congressional District of New Jersey.

Mr. Zaccaria has long recognized the value education holds for all members of society, including those with special needs and requirements. His long and distinguished career has made him one of the true leaders in the field of education both in New Jersey and around the country.

Mr. Speaker, in recognition of Frank Zaccaria's outstanding contribution to education and the way he has made his State and our Nation a better place to live, the Passaic County Technical and Vocational High School Board of Education recently voted to name the school's main auditorium in his honor. The ceremony at which this facility will officially be named the Frank D. Zaccaria Auditorium will be held on November 21, 1989, at the school.

For the RECORD, Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert the text of the Board of Education Resolution establishing this most fitting honor for Mr. Zaccaria:

RESOLUTION OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE VOCATIONAL SCHOOL IN THE COUNTY OF PASSAIC NAMING THE MAIN AUDITORIUM IN HONOR OF FRANK D. ZACCARIA

Whereas Frank D. Zaccaria has devoted nearly 19 years of his life to the Passaic County Technical and Vocational High School, and

Whereas Frank D. Zaccaria has contributed to the lives of literally thousands of students, first as a special education teacher, then coordinator, supervisor, principal, and

Whereas Frank D. Zaccaria has been instrumental in improving the image and academic soundness of the Passaic County Technical and Vocational High School, and

Whereas Frank D. Zaccaria has announced his impending retirement, and

Whereas the Board of Education of the Passaic County Technical and Vocational High School, on behalf of the entire community, wishes to express gratification to Frank D. Zaccaria for his contributions to the Passaic County Technical and Vocational High School, now, therefore, be it

Resolved, that the main auditorium at the Passaic County Technical and Vocational High School shall hereafter be known as the Frank D. Zaccaria Auditorium, and it is further

Resolved that the Superintendent shall schedule a ceremony at which time the auditorium will be dedicated to Frank D. Zaccaria, and it is further

Resolved, that a framed copy of this resolution, executed by the members of the Board of Education, the Superintendent, the Board Secretary, the Business Administrator, and the Board Attorney, shall be presented to Frank D. Zaccaria.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I would also like to insert into the RECORD a brief history of Mr. Zaccaria's distinguished career which includes a wide range of private, civic, and public duties:

TRIBUTE TO MR. FRANK ZACCARIA, PRINCIPAL OF THE PASSAIC COUNTY TECHNICAL AND VOCATIONAL HIGH SCHOOL

Frank was born in Totowa on August 8, 1930, and has been a resident of West Paterson for the past eighteen years. He attended local schools and graduated from Passaic Valley High School in 1947. At the outbreak of the Korean conflict, Frank joined the U.S. Air Force, served four years, and achieved the rank of Staff Sergeant, while serving with the European Occupation Forces in Germany and Italy.

After his discharge, he returned to civilian life and married Mary Brosnan, resumed his job at Continental Can Co., and enrolled at Seton Hall University earning a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Sociology. Frank continued his education and received a Masters Degree in Education from William Paterson College.

After 22 years in a business career, which saw him rise from a factory line worker to Production Control Manager, Frank chose to pursue a long desired career in the field of Education for the Handicapped. In 1971, he joined the staff of the Passaic County Technical and Vocational High School as a teacher of the handicapped. It wasn't long after that he was appointed to the position of Coordinator of Cooperative Industrial Education, placing handicapped students in jobs. In 1985, Frank became Supervisor of Career and Vocational Education. The Board of Education appointed Mr. Zaccaria principle of that school in January 1987.

In addition to his membership in the New Jersey Principal and Supervisors Association, the Epsilon Pi Tau Professional Society of Industrial Arts and Vocational Education the American Vocational Association, and the New Jersey Cooperative Industrial Education Coordinators Association, he was elected to "Who's Who" in American Cooperative Education in 1980.

Frank's civic activities and interests include serving as Vice President of the Board of Trustees of Tombrook College for five years, Secretary to the West Paterson Planning Board, member of the Passaic County Boy Scouts of America's Executive Board, one of the founders of the Italian American Forum, member of the West Paterson Bi-Centennial Committee, and membership in the West Paterson American Legion Post #238.

He has been an elected councilman of the West Paterson governing body since 1973, having held the various positions of Council President, Police Commission, Fire Commissioner and Finance Commissioner.

He and Mary are members of Our Lady of Pompeii Church in Paterson. Their five children, Frank X., Kathleen and her husband Richard Dellanno, Karyn, Mary, and Pamela, are the delight of their lives and a lovely tribute to their 33 years of married life.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it is most apparent that Frank is a self-made man, who turned from a successful business career to re-channel his efforts into a career where his love of knowledge could be passed on to others. Education is the most precious commodity we can pass on to our children, and it is important to remember that education must be flexible to meet the needs of everyone who desires to learn. Schools such as Passaic County Vo-Tech give students an option, allowing them to learn valuable and much needed job skills for New Jersey's booming economy, while still providing a solid background in the traditional studies thus allowing them to continue their education beyond high school.

Frank Zaccaria has been intimately involved in the school both as an instructor and administrator for 15 years. He is a concerned educator, one dedicated not merely to supervising children while their parents work, but to a complete, well rounded education where the parents are involved in the process as the students. Mr. Speaker, the world today is a demanding one, but if we can find men and women like Frank Zaccaria. who care enough to prepare our youth to be active and productive in it, then I am confident we will leave our communities and our country in very capable hands.

CAPRI CONFERENCE

HON. BOB McEWEN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. McEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I want to call attention today to the groundbreaking cancer research which is being conducted everyday at a private research center located in America's heartland of southern Ohio. I am speaking of the Hipple Cancer Research Center in Dayton, OH.

Because of the pioneering research efforts of the Hipple Cancer Research Center, Dayton, OH, its director, Dr. Martin J. Murphy, Jr., was asked recently by the International Menarini Foundation of Milan, Italy, to organize a conference on blood cell growth factors. This meeting, held in Capri, Italy, was attended by distinguished scientists from around the world to pool knowledge and report on discoveries in this revolutionary field at the leading edge of molecular biology.

Blood cell growth factors are naturally occurring proteins in the human body that control the production of blood cells in the bone marrow. Regulation of the production of blood cells has long been the hematologist's holy grail," according to Dr. David W. Golde, chief of hematology/oncology at UCLA School of Medicine. The conference brought this lofty goal into sight with profound implications for the understanding and treatment of cancer, AIDS, kidney disease, and a host of other life-threatening maladies.

The clinical applications of the discoveries reported at the Capri Conference will transform the practice of medicine into the next century, and in the judgment of at least one scientist, "these discoveries are a revolution in medicine equal to antibiotics."

Think of having the capability to cause your body to manufacture an abundance of red blood cells before surgery go that your own blood can be stored for your transfusions when necessary. It eliminates the fear of contracting AIDS or other blood-borne infections.

Think of the boon to cancer and AIDS patients it is to be able to overcome the toxic effects of powerful drugs used to successfully combat these dreaded diseases. What a far superior quality of life is afforded rheumatoid arthritis sufferers who, because of the severe anemia that often accompanies that condition, were formerly unable to undergo needed surgery.

Imagine a substance that turns inactive white blood cells into what might be termed "killer cells" that can recognize and destroy melanoma, a particularly aggressive form of skin cancer.

All of this and more is possible with the use of blood cell growth factors. Some factors are already approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for clinical trials, and others are on their way. On the business side, the impact of the blood cells growth factors, because of their vast and fundamental implications for clinical medicine, portends a boom for biotechnology firms. Biotechnology companies synthesize the proteins after they have been identified and purified in research laboratories.

Supported by both Federal Government funds and contributions from the private sector, the Hipple Cancer Research Center identified and partially purified a blood cell growth factor, G-CSF. It is now in clinical trials, giving a new lease on life to cancer patients worldwide. Scientists at Hipple are currently working on still another factor called Meg-CSF. Meg-CSF regulates the production of platelets, the clotting mechanism of the blood, and will prevent the life-threatening bleeding episodes that so often accompany radiation and chemotherapy used to fight cancer.

Liver cancer claims the lives of more people than any other form of cancer. The Hipple Cancer Research Center has recently been awarded a 2-year, $500,000 grant by the National Cancer Institute to investigate the means to detect and cure liver cancer by the use of monoclonal antibodies. The study will involve three different but related uses of monoclonal antibodies: diagonsing the tumor, locating it within the body and destroying the tumor. Subsequent research may lead to the treatment of liver cancer by antibodies that will be armed with a poisonous, radioactive warhead. In this way, when the antibody specifically links to the liver cancer cell, it will bring along with it a warhead that will kill the tumor.

The liver cancer project resulted from a collaboration between the Hipple Cancer Research Center and the Shanghai Institute of Cell Biology in China. This is another instance of the impact that the Hipple Cancer Research Center has on the international scientific community.

Hipple has been at the forefront of collaborating with top researchers from all over the world, not just China. However, as you can imagine, the work of these Chinese scientists: Dr. Zhao-geng, Dr. De-Lin Du, and Dr. Wei Dai, has become even more critical since the Chinese Government's massacre in Tiannemen Square on June 5 of this year. I am happy to have been able to assist these fine scientists in the past so they could come to the United States and contribute their talents to the cutting-edge research at Hipple.

The cancer center's research benefits those nearest it—the people of Ohio. But as a stone cast into a pond generates ripples in an ever-widening, and ultimately, all-encompassing circle, so do the center's exciting and vital discoveries touch all the peoples of the world.

SMALL BUSINESS REHABILITATION RELIEF ACT

HON. JIM MOODY

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. MOODY. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join my colleague from Wisconsin, Senator HERB KOHL, in introducing the Small Business Rehabilitation Relief Act of 1989. This bill authorizes a refundable tax credit to help small businesses engaged in operating a public accommodation defray costs incurred in making them accessible to the disabled. The tax credit is also authorized to encourage small businesses to make reasonable accommodations to the needs of disabled employees or customers.

Our bill is an outgrowth of Senate debate on the Americans with Disabilities Act, S. 933. The ADA would bar discrimination against our largest minority—the 43 million Americans with physical or mental disabilities. S. 933 was approved by the Senate on September 7 by an overwhelming 76 to 8 vote.

I agree with the objectives of the ADA, which builds on our long-held notions of civil liberties to ensure that Americans are not denied access to employment or public accommodations simply because they are disabled.

The ADA has been aptly characterized as a bill of rights for disabled Americans, many of whom are frustrated in their efforts to hold jobs and pay taxes by antiquated attitudes equating disability with lack of ability.

Title I of the Senate-passed ADA (S. 933) would require small businesses with 15 or more employees to make reasonable efforts to remove access barriers to disabled employees.

Title III of the Senate-passed ADA would bar discrimination against the disabled in areas of public accommodations, including retail businesses and other private entities that serve the public, such as grocery stores, pharmacies, and so on. There is no size-related threshold to this section, which is broader in scope than the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

As a society, we ought to be willing to bear the costs of providing access to the disabled. But we should also recognize that there may be substantial costs to very small businesses in opening up to the disabled. As a matter of basic public policy, we should provide very small businesses both with an incentive to improve access and a means of offsetting such expenses, particularly if we move forward with legislation such as the ADA.

The bill I am introducing with Senator KOHL addresses these concerns. It would authorize a refundable tax credit for expenses incurred by small businesses in complying with requirements for providing public accessibility for disabled individuals to such businesses—as currently proposed under title III of S. 933.

The bill would also authorize the refundable tax credit to small businesses for compliance with title I of the Senate-passed version of the ADA, which deals with employment.

Eligible expenses for the credit would be those for the purpose of removing barriers to access by the disabled, or for those incurred in accommodating the needs of disabled employees.

Eligible businesses would be those with no more than 30 employees or with annual gross receipts of not more than $4,000,000.

The credit would be 80 percent of expenses from $250 to $4,000. Thus, the maximum credit is $3,000. In order to ensure that there is a serious effort at improving access, the credit would in effect require businesses to pay a $250 deductible to qualify for the full $3,000 credit.

Title I of the Senate-passed ADA would exempt small business of fewer than 15 employees from coverage. It's important to note that our bill would not in any way subject these very small businesses to coverage under title I of the Senate-passed ADA. However, if these businesses choose on their own to rehabilitate their workplace to accommodate their disabled employees, they should be eligible for the same tax credit as we provide for compliance with title III of the Senate-passed ADA, which contains no eligibility threshold.

This is a stand alone bill. It is designed to complement the mandates in the ADA by providing strong incentives for small businesses to ensure that the disabled have full access to public accommodations in this country.

The bill will also encourage small businesses which are specifically exempted from title I to voluntarily comply with those requirements as a matter of public interest. As such, our bill serves the interests of the disabled population, and assists small businesses in meeting those interests.

Any tax credit legislation such as the bill I am introducing today has the effect of reducing Federal revenues, at least in the short term. Given our current struggles to meet Gramm-Rudman targets and the need to limit revenue losses from new proposals, this bill may have to be amended in light of possible revenue effects.

Nevertheless, I hope my colleagues in the House will join me in supporting this practical approach to improving access by the disabled to the work force. The legislation is supported by the National Federation of Independent Business, the Small Business Legislative Council, the Wisconsin Restaurant Association, the Wisconsin Independent Businesses, Inc., and the Wisconsin Merchant's Federation, among others.

TRIBUTE TO DR. WILLIAM D. MOSLEY, JR.

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Dr. William Mosley, Jr. who will be honored at his retirement dinner on November 18. Dr. Mosley is being honored for his 12 years of service to the Second Baptist Church and to our community.

Dr. Mosely was ordained a Baptist Pastor on May 24, 1940. Since that time he has ministered at churches in Charleston, WV, Athens, Cincinnati, and Warren, OH. In addition to the work he has done with his congregations, he has held other positions such as, president of the Cincinnati Baptist Bible College, director of Christian Education, The Ohio Baptist General Convention, Inc., and a faculty member at the University of Cincinnati, as well as Kent State University where he taught sociology and African Studies.

Dr. Mosley has also been deeply involved in helping his community. He is the secretary of the Warren Civil Service Commission, member of the board of directors of the Trumbull County American Red Cross and member of the board of trustees of Valley Counseling Service. He is also the director of the Police/Clergy Crises Counseling Team of the Warren Police Department, and the "One Church, One Child" Minority Adoption Program of Trumbull County. Dr. Mosley has been active in many other community projects but they are too numerous to mention them all.

Moreover, Dr. Mosley should be commended for his service to his country. He is a Veteran of World War II where he served in the 372d Infantry Regiment and the 92d Infantry Division. He served for 5 years and received an honorable discharge with the rank of master sergeant. He is married to Ruth Geneva Mosley and they have 7 children and 15 grandchildren.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to thank Dr. William Mosley for his work and dedication to his community, State and country. He is a giving person who is concerned with the welfare of his fellow man. It is my honor to represent this outstanding individual.

A TRIBUTE TO CONSTANCE SOARES

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Constance Soares, a remarkable woman who dedicated her life to serving others. Connie was, among other things, a volunteer in my district office for a number of years. She will be sorely missed. I would like to include the following eulogy in the RECORD. It was written by Connie's husband, Manny Soares, and is an eloquent tribute to an extremely giving human being:

On October 17, at 4:40 pm, just moments before a massive earthquake struck the San Francisco Bay Area, Connie Soares died quietly in the Hospice Unit of Kaiser Hospital in Hayward, California. It was an appropriately grand exit for a woman who had devoted much of the last decades to relieving human tragedy and toward the uplifting of the human spirit.

Many of those who will read this eulogy will know Connie best for her six years as a dedicated member of the board of directors of the Emergency Shelter Program (E.S.P.), a Hayward shelter for battered women and their children, during a period when the shelter itself was in a time of transition and even crisis. As eventual president of the board, Connie helped the project to continue and to exist today as the oldest established shelter for battered women in the state of California. There were many other facets to Connie's life, and we hope that by sharing them we can enrich your memories of this woman who had a special place in the hearts of so many people.

Constance Emily Josephine Metcalfe Soares was born on January 6, 1921. Her father, Hugh A. Metcalfe, was a native of Carlisle, England. He was a member of the then famous D'Oyle Carte Opera Company, formed by Gilbert and Sullivan to produce their operettas, and based at the Savoy Theater, London. While performing in New York City as part of a world touring company he met and married Connie's mother, Francesca Schoenfeld, a young actress. Francesca had fled her native Austria with her mother and step-father, an anarchist. Hugh and Francesca travelled to the West Coast seeking work in the "picture business", where Connie was born. They already had a son, Charles, ten years Connie's senior.

Connie spent her childhood in San Leandro, California, where she attended public schools. As her father was already a retired actor in his sixties by the time Connie was born, the family led a poor but respectable existence in San Leandro during the Depression years.

When she graduated from San Leandro High School in 1939, Connie was awarded an academic scholarship to Stanford University by the American Association of University Women. While at Stanford, Connie missed a year of her studies when she was stricken with polio, which she successfully overcame. When she graduated near the top of her class with a degree in political science in 1944 it was made clear to her that a scholarship to law school would not by wasted on her, a woman who would no doubt get married and raise children.

Connie joined the war effort by becoming a civilian worker in the Wage and Classification Office of what was to become the Naval Civilian Personnel Command. For most of the following thirty-five years, with an extended hiatus to raise her son, Connie served the federal government, working for the Department of the Navy and the Office of Personnel Management. Her work involved the evaluation and classification of hundreds of different jobs in the federal government, from shipyard workers and aircraft mechanics to physicists and engineers, an often delicate task which she always handled with her characteristic sensitivity and tact.

Following the war, Connie had another character-forming experience; her mother became an invalid after suffering a paralyzing stroke. She supported herself and her mother on her limited civil-servant's salary. This trying experience put into motion her subsequent dedication and deep commitment to fellow human beings caught up in adverse circumstances. As she later said, "Not only is there a need to help, always with love, but above all there is the vital need of preserving the dignity of the recipient."

Connie's association with the Chanticleers, an area little theater group, brought her husband of the past thirty-five years into her life. Manuel Soares is a Hayward native and a longtime area small businessman. Their son, David F. Soares, helped Connie to realize one of her long-cherished dreams by joining the Santa Clara County District Attorney's Office as a Deputy District Attorney.

Democratic Party politics were a joyous, lifelong pursuit for Connie. Always a feminist and a progressive, Connie was often drawn to act as campaign committee member, precinct worker, coffee klatsch organizer, and fund raiser, especially for women office-seekers. Her political involvement led to participation on various boards and commissions. In the early seventies she was instrumental in the formation of the Volunteers in Public Service (V.I.P.S.) program for the Hayward Unified School District. In the late seventies and early eighties she enjoyed the close involvement with the Emergency Shelter Program mentioned earlier. After serving as the president of the board of directors of E.S.P., Connie served on the City of Hayward's Human Services Commission. Most recently, Connie was a member of the Hayward Public Library Commission.

Sadly, Connie was diagnosed as a victim of mesothelioma, a rare and difficult to detect cancer caused by exposure to asbestos fibers. Connie had been experiencing discomfort for some months preceding the diagnosis, and while the original prognosis gave her a good bit of time, her decline was precipitous. During the three and a half weeks following her diagnosis Connie was kept comfortable and free of pain. No treatments were available for her disease, and as Connie was greatly influenced by the Hospice Movement in the wake of her experiences with her own mother, no extraordinary measures were taken to prolong the inevitable. Connie's only wish was to be allowed to die with the same dignity she had always worked to preserve in the lives of others.

Connie's life can be summed-up by the motto she kept pasted to her refrigerator door: "This is no ordinary housewife you're dealing with."

FIFTY YEARS OF SERVICE TO REFUGEES AND DISPLACED PERSONS: THE LUTHERAN IMMIGRATION AND REFUGEE SERVICE

HON. STEPHEN J. SOLARZ

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. SOLARZ. Mr. Speaker, I take great pleasure in saluting the work of the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service [LIRS] on its 50th Anniversary, which we celebrate this fall. Sponsored by the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, and the Latvian Evangelical Luthern Church in America, LIRS exists soley to develop and carry out programs in response to the needs of the world's uprooted people.

Since 1939, LIRS has been responsible for the resettlement of over 15,000 refugees through partnership with Lutheran social ministry organizations, congregations and community people. Moreover, LIRS has mobilized thousands of congregational sponsors in its efforts to foster the well-being and self-sufficiency of refugees, and their full participation in American life.

The very special humanitarian commitment of this organization is demonstrated in many ways. For example, LIRS has attempted to meet the resettlement needs of newcomers from around the world, and the organization's programs have served refugees from Southeast Asia, Africa, the Near East, and Europe. In addition, LIRS has demonstrated a commitment to the most vulnerable of the refuge population, and has been deeply involved in efforts to resettle Amerasian children from Vietnam. Moreover, LIRS is one of two U.S. resettlement agencies authorized to place unaccompanied refugee children with foster families. I should also note that LIRS has not restricted its activities to refugee resettlement, but has attempted to meet the broad array of needs faced by the world's uprooted people. For example, LIRS supports social and legal service projects designed to assist undocumented aliens in the United States.

LIRS has not confined itself simply to social services activities as they are conventionally defined, but has also been involved in efforts to chart a more humane immigration and refugee policy within the United States and among the nations of the world. In the United States, this has involved, among other things, attempts to encourage Congress to expand protection for persons seeking temporary "safe haven" from civil unrest and other conditions that would threaten them if forced to return to their home countries. On the international level, LIRS advocacy has involved, among other things, efforts to encourage Southeast Asian countries to maintain the humanitarian practice of granting first asylum to Indochinese asylum-seekers arriving by boat.

In conclusion, I also want to express my appreciation to LIRS for the invaluable information, advice, and assistance its officers have provided me on the full range of refugee and immigration issues throughout my 15 years in the Congress.

TRIBUTE TO JOHN BURTON

HON. CARL D. PURSELL

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. PURSELL. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise to recognize the accomplishments of John H. Burton, of Ypsilanti, MI, who later this week will be honored by his community in a tribute dinner and establishment of an endowed scholarship in his name at Eastern Michigan University.

John Burton has played an important role in the Ypsilanti community since he became a resident in 1936. In his early days, he was associated with the auto industry, working for the Ford Rouge Plant and later at the Kaiser-Frazer Motor Co. While at Kaiser-Frazer, he served as the bargaining committee chairman for UAW Local 142, and then was tapped by the later Walter Reuther to join the staff of the International Union, UAW in 1954. John continued his career with the UAW until 1975, when at the time of his retirement, he was the regional servicing representative for several plants in southeast Michigan.

While his considerable responsibilities with the UAW were time-consuming, John sought out the opportunities to be of service to his community in a number of capacities. From 1967 to 1976, John served as the mayor of Ypsilanti and for 3 years served as a member of the Washtenaw County Board of Commissioners. His years in these positions were marked with genuine concern and appreciation for his constituents, their problems, and workable solutions. Additionally, John gave of his talents to many organizations, including the Washtenaw County United Way where he served on the executive board from 1975–78. His work with United Way earned him the "Big W" award, the county's highest recognition for services to local and State United Way organizations. Other awards include the Ford Motor Co.'s Liberty Bell, the UAW's Douglas A. Fraser Community Services Common Swift Award, Ypsilanti NAACP Recognition, the Ypsilanti Area Chamber of Commerce Distinguished Service Award, and Eastern Michigan University's Distinguished Award for Humanitarianism.

John's career in public service has not ended, however. In 1985, John was appointed to the Eastern Michigan University Board of Regents to fill an unexpired term. He was then reappointed to a full 8-year term in 1987 and in 1989 was elected chairman of the board. At age 79, when most would be enjoying a restful retirement, John continues to devote time and energy to public service and leadership to his community.

In the tribute to John this week, many will cite his accomplishments, his work on behalf of the UAW, his service to the public, and the love he shares with his family. I am pleased to join the Ypsilanti community in honoring John Burton, a man who exemplifies the qualities we know are important and worthy of recognition.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate John Burton, his wife Willie, and the members of his family on this very special day and hope that the memories of the evening and the benefits of the scholarship in his name will linger for years to come.

KILDEE HONORS REV. REUBEN E. RUSSELL

HON. DALE E. KILDEE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I want to urge my colleagues in the House of Representatives to join me in honoring Rev. Reuben E. Russell, a man who has done so much to improve the quality of life in my hometown of Flint, MI.

Born in Alabama, Reverend Russell came to Flint over 28 years ago to become the pastor of the Vernon Chapel AME Church. Throughout these years, Reverend Russell has become one of the most respected and admired persons in our community. He is a man of the highest integrity, a man who has dedicated his life to serve the Lord in improving human dignity for all people. Not only has he been a source of strength for his congregation, but it is known throughout our city that if you are in need of assistance, you need only turn to Reverend Russell. He has helped feed the hungry, house the homeless, educate the children, and care for the elderly. Indeed, Rev. Reuben Russell is a pastor for the entire city of Flint.

Mr. Speaker, Reverend Russell has truly made a difference in our city. As Pastor of the Vernon Chapel AME Church, Reverend Russell has worked diligently to improve the infrastructure of the church. In fact, through Reverend Russell's leadership, the church was able to pay off its 20-year mortgage in just over 8 years. As a man of the cloth, he has taken God's word and put it to work. Reverend Russell has also been involved in a wide diversity of community organizations, including the American Red Cross, March of Dimes, Greater Flint OIC, Concerned Pastors for Social Action, Human Relations Commission, NAACP, Greater Flint Council of Churches, Kearsley Manor Homes, Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce, and several other State and local groups. Reverend Russell also hosts a popular weekly radio show where he discusses the important issues facing our city, State, and Nation. In addition to all of their efforts in our community, Reverend and Mrs. Russell have raised four children and are proud grandparents and great-grand parents.

Reverend Russell has worked endlessly to improve the quality of life for all of our citizens, and in doing so, he has helped us all to be better people. He has shown us that we must help each other if we are to help ourselves, and that we must care about people and respect and uphold their human dignity. We in Flint consider ourselves fortunate to have a person like Reverend Russell living in our community. And as we strive to improve ourselves, we will continue to look to Reverend Russell for his spiritual support and his moral guidance.

Mr. Speaker, it is indeed fitting that we honor Reverend Russell for his 28 years of service as a dedicated pastor, and as a person who has given so much of himself to make the city of Flint a better place to live.

TRIBUTE TO FIGHTING LITTLE RED MEN FOOTBALL, INC.

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Fighting Little Redman Football, Inc. The Little Redmen are celebrating their 20th year of service to the youth of the Youngstown commuity.

The Fighting Little Redmen were organized in 1969. During those 20 years more than 3,000 children from all over the Youngstown area have participated in the program. The organization was formed with the purpose of preparing young people for their futures at Wilson High School. The teams were also formed to build a stronger team at Wilson. Since its founding the Little Redmen have won 22 championships including 1984 when all three of the Littie Redmen teams took the title. This year 105-pound team took the championship, 120-pound team was the runner-up in the championship and 90-pound was the runner-up in the playoffs.

The Fighting Little Redmen Organization has done more than just create a stronger high school football team, it has helped influence young people to excel in their future lives. Some have gone on to participate in professional sports such as Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, J. Streetchek and Bob Sikora. Other people who were involved in the program have become doctors, attorneys, and councilmen.

The Little Redmen have made generous contributions to our community. They have bought weight lifting equipment for Wilson High School and bleachers that are used at Ipes Field. Presently there are 39 trustees who support the organization. These trustees meet at Kraskusy Hall every last Thursday of the month.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the Fighting Little Redmen Football, Inc. on its 20th anniversary. The organization represents the caring our community has for its young people. I would like to thank all the people who are and have been involved in the program. It is people like this who make our community the type of place someone would want to raise a family. I am proud to represent the fine people who are part of this outstanding organization.

NO, MR. PRESIDENT, EVERYONE DOESN'T GET HEALTH CARE

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to include in the RECORD at this point a very moving column by medical and science columnist Peter Aleshire which appeared in the Oakland Tribune November 7, 1989.

It is somber reading as we approach another holiday season.

THE ILLUSION OF UNIVERSAL HEALTH CARE

President George Bush is having a press conference all about his plans for a summit with the Soviets.

I watch as I knot my tie.

Bush fields one question about health care.

"Isn't it time for a health-care summit?" asks a reporter. "Isn't it time to talk about the lack of medical care for some 37 million uninsured Americans?"

The president dismisses the questions. "It's just not true," he says. "Everyone gets care here," he adds, with a wave of his hand.

I straighten my tie, check to make sure I have a pen and a notebook, and head for my first interview of the day. I spend the next few hours with the family of 3 month-old Thomas Tenuta, who is dying ever so slowly as a result of his faltering liver.

Thomas is being poisoned by the toxins his liver is unable to remove from his blood. If he doesn't get a liver transplant in the next few months, he'll be dead.

Thomas is a beautiful baby, if you allow for the enormously swollen belly and yellowish skin.

He's a calm, cheerful soul. The nurses call him "the charmer."

His father can almost always make Thomas laugh. It's something to see Thomas laugh. His whole face lights up, his mouth opens wide, exposing his little baby gums.

Thomas is a curious baby. He constantly reaches out, trying to bring the world into the grasp of his wonderfully formed little fingers. He loves to get a good grip on his father's chest hairs. Sometimes, however, he seems startled by his own hand as it passes in front of his enormous brown eyes. He stares at his fingers, as though trying to figure out what they are and to whom they belong.

He has beautiful eyes, deep and quiet and full of trust. The whites of his eyes are actually yellow, tinted by the inability of his liver to keep his blood clear of toxins. The yellow makes his eyes look both babylike and ancient.

Thomas is likely to die because his father made the mistake of starting his own business and going without medical insurance. The family put everything they had into the business. So they had nothing left when they found it would cost $100,000 just to get Thomas onto a liver-transplant waiting list.

I head to the office.

I leaf through a report on the millions of American children without medical insurance. Since 1980, a million children have been added to the ranks of the medically uninsured because of cuts in the federal Medicaid program, according to the report by the National Association of Children's Hospitals and Related Institutions.

The study notes that a quarter of the children who are eligible don't actually enroll in Medicaid programs simply because most of the application forms are so complicated that their mothers never manage to complete the process.

No time to read the report in depth. I have another appointment in the afternoon.

Just as I get ready to leave, I got a phone call from Cindy Geiger, a 32-year-old mother of two with breast cancer. She had a mastectomy three years ago, but didn't follow-up radiation and chemotherapy because she had no medical insurance.

The cancer has come back. She needs additional treatments. She has run up $15,000 in medical bills.

Medicaid will pay for the medical care of people bankrupted by medical bills. But to qualify she has to amass another $4,000 in unpaid medical bills.

She's trapped in a strange Catch-22. She needs more medical bills to qualify for help, but the doctors and hospitals won't extend her any more credit. Meanwhile, the cancer spreads.

And then there's tomorrow. I have an appointment with Karen Ramirez, a 36-year-old woman with a teenage son and a failing liver. She has been sent home to die.

Her liver was destroyed by hepatitis. Nonetheless, she has worked all her life. She was a pharmacy technician. But her boss refused to let her join the health plan because of her health problems. He said that the insurance company would cancel the group's insurance.

She might be able to qualify for Medicaid, but Medicaid won't pay for liver transplants for adults.

This has been a very long day.

I feel helpless, ashamed. I have a folder in my filing cabinet full of such cases. I have written similar stories in the past year, mostly about people now dead.

But then, this sort of thing doesn't actually happen in the United States of America.

Just ask the president.

PRIME MINISTER BHUTTO PROVIDES LEADERSHIP

HON. DAVID R. NAGLE

OF IOWA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. NAGLE. Mr. Speaker, last night the National Assembly of Pakistan decisively beat back an attempt by the opposition to bring down the democratically elected government of Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. For all of us who believe in democracy, this is a very significant and important day.

From the outset of the Pakistan People's Party decisive victory all across Pakistan last November, the forces that had been allied with the previous military dictatorship of General Zia ul Haq have done whatever they could do to undermine not only the Prime Minister, but also the constitutional framework of the nation. It is remarkable, that under these difficult conditions, Prime Minister Bhutto has been able to achieve an extraordinary record over her first year in office—freeing all policical prisoners, remanding all sentences of the martial law courts, legalizing free trade unions and student organizations, creating a free press for the first time in Pakistan's history open to regular access of the opposition, increasing the education budget of the nation by 40 percent, and the housing and health budgets by over 50 percent, eliminating de jure discrimination against women, and taking a leading role in the international arena.

Small but strident extremists in the National Assembly have constantly challenged Benazir Bhutto's authority to govern, despite her electoral mandate. In fact, a small number of members of the national assembly have tried to keep the assembly hostage to their factional demands. It is to the Prime Minister's great credit that she has not been derailed from here national course, trying to build a strong national consensus behind new domestic priorities and the institutions of democracy. Despite the efforts of some to provoke confrontation and controversy, we must all be very pleased today that not only did Prime Minister Bhutto survive this constitutional test to her leadership, but she emerges from the test in a strengthened position.

For all of us who believe that the United States must help to shape the crest of democracy sweeping across the world, the progress in Pakistan over the last year is most encouraging. We urge the Bush administration to stand by our democratic ally, Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, and help to nuture the young democratic institutions of this great nation of 110 million people. We send to all in Pakistan who believe in liberty, justice and democracy, our congratulations on this day. We urge all Pakistanis, and especially responsible members of the opposition, to unite for the good of the Nation in a spirit of civility and good will. And to this remarkable world leader, Prime Minister Bhutto, we send our congratulations, our respect and a pledge of solid and continuing support for all she is trying to accomplish for her people.

CALCULATION OF PREMIUMS BY FARM CREDIT SYSTEM INSURANCE CORPORATION

HON. CHARLES W. STENHOLM

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join several of my colleagues including the distinguished chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, Congressman E. (KIKA) DE LA GARZA and the committee's ranking minority Member, Congressman ED MADIGAN, in supporting the passage of S. 1793.

In particular, section 6 of S. 1793, as amended, will provide the Farm Credit System Insurance Corporation with the authority to reduce the insurance premiums paid by Farm Credit System institutions on loans that are guaranteed by the Federal Government or by a State Government. This adjustment in the insurance premiums will reflect the lower risk represented by Government-guaranteed loans and allow Farm Credit System institutions to offer lower interest rates to their borrowers.

The insurance program was established under the Agriculture Credit Act of 1987 and is designed to protect investors in System bonds. System institutions are required to pay a 15 basis points insurance premium on accruing and 25 basis points on nonaccruing loans until a secure base—equal to 2 percent of all outstanding insured obilgations (debt obligations)—is reached.

The insurance program is supported by the System. However, the program had the unintended effect of making the System less competitive for certain loans supported by Federal guarantees. The statute establishing the insurance program does not provides clear authority to implement a special insurance premium schedule that would reflect the reduce risk for Government guaranteed loans.

There is ample precedent for establishing a risk-based premium schedule for federally guaranteed loans. For example, the Comptroller of the Currency issued final regulations dealing with capital requirements for commercial banks on January 27, 1989. The regulations set risk-based capital guidelines for commercial banks, reducing the capital requirements for Federally guaranteed loans. The Comptroller issued these regulations to eliminate the incentive banks had to hold high risk assets which had the same capital requirements as low risk assets.

Specifically, the regulations assigned a zero percent risk-weight to loans guaranteed by the U.S. Government and its agencies. The Farm Credit Administration's capital adequacy regulations similarly recognizing the reduced risk associated with state and Federally guaranteed loans.

This provision would provide a remedy to a similar problem for the Farm Credit System with regard to the insurance program. The provision would require the Insurance Corporation to adjust downward the insurance premium applied for federally and State guaranteed loans and reduce the secure base accordingly.

This will help System lenders to remain competitive—especially for export loans guaranteed by the Department of Agriculture's Commodity Credit Corporation. These federally guaranteed export loans account for over $2 billion of the System's $3.4 billion in guaranteed loans.

Since 1981, the Farm Credit System's banks for cooperatives have been authorized to make loans to facilitate the foreign purchase of U.S. farm products. To date, over $9 billion in exports—involving about 30 products—have been financed under this authority.

However, CoBank estimates that it will lose between $200 and $400 million in U.S. agricultural export financings in 1989 if an adjustment is not made to insurance premiums applied to loans guaranteed by the Commodity Credit Corporation. This export financing business is being lost largely to foreign banks who can offer more attractive financing packages.

There are two reasons for this: First, most U.S. money-center banks have opportunities that yield more than CoBank receives on a loan guaranteed by CCC and, therefore, are not active in the agricultural export market; and second, foreign banks generally have lower return on equity and return on assets requirements and, therefore, are willing to compete for the lower spreads in the export market.

In closing, I am pleased to join several of my colleagues in supporting this needed legislation and urge this body to approve S. 1793 on final passage.

LETTER ON JUDICIAL PAY

HON. RICHARD RAY

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. RAY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to share with my colleagues a letter I recently received from a Federal judge in Georgia concerning pay raises for Federal judges. I believe this letter makes a number of valid points which Members may wish to consider when debating any pay reform package in the future. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I strongly urge the Congress when considering any reforms in pay to consider including Federal judges in that reform package.

U.S. DISTRICT COURT,
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA,
Augusta, GA, October 18, 1989.

Hon. RICHARD RAY,
Cannon Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN RICHARD RAY: The current status of judicial, congressional, and executive pay is an inequity, an indignity, and an invitation to disaster. I do not know any other way to put it. I am sure that many people in Congress wish the issue would simply "go away." It won't.

Those of us who depend entirely upon our federal salary struggle daily with car payments, repair bills, house notes, enormous education expenses, etc., on an income which is a fraction of our potential in the private sector. While we judges may struggle, our families are deprived of the rightful expectation which they have earned by their efforts through the years. All this "stuff" about the prestige and honor of serving the public sounds good but doesn't count for much when compared with the daily insult of being paid in parity with a lawyer of less than five years experience. I now earn about half of what I did in 1979.

If these conditions create an environment wherein a person may serve the Republic with pride and a sense of fulfillment, I am the most mistaken man in Georgia. I don't want to resign. I've opened enough new offices in my time. I just want to continue to be the best district judge I can without being the brunt of a gross injustice born of a timid Congress.

Whether or not you admit it, your situation is as bad as mine, or worse! It's true that senators, congressmen, judges and some executives earn more than many Americans. They should! The earnings of others are set by the marketplace. The issue is whether the Congress will make an informed salary decision based upon reason and common sense to preserve the dignity and independence of the separate branches of government; or, whether it will react to the negativistic rhetoric of little minds espousing thumb-worn creeds.

With every good wish and my kindest regards, I am

Respectfully,
DUDLEY H. BOWEN, Jr.,
Judge.

BUDGET FOR A STRONG AMERICA

HON. GEORGE MILLER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, we have begun a crucial new debate in the Congress and in the Nation—a debate about the future course of our national budget and our national military policies.

These past few weeks have witnessed miraculous and irreversible changes in the political and economic destinies of Eastern Europe. The people of Poland, Hungary, East Germany, and even Bulgaria have taken the first important steps towards democracy. We must take comparable steps to encourage and support those reforms, both in economic and in defense policy in conjunction with our own allies.

Last week, the House discussed a proposal to reduce our military spending in a planned but steady manner in the early 1990's, focusing on reduced overseas spending, elimination of waste and duplication, paring back unnecessary weapons systems, and procurement reform. Our savings—and they could reach $100 billion—could then be devoted to a wide range of unmet domestic policy needs, including reduction in the deficit.

I want to share my completed prepared remarks with the House:

STATEMENT OF HON. GEORGE MILLER

Mr. Speaker, today's debate on a "Budget for a Strong America" inaugurates an overdue re-examination of our budgetary priorities as we enter a new decade, and prepare for a new century.

More than a decade ago, the adequacy of our national security was called into serious question. Our weapons systems were inadequate; our troops underpaid and underskilled; our research and development lagging. A determination was made, on a bipartisan basis, to increase military spending to meet the security dangers that confronted America.

As a result of that decision, we more than doubled our annual military spending, and we committed hundreds of billions of dollars in public resources to the Pentagon. We simultaneously made substantial reductions in domestic spending, although poverty rates were climbing, while serious deficiencies in health care and education persisted, and while homelessness and drugs were becoming national scourges. We continued both that military build-up and a policy of opposition to tax increases—a deadly fiscal combination that has tripled the national debt in a decade.

Today, we revisit the debate over the allocation of our national resources under drastically different circumstances.

The past year has recorded one of the greatest political revolutions in history. For reasons we can only speculate—glasnost, economic dissatisfaction, emerging nationalism—the men and women of Eastern Europe have risen up to proclaim the rebirth of democracy.

Within the Soviet Union itself, political evolution, economic innovation and military reform that was unthinkable just a few short years are now the stories of nightly news broadcasts. And it is not just talk.

President Gorbachev has achieved half of the manpower and weapons reductions in Eastern Europe that he promised last December would occur by 1991.

Since late 1987, according to the Rand Corporation, 200 Soviet design bureaus and several hundred manufacturing plants have been converted from military to defense production.

The American people are naturally enthusiastic for these long-overdue changes. But we must be more than pleased. And we must offer something more tangible than encouragement.

Just as we made dramatic fiscal, budgetary and policy changes in the 1970s to meet our national security needs, so must we in the 1990s confront the urgent, unmet, and ominous dangers that face us here at home. That requires a re-examination of military spending.

A generation ago, General Dwight D. Eisenhower observed that, "The problem in defense is how far you can go without destroying from within what you are trying to defend from without."

Only a few years later, as President, Eisenhower warned of the power of the military-industrial complex to consume vast quantities of our national treasure and dominate our national economy.

Mr. Speaker, we cannot continue to spend hundreds of billions of dollars every year—an additional $1.7 trillion by 1994 according to the Pentagon's projections, more than $800 million every day of the year—without allowing severe crises to destroy the Nation from within:

A doubling of the national debt in the eight years of the Reagan Administration, despite massive cutbacks in domestic spending programs;

An increase in interests costs on the debt of more than $100 billion a year, every year;

Thirty-one million Americans without health care;

Fewer than 4 percent of Superfund toxic waste sites cleaned up;

A shortage of 3.7 million housing units for those earning less than $10,000 a year;

One million dropping out of school each year, and millions more undereducated and unable to qualify even for minimal jobs.

Haven't the American people had enough of sending billions of dollars in America's hard earned tax dollars overseas and into wasteful military hardware?

Today, we are issuing a call for no less than the redeployment of America's fiscal, creative and investment resources.

As Fortune Magazine noted last July, "With the cold war cooling, the Pentagon budget could be cut by a third without weakening defense. Think what America could do with the extra $100 billion a year."

We agree.

We need a strong defense; but the needs of the military cannot render America weak in every other value, every other measure of greatness and wealth.

We believe America can be strong only if we are well-educated, well-housed, and well-trained; if we treat our infants and children as irreplaceable investments in our future; if we apply our unlimited research and intellectual capacities to innovative scientific, commercial and consumer development.

And we can afford both forms of national security.

Spending levels alone are not an accurate indicator of a commitment to national security. Our failure to recognize that fact was the great fallacy in the military build-up of the past decade.

As Pentagon analyst Franklin Spinney detailed in the Wall Street Journal last week, Pentagon spending has not been driven by what is needed to protect American security, but by number manipulation, inadequate cost control, system duplication, and waste that would never be tolerated in the private sector.

Nearly half a century after the end of World War II, when military experts tell us the Soviets could not launch a ground attack on NATO, can the United States continue to shoulder the $100 billion a year burden of maintaining more than one-third of a million active troops in Europe, with nearly double that number of support personnel and dependents?

Given our other urgent needs, can we spend $80 billion, and probably much more, on the B-2 Stealth bomber, an airplane that literally costs more than its weight in solid gold; a weapon whose chief proponent has testified was designed to mop up after the "virtual nuclear annihilation" of U.S. and U.S.S.R.?

Do we really need to be spending over $3 billion a year, and consuming the careers of tens of thousands of our best scientists and physicists, to develop the Star Wars system, the most expensive bargaining chip in the history of arms negotiations, and one which its skeptical developers overwhelmingly doubt will work?

Americans need not reach a consensus about how to apply the savings we hope to achieve from military reform before we agree that reform, itself, is overdue. We all know how many legitimate alternatives exist.

The recent hurricane and earthquake destruction highlighted the serious problems of our infrastructure. Over 132,000 bridges—23 percent of our total—are structurally unsound. Two thirds of the interstate highway system, our domestic transportation lifeline, is in substandard condition, and there are 3,000 unsafe dams in populated areas.

Nation-wide, we must spend $65 billion annually on infrastructure just to stay even, and "even" isn't good enough.

But we are not only overlooking our physical investments. As even a cursory reading of business journals demonstrates, major American employers are rightly alarmed by the educational deficiencies of young workers.

David Kearns, the chairman of Xerox, says the mismatch between our employment needs to remain competitive and the quality of young workers industry must choose from, has all of the "the makings of a national disaster class work force, and we cannot have a world class work force without world class schools."

Mr. Kearns and his fellow corporate leaders know that the average 21-25 year old reads significantly below the level required by the average job available in 1984, let alone the job of 2000, when he or she will only be in the mid-forties!

Half of those future workers will be minorities, half of whom are growing up poor, 25-percent of whom leave school early, and another 25 percent of whom lack basic skills.

That is one reason why the corporate leaders who comprise the Committee on Economic Development predict that we will have 20 million undereducated, undersocialized people added to our population by the year 2000: dependent, unproductive, and raising millions of children in homes of dubious quality.

Even in the military, we are ignoring serious problems that require urgent, and expensive attention, like the 15,000 suspected contaminated military waste dumps that are going to cost $150-billion to clean up, including radioactive waste from the Department of Energy's 17 nuclear warhead production facilities.

We are, my colleagues, at one of those cross-roads that confront a civilization only periodically in history, where the way in which we respond to new opportunities and urgent needs will determine the future course of this Nation, whether we remain a dominant culture, and powerful country, a leading economy.

The change in East-West relations, the crushing burden of debt, and the basic needs of the American people to retain a high standard of living and to remain competitive in the world—all these compel a reexamination of our budget priorities and a reallocation of our national wealth, not after the next election, but next year.

The American people know this, even if we, in this chamber, do not yet acknowledge the enormity of the challenge. By overwhelming numbers, our constituents are looking to government, in partnership with their own community and business resources, to play a constructive and helpful role in restructuring our national goals.

I have not a moment's hesitation in predicting that, presented with both sides of the military spending debate, voters would agree that fighting drugs, housing the homeless, educating our children, providing basic health care for all Americans, assuring quality child care and elderly services, reducing the debt, and upgrading our infrastructure and physical plant are all of higher priority than increasing military spending to $400 billion a year.

I have no doubt that the American people would rather devote resources to converting unnecessary weapons industries to productive, growth-inducing, job creating, internationally competitive businesses than to continue to base the wealth of their communities, and to consume their labor, building the unneeded and unproductive weapons of war.

Those who fail to recognize the uniqueness and the opportunity of this moment are going to be left behind by history and by voters. But if we follow that course as a Nation, then it is we who will surely be left behind, spending our treasure and our promise preparing for our worst fears instead of planning and investing for our greatest opportunities.

To those who call us naive, I respond: we recognize that mutual arms reduction, negotiated military cuts, and international agreements, not unilateral actions, are essential. But do people truly believe our government has pursued those opportunities as rapidly and with as much creativity as we could in recent years?

Neither I, nor any other speaker this evening, pretends to know how best to apportion the money by which we can reduce our military budget over the next decade. Maybe it's by $5 billion a year; maybe by 10.

Maybe we should apply all that saving to the deficit. Maybe some of it should go to health, or highways, or child care, or toxic clean-up.

But let the debate begin, and let it focus on the real needs of the future, not over the myths or the past threats to our security.

That is the goal of this special order: to begin the debate over this redeployment of American resources, to begin it here in this chamber, and to begin it now.

No generation in the history of the world has ever had the ability to exterminate not humankind, but the weapons and the hatreds that threaten the future of our planet and our species. If we have no other responsibility as legislators, if we take no other risks in our careers or our lives, let us resolve today not to allow this historic opportunity to pass through our hands.

PACIFIC BELL PROVIDES FREE COMMUNITY TELEPHONES FOR CALIFORNIA'S HOMELESS AND NEEDY

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to announce that Pacific Bell has introduced an important Community Telephone Program in California.

A phone call can cost as little as 20 cents. Not an unreasonable sum for most, but for those with neither funds nor facilities—the homeless, and those with little or no income—placing phone calls to get jobs, medical assistance, or even beds for the night, can be difficult, if not impossible.

To make telephones accessible to many who can't afford service, Pacific Bell has started a statewide free telephone service for the homeless in California. The program is similar to the Community Connection Program in Oregon, which this House acclaimed last year. Pacific Bell's response is a gratifying answer to a letter, written in December 1988 for Congresspersons BOXER, DELLUMS, LANTOS, MILLER, PELOSI, and me encouraging the utility's participation in such a program.

The California-based telephone utility has installed 18 free telephone lines on a trial basis in 9 community service agencies throughout the State. Pacific Bell's Community Telephone Program offers free local telephone calls for anyone seeking essential services such as employment, welfare assistance, health care, and shelter.

For many people, not having access to a phone means not finding a place to spend the night. The Pacific Bell Community Telephone Program is for people who would otherwise be isolated from services that may be just a telephone call away.

The hope is that the telephone will lessen the disadvantage homeless people face in the job market when employes can't reach them. The Los Angeles Times reported that, on the first day the telephones went into service, Connie, a women who lives in a shelter in Costa Mesa, received a call regarding a position she had been trying to get as a nanny. A volunteer took the call and Connie was able to call right back. Connie got the job.

Phone locations and host community service agencies were selected by an oversight team of representatives from the California Homeless Coalition, the California Mental Health Directors Association, and the California-Nevada Community Action Association [Cal/Neva]. The host agencies are responsible for the day-to-day management of the telephones.

One of the host agencies is East Oakland Recovery Center in my district. This 24-hour drop-in center is finding the telephone program to be a welcome addition to the services they offer. Many calls are coming in and being made each day and jobs have been obtained as a result of calls.

Pacific Bell's costs to provide these free telephone lines are being paid for by shareholders of Pacific Telesis Group.

I commend Pacific Bell for taking this action. My hope is that other corporations will find a way to expand this program or will offer other appropriate assistance to our country's poor people.

THE ARAB WAR AGAINST ISRAEL: STILL THE ISSUE

HON. JACK BUECHNER

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. BUECHNER. Mr. Speaker, on the eve of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's visit to the United States, I would like to share with my colleagues an article prepared by the Anti-Defamation League which accurately underscores the fact that until all the Arab States recognize Israel's right to exist, any peace initiative will raise profound and legitimate concerns for Israel's national security.

The article also reflects the point that if the peace process is to commence, it must have the expressed intention of guaranteeing the security of all parties concerned. The success of the Israel-Egypt accords are evidence of the potential for peace in the Mideast; however, a treaty with no intention of peaceful coexistence is essentially void of meaning.

It is my hope, indeed the hope of all Americans, that discussions between President Bush, Prime Minister Shamir, and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak will bring Israelis and Palestinians closer to a peace settlement. To that end, Mr. Speaker, this article is insightful as it sheds some light on the difficulties that Israel must address.

The article follows:

THE ARAB WAR AGAINST ISRAEL: STILL THE ISSUE

(By Janice Ditchek)

(Ms. Ditchek is director of the Anti-Defamation League's Middle Eastern Affairs Department.)

An interesting but inaccurate script is now being written about the Middle East conflict in some newspaper commentaries and public forums across the country. In it, Israel is being falsely cast as the obstructionist to the effort to resolve the Middle East conflict. The Arabs and the Palestine Liberation Organization, on the other hand, are often positively portrayed as the more conciliatory parties, ready to join in the pursuit of peace if only Israel would be more flexible.

But a look beyond the headlines and wishful reporting of recent date reveals another, more realistic story. Israel's reservations about the current initiative are rooted in profound and legitimate concerns for its national security. The underlying cause of this sense of insecurity and of the difficulty in resolving the conflict is one and the same:

the unwillingness for more than 40 years now of all Arab leaders but one to make peace with Israel. Israel's response to that singular exception in Arab resistence—Sadat's historic visit to Jerusalem during which he spoke of peace and acceptance before the Israel people—demonstrates just how forthcoming Israel can be in an atmosphere built on even a hint of goodwill.

Israel's May 14 peace initiative addresses this point, calling on Arab countries to end their policy of rejection and, in so doing, create a positive environment for future dialogue. In response, most Arab leaders have condemned the plan while others have sat silently by as Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak has helped Washington search for a way to bring Israelis and Palestinians together.

Showing a similar lack of initiative, not one of these Arab heads of state has taken positive steps toward serving the interests of the Palestinian people. If satisfying Palestinian aspirations through peaceful means was their intent, Arab leaders would urge an end to violence againt Israel in order to set the stage for talks. Instead, they remain united in their pledge to "extend every means of support and aid" to "continue to resist and to escalate the uprising" as stated last May at the Arab League Summit in Khartoum. And if furthering the cause of peace is truly their agenda, Arab leaders would recognize that compromise is necessary on all sides. Rather than demand that Israel increase its vulnerability by withdrawing from territory while surrounded by hostile states, they would end their war against her.

The problem is not merely rhetorical. The Arab states have contributed millions of dollars to finance the Palestinian uprising now being waged against Israel. Their armies are large enough to threaten Israel's existence and they have twelve times the number of active forces to mobilize in a combat situation against her. In addition to the war fought on the battlefield, the Arab states have conducted an economic campaign aimed at strangling Israel financially through a worldwide economic boycott that has gone on for decades. On the political level, Arab countries are unceasing in their efforts to delegitimize Israel by seeking her exclusion from international events and forums, including their annual attempt to strip Israel of its credentials and oust it from the United Nations General Assembly.

This is the atmosphere of hostility that spirals around Israel as conditions for Israeli-Palestinian talks are now being formulated with the U.S. and Egypt. It it any wonder then, that in an environment still rife with Arab and Palestinian violence, Israel has been reticent to treat seriously the PLO's half-baked assurances of moderation? Granted, the PLO has slightly softened its rhetoric of implacable hostility toward Israel since Yasir Arafat's stated recognition of Israel in Geneva last year. But, such language can only be viewed as cosmetic in light of the PLO's continued adherence to the Palestine National Covenant which calls for the "elimination of Zionism in Palestine."

And, while the PLO has attempted to convince the West of its resolve to live peacefully alongside Israel, the organization nevertheless continued to reassure its own constituents that its diplomatic maneuvers are merely part of a phased approach to the liquidation of Israel. Thus, as recently as April of this year, Arafat reaffirmed the goal of the "complete liberation of the Palestinian soil and the establishment of a Palestinian state on every part of it." The same month, Farrouk Kaddoumi, head of the PLO's political department, when asked on BBC Arabic Radio whether the PLO seeks to recover "all the Palestinian land, including that of 1948" responded that the PLO will ultimately plant its "tent in those places where our bullets can reach. It is the range of the power at the Palestinian people's disposal that determines the site of the tent, which acts as a base from which it will deal with its next phase."

Against this background, it is clear that it is not unreasonable for Jerusalem to seek an end to the Arab state of war against israel as part of any negotiating process with the Palestinians. While it has become fashionable in the West to view the Arab-Israel conflict as a dispute primarily between the Arab and Jewish communities in the areas now controlled by Israel, Israel itself cannot afford to join in such illusions. So long as 21 Arab states remain dedicated to their ideology of rejectionism, Jerusalem must resist the pressure to accept this naive proposition and risk jeopardizing its security in the process.

It may well be that through true acceptance, compromise and concessions on all sides, Palestinian aspirations will eventually be satisfied. In the meantime, however, it is the Arab and PLO leadership, not Israel, who through their refusal to accept Israel without ambiguity, will bear direct responsibility for sustaining Palestinian political frustrations.

ENLIGHTENING SERIES ON "THE NEW EUROPE" BY McCLATCHY NEWS

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I would like to enter into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a series of articles by McClatchy News Washington bureau chief Leo Rennert and a group of McClatchy reporters on the emergence of "the New Europe." The series is quite possibly the most extensive and comprehensive look yet in any American newspaper at the new economic reality emerging from the European Community. The series reflects countless hours of research and interviews and offers a poignant look forward to the unification of the European market in 1992. The effects on U.S. trade and specific industries are well documented as is the general unawareness on American soil of the situation. Because the unification of the European Community has important implications for this country and this body of legislators, the information included in these stories should be very useful to many of my colleagues in Congress. I will be submitting parts of the series in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD over the next 3 days.

EUROPEANS SEEK CLOUT IN UNITY

(By Leo Rennert)

BRUSSELS, Belgium.—After getting bogged down during the 1970s and most of the 1980s, the drive for European unification has moved into high gear and now appears irreversible.

Under intense pressure from business leaders eager to expand markets, Western Europe is breaking down centuries-old barriers as it confidently pushes forward with an ambitious agenda of economic and political integration.

The objective is nothing less than creation of a new giant force on the world stage with sufficient economic muscle to challenge Japan and the United States. For the United States still struggling to cope with a flood of Japanese imports, a unified Europe may pose an even bigger competitive challenge.

After visits to half a dozen Western European countries and extended interviews with scores of political figures, plant managers, bankers, bureaucrats, lobbyists and diplomats, a reporter is left with a couple of inescapable conclusions:

Americans are only dimly aware of how far Europeans have progressed in overcoming ancient divisions, of the rapid pace of this transformation and of what it portends for U.S. leadership and prosperity in coming years.

Western Europe is aiming at far more than becoming a potent new economic factor. As first-rank players on the global chessboard, its leaders also are determined to carve out an increasingly important diplomatic and political role, particularly in shaping Western relations with the Soviet bloc.

That could mean a shrinking of U.S. influence in the councils of the Western alliance just as Moscow is loosening its grip on Eastern Europe.

The most obvious example—exhibit A—of Western European resurgence is the drive by the 12-nation European Community to create a unified market for unhampered movement of goods, services, capital and people by the end of 1992.

It will be market of 324 million consumers—a third larger than the American market and more than double the Japanese—with a well-trained work force and an age-old capacity for carving out new trade frontiers. The EC already accounts for 19 percent of world trade, compared with 13 percent for the United States and 12 percent for Japan.

Some economists predict that elimination of barriers and emergence of larger, leaner and more efficient business aggregations will boost EC economic growth by 7 percent, create 5 million jobs and reduce prices by 6 percent. Actually, an economic boom of sorts already is under way as investors—European and foreign—are making their moves in anticipation of 1992.

Companies that once operated within national borders are concluding partnership deals and mergers across old frontiers. The era of European giants—multibillion-dollar concerns known as Eurogiants because they are capable of locking horns with the biggest U.S. and Japanese multinations—has arrived. What Napoleon and Hitler couldn't achieve by military force—a united Europe—is being cobbled together in the boardrooms of Paris, Frankfurt, London and Milan. And it's happening at a time of serious political malaise in Japan, shrinking economic growth in the United States and rising ethnic and labor unrest in the Soviet Union.

"Europtimism" is in the air and talk of "Eurosclerosis" and "Europessimism" is no longer fashionable. After a sluggish economic performance for most of this decade, the EC is expected to show more robust growth than the United States this year. Bullish forecasts extend well into the 1990s.

Pulling the strings of European integration are some 14,000 Eurocrats in huge new office complexes on the edge of Belgium's capital, which is the headquarters of the EC. They're weaving together the diverse strands and interests of a dozen countries into a single set of economic ground rules, including unified product standards, cross-border acceptance of professional diplomas, liberalization of financial markets and compatible tax policies.

The process is neither simple nor easy. It moves by fits and starts. And the results are not uniformly pleasing. Italian police officials recently warned that, with 1992 in the offing, creating of Eurobanks could play into the hands of Mafia chieftains by giving them more points of access to launder ill-gotten gains.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is fighting a rear-guard action to prevent Brussels from becoming a supranational government and promulgating workers rights and welfare policies that her government dismantled over the last 10 years. But she is increasingly isolated. Other European leaders are determined to move ahead, with or without her.

"We have embarked on an exciting journey toward political union in Europe," says Jacques Delors, president of the European Commission, who often tangles with Thatcher. At the moment, public opinion and political sentiment, even in Britain, are on his side.

"The countries on the continent see Europe as the way to higher things, the way to the stars," remarks David Lomax, a top economic adviser at the National Westminster Bank in London.

Fueling the drive for unification is a major change in loyalties—away from narrow nationalism to greater identification, at one and the same time, with local regions like Provence, Catalonia or Yorkshire, and with the vision of a unified Europe. Power is draining away from Europe's old capitals to Brussels and to local and regional authorities.

With a few exceptions like Thatcher, Europe's new leaders are not hung up on the notion that national sovereignty must be defended at all costs.

"Sovereignty means nothing unless it represents the ability to control our destiny," says Sir Leon Britain, Britain's EC commissioner for competition policy. "And in the modern world, that means forming alliances and pooling influence. As someone remarked recently, a man standing alone and naked in a desert is sovereign. He cannot be influenced by anyone or any power. Yet he is impotent."

To pull its diverse parts together, the EC has turned into a new Tower of Babel as officials work with nine languages requiring 4,000 translators and linguistics specialists. English and French are commonly used by EC staff. But for communitywide meetings, provisions must be made for simultaneous translations in all nine languages—a situation with 72 potential back-and-forth combinations.

Yet, through it all, the EC already is moving beyond its 1992 unified-market plan to higher levels of political and monetary union. Since the approval of the Single European Act, which went into effect in 1987, most EC decisions no longer require unanimity. Under a weighted majority system, Brussels can act faster and reach farther into each country's affairs.

For example, the EC recently ordered Thatcher to reduce levels of nitrate, derived from fertilizers, in Britain's water supplies. After London balked, the EC filed suit in the European Court of Justice, which will have the final word.

Besides preparing for 1992, the EC already is in the business of setting common policies for a wide range of international relations, external trade, farm production, environmental protection, corporate mergers and public health. It has ordered health warnings on cigarette packs and has been considering directives to limit tobacco advertising and tar content—a move that infuriates French smokers who love their filterless Gauloises.

Perhaps the most telling evidence of the EC's evolution into a supranational government is its fast-growing budget. At $50 billion, it's on a par with California's state budget. The EC has a monopoly on customs duties and gets a slice of each country's value-added tax, a widely used sales tax that generates vast amounts of revenue.

On the spending side, the lion's share goes into farm subsidies. But those expenditures are receding, while the fastest growing part of the EC budget now encompasses a vast income redistribution program from wealthy members to poor areas like Ireland, Spain, Portugal, Scotland, southern Italy and Greece. Last year the EC decided to double these outlays to $16 billion by 1993.

The money is used to stimulate growth and investment in economically depressed regions with construction of roads, airports and harbors, and high-tech training for young and unemployed workers.

These "Robin Hood" grants are at the heart of what makes the EC tick politically. With London on the sidelines, West Germany and France are the lead players and pay for half the EC budget. Britain kicks in only 13 percent, which is a shade under Italy's contribution.

To cement European unity, Paris and Bonn are willing to lavish vast subsidies on poorer members and get them hooked on largesse from the EC. West Germany gets back only 50 cents on each dollar it sends to Brussels, but the formula appears to be working.

The EC budget already matches or exceeds that of several of the smaller EC nations and it's rising fast. It is a clear signal of Brussels' growing influence in European affairs.

Universal use of a single European currency and creation of a European central bank may not be realized for another 15 years. But a fledgling currency—the European Currency Unit—already exists and its use is spreading. The ECU (worth about $1.10) anchors the European Monetary System, which keeps the exchange rates of most EC-member currencies within a very narrow band, a development highly welcomed by investors who prize currency stability in cross-border transactions. The EC figures its budget in ECUs, and ECU travelers' checks are becoming available.

In moving toward the 1992 goal of a single market, the EC still has important hurdles to overcome, most notably the harmonization of value-added taxes. VAT rates vary from zero on essential goods in Britain and Ireland to 38 percent on luxury items in Italy. High-tax nations are reluctant to lose income, and politicians in low-VAT countries are afraid to raise taxes.

For its part, the EC is not pushing for uniformity but for margins of 4 percent to 9 percent for essential products and 14 to 20 percent on others. But that's still a tall order. And nobody at this point is willing to bet that Brussels will pull it off.

The 1992 single market will require approval and implementation of some 280 directives. So far, 240 have been drafted and 130 accepted by the Council of Ministers. But the remaining ones represent the toughest hurdles.

"In climbing a mountain, the last 100 meters are usually more difficult than the previous 1,000," says EC spokesman Nico Wegter. "We must have acceleration (to meet the 1992 target)."

But the process already is so far under way that nobody is looking back. "Although much still remains to be done, I am confident that our drive for closer economic integration had acquired a self-sustaining momentum," says Frans Andriessen, the EC commissioner for external relations.

Along with completion of the 1992 agenda, the EC also must come to grips with making its own institutions more accountable to European voters and to resolving some difficult identity problems.

Some EC leaders resist any notion of expanding the community to include outsiders like Austria, Switzerland or Sweden. Turkey, a Moslem state, is being kept out even though it's a loyal member of NATO. And there are conflicting views about how far the EC should go in forging closer ties with Eastern Europe.

According to Delors and others struggling to complete the 1992 agenda, the EC should stick to its own business before branching out. West Germany, with some support from France, favors a more outwardlooking approach, hoping for eventual reunification with East Germany.

"The community is not the whole of Europe," says West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. "Europe's future is openness."

NEW PLANTS WOULD ELUDE TRADE CURBS

(By Leo Rennert)

SUNDERLAND, England.—In this northern corner of England, where Roman legions once patrolled the frontiers of their far-flung empire, Japan is leading a new "invation" of Europe.

The Japanese flag-bearer here is Nissan, which is investing $1 billion in an ultramodern car-production plant in one of Britain's most economically depressed areas.

The plant, a dramatic showcase of Japan's aggressive push into Europe, reflects a bargain born of mutual self-interest.

For Nissan, it's a vital insurance policy in case the 12-nation European Community clamps sharp import restrictions on foreign-made cars after it eliminates all internal trade barriers by the end of 1992.

Each Nissan car rolling off the assembly line at Sunderland has a 60 percent content of European-made parts—and that will rise to 80 percent by 1993. As a result, Nissan will be able to sell its midrange Bluebirds and mini-Micras throughout the EC as "European" products—not as Japanese imports subject to quotas and other barriers.

For the British, Nissan means a huge payroll—2,500 jobs today rising to 3,500 by 1993—in a region of industrial decline and high unemployment. To sweeten the deal, the British government, local authorities and the EC offered Nissan nearly $200 million in special inducements.

It's an economic marriage blessed at the highest levels. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was on hand for the opening in 1986 and Prince Charles accepted keys for the first car produced at Sunderland. This year, production will hit 76,000 cars, reaching 200,000 by 1993 when the European unified market will be open for business.

Other Japanese carmakers, including Toyota and Honda, are joining Nissan in establishing EC beachheads in Britain. England is becoming pockmarked with Japanese car, engine and parts production plants. Investments so far total nearly $3 billion. In five years, Japanese firms will account for one out of every three British-made cars.

The Japanese see Europe as a major competitive opportunity—and are racing to get in. After 1992, France, Italy and other EC countries that traditionally subsidized and protected their own automobile industries are supposed to let go and permit demand-and-supply forces to take over. That should open major new markets to carmakers who haven't been able to compete on equal terms with Fiat in Italy or Renault in France. Italy, for example, has been holding Japanese car imports to 3,000 a year.

Nissan also sees a big new market potential for small cars in the poorer sections of southern Europe—Italy, Spain, Portugal—which are getting a big infusion of EC money to help their economies.

American auto producers, led by Ford and General Motors, have been in Europe longer than the Japanese and similarly making plans to increase their share of the market. But they're casting a wary eye on the Japanese, who are moving in with state-of-the-art technology, huge start-up subsidies from London and special labor-management deals.

"The Japanese presence is growing stronger," says Volker Leichsering, vice president for public and governmental affairs of Ford's European operations. "The British are virtually inviting them in. The Japanese realize the only major growth market is Europe. They're actually being helped by some European governments. I'm not sure that's wise."

Ford, with nearly 12 percent of the European car market, far outstrips all Japanese competitors at this point. But Ford must cope with 16 different British unions and modernize aging plants, while Nissan is able to deal with only one union and boasts of major productivity gains.

Nissan dismisses Ford's complaint that Britain is giving the Japanese a special advantage at the expense of longer-established companies.

"Everybody tries for a business advantage," says Ian Gibson, managing director of the Nissan plant, "We got a drop in the bucket. The European motor industry is one of the most subsidized in the world. Ford and GM also received subsidies."

While Nissan brought along a distinctly Japanese management philosophy, with strong emphasis on individual responsibility and a finely honed collective work ethic, it also has worked to ease culture shock.

All but three of the 37 management slots are held by British executives. The entire production force is British. There are no obligatory exercise programs at the start of each shift, although the company provides a physical fitness center.

While Nissan-USA successfully has warded off the United Auto Workers at its Tennessee plant, Gibson goes out of his way to encourage Nissan employees here to join the Amalgamated Engineering Union. Britain, he notes, has a strong tradition of union membership—unlike Tennessee.

"When one of our people goes to the pub after work, he's going to mix with mates who are also union members," says Gibson. "He ought to be able to feel right at home."

The union actually is not a major presence at the plant. Labor-management consultations, including salary negotiations, are handled by a separate company council of 10 workers and six Nissan representatives.

On the shop floor, production is split up in teams of 20 workers, each headed by a supervisor. With thousands more applications than there are positions, Nissan puts jobseeker through a rigorous screening process. The work force is young and eager to perform in exchange for job security and good benefits.

From the start, there are extensive instruction programs and an average of eight days a year is set aside for training sessions. Since the plant opened, 250 workers have been sent to Japan to learn special skills. Along the assembly line, each worker's name is listed on a board with his picture and a progress chart showing the full extent and level of his technical skills—a not-so-subtle pressure tactic to obtain higher productivity levels.

There are no special parking spaces or dining rooms for executives. The work uniform is the same for everybody. Each assembly-line team holds daily meetings to discuss problems and ideas for improving the operation.

Overhead, there's an electronic scoreboard that flashes up-to-the-minute production totals each day—and whether the operation is ahead or behind schedule. Supervisors on the line, not executives in a remote office, control the operation. Nobody gets hired unless a team supervisor gives his approval.

"Things are not done from the top down, but from the bottom up," says Clive Griffiths, general manager for press, body, paint and plastic operations, who worked for Austin-Rover before joining Nissan.

"The biggest difference here is that the commitment to people is outstanding," he says. "We expect a lot and we get a lot. In the last two years, productivity has risen by 26 percent. And it's all been driven from the shop floor."

Terence Hogg, director of production control, is confident about Nissan's future in Europe. "The Japanese can develop technology faster than the rest of the field," he says.

HOW THE EC WORKS

EUROPEAN COMMISS ON

17 members named by member countries for four-year terms. Commissioners propose legislation and administer policies approved by the Council of Ministers. They manage growing bureaucracy in Brussels. Can take action against individual countries that violate EC rules. Bigger countries—France, Italy, Germany, Spain and Britain—have two commissioners each; the others one.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

The EC's final decision-making body. Meetings on transportation policy attended by transportation ministers from member nations; sessions on farm policy by agriculture ministers, etc. Voting power according to size of each country. Under weighted-majority rules, 54 votes out of 76 must be cast by at least seven of the 12 members. Heads of state or government hold EC summits twice a year. Council presidency rotates every six months.

EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT

Limited legislative powers, but increasing political influence. Must be consulted before many rules are adopted by council. Can reject budget and dismiss commission. 518 members, apportioned by population, are elected directly for five-year terms. Meets in Strasbourg, France.

EUROPEAN COURT OF JUSTICE

The EC's highest legal authority. Opinions on EC directives and treaty provisions are binding and take precedence over national laws. Cases may be brought by governments, the commission, the Parliament, companies or individuals. The 13 judges meet in Luxembourg.

RESPECT LIFE SUNDAY

HON. JIM LIGHTFOOT

OF IOWA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. LIGHTFOOT. Mr. Speaker, as the debate over abortion once again heats up, it's time to use cool heads and logical reasoning rather than emotional demagoguery. The following homily was presented by Rev. Robert Marciano, to his congregation in Woonsocket, RI, on "Respect Life Sunday." For those who are undecided or troubled by the abortion issue, I'd recommend Reverend Marciano's words to them.

RESPECT LIFE SUNDAY 1989

(By Rev. Robert L. Marciano)

It was a brisk day in November, 1979 in Stockholm, Sweden as a slightly stooped, sweater-clad and soft spoken woman stepped to the battery of microphones to address a gathered audience of thousands of well wishers and notable heads of state. Mother Teresa of Calcutta, the gentle and loving woman of faith was about to accept the Noble Prize for Peace. As her words, soft in character yet strong in conviction cut the chilled air an eery and reverent hush fell over the crowd. She said:

"The greatest obstacle to peace in the world is abortion."

No truer words could be spoken, no more critical an issue could be addressed, no more vital a cry to action could be announced, for since that very day, some ten years ago, the sinful and scarring fact remains that over 16 million unborn infants have been put to a painful death in this, our country alone. To date, since the 1973 Supreme Court Decision legalizing abortion on demand in this country, over 24 million infants have been put to death at the abortionist hands. Incredibly, that number of dead is more than was claimed by all the wars that this nation has ever fought. But these dead are mere children. Tiny innocent human beings with immortal souls, created in the image and likeness of God. Little boys and little girls, with talents and personalities, with humor and possibility, with health and vitality, grasped from the dawn of life at the most defenseless time for being guilty of one irreversible and unforgiveable crime: Human Existence.

For what was once the safest place in all the world, their mother's womb, is now the most treacherous!

The battle for legalized abortion in this land began long before we realized or expected it. In fact, the language changed rapidly around us to cosmetically conceal the actual reality of the killing of babies lest the abortion industry offend the general, cash carrying and often confused public.

And so: Pro abortion became pro choice, pro life became a Single issue, the unborn child became a fetus, and a dead child following a successful abortion became fetal waste.

If a child lived after an unsuccessful abortion, and they very often do, then it became fetus ex utero.

The subsequent procedure to solve this "problem" is two-fold: first to leave the child in a container in the corner of the operating room with a sign attached: "Do not feed" or to the abortionist doctor to physically drown the struggling infant lest he be sued for malpractice if this "evidence", that is, the live child would live!

And so, before we knew it, this nation of ours which prides itself on defending the most dejected and saving the hopeless, on embracing immigrants and granting freedom and protection to escaped victims of foreign oppression, has a full media and seemingly total societal stamp of approval that the, quote, "termination of a pregnancy" is perfectly acceptable and even very American.

Harsh facts, bold statements, even un-settling news from a church pulpit. But you and I, on this Respect Life Weekend, and on every day our lives cannot be silent! We cannot choose to be innocent bystanders in this fight for human life, for if we do, and say nothing, then we are guilty as well. For as was once said:

"All it takes for evil to triumph is for good people to do nothing!"

My friends, the facts were all falsified, the language laundered, and the truth twisted beyond recognition. Death has become a way of life here in America as doctors who has taken the Hippocratic Oath volunteer to Take Life or to Save Life whatever they will be paid to do. But the chilling fact remains, that in our major cities, even as I speak, the numbers of aborted babies outnumber the numbers of live birth.

A few months ago, I stood at the bedside of a young mother whose tiny premature infant, born 5 months into her pregnancy, was fighting for his life. Just hours earlier he had been delivered with many medical problems and many physical difficulties and now he was clinging to the fragile thread, the great gift of life. We prayed together, the mother, the father and myself and with earnest desire in our hearts we ask the Good Lord to send His strength of healing to this tiny loved one of His and loved one of ours, if it be His Divine Will. A few moments later, as I left the room and left their company I met in the hospital hallway her doctor, who had been frantically working to save the newborn infant's life. He was visibly upset and frustrated by his medical efforts and lack of success and told me that all hope was now lost and that this little one was about to die. He thought it might be wise, and very consoling for the mother if she could hold her tiny son in her arms these last few moments of his short life. I agreed, and as I spoke I noticed his name on his ID Badge affixed to his white doctor's lab coat. He was, without a doubt, an enemy of the "Pro Life Cause", an outspoken and noted abortionist, a participant in the smear and lie campaign of Planned Parenthood that has systematically infected our nation and polluted the morality of our society and our precious youth. He had, I knew, through abortion, ended the lives of countless infants, the very same age in months as this little one that he was trying desperately to save. And so, as he turned to leave, and to give this dying child to a sorrowful mother I took him gently by the arm and facing him squarely said quietly:

Doctor, please tell her and tell John not to cry, nor to grieve. For what she holds in her arms, by your own admission and your abortion work, is nothing but a glob of cells, a mass of tissue. Don't let her name it, nor kiss it, nor will we dignify it with the reverence of burial for it is NOT a human being . . . or is it?" With eyes sunken with confusion, and what I hope and pray was remorse, he silently walked away.

I buried little Allan Charles with solemn ritual and devout prayers in consecrated ground not far from here. I embraced his parents and grandparents on that grey rainy Thursday morning and expressed my deepest sorrow over their great loss. And I prayed then, and pray every day, that little Alan's death will not be in vain.

My friends, the pro life movement is our movement, and it must be an act of love or it will be nothing at all. We must re-check our motivations not only to choose life but to choose love as well.

Love for little children,

Love for would-be mothers, and yes, love even for erring and confused doctors, for love alone can triumph our cause.

For when we love then God Himself will act!

For only He can bring an end to this intolerable destruction of human life. Not as a result of our anger, nor as a result of our cowardly silence, but as a result of a love within us that dares to speak out.

In our Diocese of Providence, as in every diocese, every girl and every woman offering her baby for adoption is encouraged to write a letter to the baby that the baby may choose to read years later. She is also encouraged to write a letter to the adoptive parents of the baby that she is offering for adoption. In either event, anonymity is always preserved.

Mary, a young girl of 19 years of age, an unmarried college student, wrote this:

DEAR PARENTS OF MOSES: I've spent the past two days being quite heroic, cheerful, level-headed, about the birth of this wonderful new person. When he was born my only thoughts were, "Thank God he's alive and so happy. He hadn't joined the ranks of the prolific number of aborted fetuses." Now it's Tuesday, late in the evening, and my tears are finally flowing. Not because I have any doubts about the quality of life he is sure to have with you but because of the sadness of parting with this tiny, perfect creature whom I have delighted in these past two days and the past nine months. I know that he should be with you.

I'm calling him Moses because he lives. Twice I scheduled abortion appointments and decided it wasn't his fault or folly that he had been conceived. I knew he would be beautiful, healthy, and in some way a very welcome addition to this earth. I feel that I am placing Moses in his reed basket and sailing him down the Nile, his Nile, your Nile, mine. I know that he and I will not share life together on a day-to-day, face-to-face basis, but we do share other dimensions. That of time and another subtle dimension because he grew within me for nine months.

I am told that Moses has 20-some cousins already—fantastic. I feel as though my family is expanding to include you and all your relatives. Please let him know he was given out of love, he was conceived in love, and I feel so good and sure that your love is now what he mostly needs. He is my greatest gift to the world.

Congratulations,

MARY.

When we love, we open the channels for God's grace to flow into and heal our hurting and broken world. It is He and His grace alone that can empower us to choose life and not death! For our pro life struggle must now, and always be, an act of love, and then, the Good Lord, will surely do the rest.

My friends, on that famous day in 1979 of Nobel Peace Prize awarding, Mother Teresa was asked:

"Mother, how do you judge success in the work you do?" The saintly, meek sister looked puzzled for a moment and then replied:

"I don't remember the Lord ever talking about success. I only remember that He spoke of faithfulness. He asked us to Love and to be faithful. It is only the success of these that He asks of us now."

May He hear our prayers, guide our steps, and encourage our efforts. For human life, my friends, hangs in the balance.

God Love you!

TRIBUTE TO REV. H. MASON BROWN

HON. THOMAS A. LUKEN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, as Representative of the First Congressional District of Ohio, I ask my colleagues to join me in extending a sincere congratulations to Rev. H. Mason Brown for his 12 years of dedicated service to his fellowship at the Allen Temple in Cincinnati.

Reverend Brown has truly been a steadfast servant of the Lord. He was ordained in 1965 and started pastoring in 1966. Since then, he has been a faithful and devoted minister.

In addition to being a successful minister, Reverend Brown is also a devoted family man. He and his wife Odessa have a daughter, Mrs. Patricia Ann Robinson and a son, Harry Mason Brown, Jr. and three grandchildren, Kecia, Christopher, and Darryl.

The Reverend Brown has attended Wright State University, Wilberforce University, Payne Theological Seminary, and Whittenberg University, and he holds two honorary degrees.

The Allen Temple is the oldest black church in Cincinnati. Since its founding on February 4, 1824, it has ministered not only to the needs of the black community, but also to the world-wide community of God. Reverend Brown was instrumental in relocating the Allen Temple from downtown to its present location on Reading Road.

Mr. Brown's active involvement in community and civic affairs has been greatly appreciated. In addition to other posts, he currently serves as vice chairman of the South Ohio Conference Trustee Board and as vice chairman of the board of trustees of Wilberforce University. He is the third Episcopal district statistician of the AME Church; this district includes all of Ohio and West Virginia and the western part of Pennsylvania. Reverend Brown has also served on the Ohio Consumer's Counsel Governing Board.

Mr. Speaker, we not only honor the length of Reverend Brown's service to the church and the city of Cincinnati, but the quality of that service as well. His contributions of talent, leadership, and responsibility have fostered significant and lasting improvement in the community.

Reverend Brown will surely be missed by his congregation at the Allen Temple, but those at his new house of worship, Cincinnati's Bethel AME Church, will be gaining a truly great minister. I thank Reverend Brown on behalf of all of those he served, and will continue to serve, for his unselfish time and effort. His contributions will have a lasting and resounding effect on our community.

THE 10TH ANNIVERSARY OF IMPACT II

HON. ARTHUR RAVENEL, JR.

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. RAVENEL. Mr. Speaker, this year marks the 10th anniversary of IMPACT II, a nationwide, educational, nonprofit organization that recognizes and rewards innovative teachers by giving grants for the development of fresh and creative in-school programs.

IMPACT II began in 1979 as an experimental pilot program codeveloped by the Exxon Education Foundation with the New York City board of Education. A second pilot program was initiated in Houston, TX, 3 years later; and today IMAPCT II is a national program with 30 sites ranging in size from a single school district to an entire State. More than 15,000 teachers participate across the country.

Last year IMPACT II programs begin in Berkeley, Charleston, and Dorchester counties in South Carolina with the funding of 13 developer grants. These grants are given to teachers who actually create new programs. Two workshop fairs were held where the developers presented their programs to other interested teachers, and last spring the first catalogue was distributed with information on these programs.

This year the Lowcountry Educators' Cooperative Program expects to award not just developer grants but also adaptor grants, which are awarded to teachers who wish to adapt another's program for use in their classroom.

The IMPACT II Program is made possible thanks to support from the Lowcountry Educators' Cooperative, an association of colleges and school districts in the tricounty area. This group includes the public schools that prepare teachers: The Citadel, the college of Charleston, and the Baptist College at Charleston. And next year's expansion will be supported by a generous grant from the Trident Community Foundation.

I am proud to say that even the tragedy and destruction wrought by Hurricane Hugo will not prevent this program from going forward and continuing to grow and to reach more teachers and more students. I applaud all of the teachers and administrators who participate as well as the donors who support their efforts.

AEROSPACE FUTURE

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I call attention today to a group reaching out to the minority youth of today and preparing them for the jobs of tomorrow. The Aerospace Opportunities Clearinghouse, founded to increase participation of minorities in the aerospace industry recently convened a conference on "New and Emerging Aerospace-Related Business and Career Opportunities." Held in Washington, it attracted many commercial sector and Government agencies.

Our Nation's aerospace industry is of vital importance to national security and minority involvement is necessary for its continued success. Although the minority sector constitutes 27 percent of the population, only 4 percent of aerospace engineers and scientists are minorities. Some statistics claim that the United States will lack half a million engineers by the year 2000. It was these statistics which helped establish the conference and formulate its key issues.

One of the many suggestions that resulted from this conference was the creation of a comprehensive awareness and training program for elementary and junior high schools. Programs such as these will help create interest in the science and space industry, as well as recruit students. This conference is a confirmation of America's promising aerospace future.

IN FAVOR OF DRUG-FREE ENVIRONMENT

HON. JIM BUNNING

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. Speaker, due to previously scheduled open door meetings in my district, I was unable to attend the proceedings of the House on Monday, November 13, 1989. However, I would like the RECORD to show that I would have voted for H.R. 3614, the Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act of 1989, and H.R. 3550, the drug forfeiture amendments.

Since the passage of the Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act in 1986, the programs authorized under this law have proven their necessity and usefulness. H.R. 3614 contains expansions of some of the old programs and initiates new ones, such as special grants to areas with a high intensity of drug use. H.R. 3550, the drug forfeiture amendments, makes necessary technical and administrative changes needed to maintain the wealth of fresh ideas coming out of the newly created Office of National Drug Control Policy.

Combating the drug problem starts with education, and these bills are sorely needed to continue to wage the war on drugs. By promoting a drug-free environment in our Nation's schools and communities, we can help our young people continue to say no to drugs and put those drug lords and cartels out of business.

DEDICATION OF NEW ST. PETER AND ST. PAUL UKRAINIAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

HON. FRANK J. GUARINI

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. GUARINI. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, November 18, 1989, at 2 p.m., the Ukrainian Catholic Church of St. Peter and St. Paul, located at the corner of Bergen Avenue and Bentley Avenue, in Jersey City, will be blessed and consecrated by Philadelphia Archbishop Stephen Sulyk, Metropolitan for all Ukrainian Catholics in the United States.

For Ukrainian Catholics, the parish of St. Peter and St. Paul is known as the mother church for New Jersey, New York, and New England. It was the first parish established by Ukrainian immigrants in New Jersey in 1886. For over 100 years, thousands of parishioners worshipped as a community and received the sacraments while passing on their faith to their children and grandchildren. It was those new generations of parishioners who helped to build this new church.

The $2.5 million Ukrainian Baroque style edifice was designed by Bohdan Kotys of New Brunswick, NJ, and built by Miller Construction of Jersey City, NJ. The design of the building includes five golden tear-shaped domes. The arches on either side of the flat facade typify the churches of Western Ukraine from which many of the parishioners emigrated in the 1800's. The three bells that will be used in the arches are the original ones that were handconstructed by master craftsmen and imported from Europe for the church built in 1892. These bells will remind the parishioners of the long history of the parish and encourage the parish to continue to be a vibrant and thriving part of the history of Jersey City. Jersey City is the headquarters for the Ukrainian National Association of the United States and Canada, the largest fraternal Ukrainian organization in the free world. Jersey City has the third largest branch worldwide of the Self-Reliance Credit Union, and it has a thriving Ukrainian Community Center, at a time when most ethnic organizations do not have one. The new church is thus a fitting complement to the already well-established Ukrainian Community in Jersey City.

The ceremony for the dedication will begin at 2 p.m., with a procession around the block. Escorting the archbishop will be clergy, Church Sisterhood of Women, youth organizations, civic and fraternal groups, parishioners, and guests The archbishop will bless the cornerstone and then proceed into the church to bless it. The altar, which was hand carved by Mykola Holodye, of New York City, will be blessed according to the Ukrainian rite with the ceremony symbolic of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. At that time, the relics of the Ukrainian martyr, St. Josaphat, will be placed on the alter.

Rt. Rev. Msgr. Joseph Fedorek of Elizabeth, dean of the North Jersey Deanery, will preach the English sermon, and the Very Rev. John Bura, a native son of the parish, now the rector of St. Josaphat Seminary in Washington, DC, will deliver the Ukrainian sermon.

The dedication banquet will be held at 5 p.m. at the Ukrainian Center in Jersey City. The children of the parish will be highlighted during a special play prepared by the pastor, Rev. Roman Mirchuk.

On Sunday, November 19, 1989, Archbishop Sulyk will concelebrate the First Divine Liturgy in the new Sts. Peter and Paul Ukrainian Catholic Church in Jersey City.

A reception will follow at 5 p.m. in the auditorium of St. Peter and St. Paul Ukrainian Catholic School, 16 Bentley Avenue, Jersey City, NJ.

I am sure that my colleagues here in the House of Representatives will want to join me in extending best wishes to the parishioners of St. Peter and St. Paul Ukrainian Catholic Church in Jersey City and all Ukrainian Catholics on this happy occasion.

TRIBUTE TO JEAN C. BURNS

HON. LEON E. PANETTA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a woman who has contributed her time and experience to educating our Nation's youth. Ms. Jean C. Burns started to selflessly give her time to the advancement and enlightenment of youngsters when she was merely a junior high school student herself.

Ms. Burns started her teaching career instructing a grade school religion class on Saturday mornings. After she completed her day at school, she took a class at her high school to teach the catechism to grade school age children. It was this experience that made up her mind that she would make a career of the tutelage of our Nation's future, our children.

Having taught junior high school and high school for the last 14 years, with a total of 17 years of experience, Ms. Burns has received the 1990 San Luis Obispo County Teacher of the Year Award. Ms. Burns understands the necessity of education and the power it holds. She teaches with an infectious enthusiasm which cannot help but influence her students with a positive attitude.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me now in congratulating a woman who is leaving her mark in the most important of professions. It is with great respect and pride that I salute the achievements of Ms. Jean Burns.

IN PRAISE OF CAREGIVERS

HON. THOMAS J. DOWNEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, as the chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging's Subcommittee on Human Services, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 282, designating the week of November 19 as "National Family Caregivers Week." I would like to commend the ranking minority member of the subcommittee, Representative OLYMPIA J. SNOWE for once again introducing this resolution.

It is currently estimated that more than 12 million seniors have some degree of limitation in daily activity due to a chronic condition. Of this group, nearly 5 million need help in one or more basic physical activities or need the help of another person in carrying out home management activities. There are two factors that are certain about these numbers. One is they will only increase in the coming years. Two, the overwhelming majority of the care that is being provided to these seniors comes from family, friends, and neighbors. It is estimated that there are over 2.2 million caregivers providing help to elderly family members residing in the community.

The issue of caring for elders is not a new one. It is also a complicated situation, because past roles and relationships between the caregiver and the aged relative have changed. In the past, the Federal response to the growing numbers of caregivers has been fragmentary. In a Senate Aging Committee report issued a few years ago, there was an estimate of at least 80 Federal programs which assist persons with long-term care problems—either directly or indirectly through cash assistance, inkind transfers, or the provisions of goods and services. Yet, most of these programs are for institutional care, despite the fact that our long-term care needs are both for institutional and community and home-based programs.

I am pleased that we are making some progress in terms of redirecting Federal resources to programs that can directly or indirectly help caregivers. Specifically, there is one piece of legislation—the Older Americans Act—last reauthorized in 1987 which moves in the right direction. A new provision was included in this law, a new title III–D, that has a direct bearing on caregivers. Title III–D is called "In Home Services for Frail Older Individuals." Under this program, States are to distribute funds to area agencies on aging to supplement existing programs which provide inhome services to the frail elderly, including inhome supportive services for older Alzheimer's disease victims. I am extremely pleased that the Labor Health and Human Services-Education appropriations bill for fiscal year 1990, H.R. 2990, contains an appropriation level of $6.8 million, which is $2 million above the fiscal year 1989 level.

It is also worth noting that the Older Americans Act already has provisions aimed at helping caregivers. There is a separate home delivered meals program to help meet the nutritional needs of the homebound older person, and today, the average age of the senior being served by this program is almost 80 years of age. In addition, title III–B provides funds for a variety of inhome services as well as respite care and adult day care programs.

I was pleased, earlier this year, to participate in the inaugural ceremony of the New York City Department for the Aging's Partnership for Eldercare Program. This 2-year demonstration project, financed through grants from participating corporations, is designed to serve the working caregiver by providing employers with a menu of services from which they may tailor a program to fit their employees' caregivers needs.

These services could include advice hot lines, one-on-one counseling, a nursing home and home care referral service and a range of consumer education materials and others.

As we pause to acknowledge those who provide caregiving to our elderly, we must reemphasize the need for more public-private partnerships, and the importance of a greater Federal commitment to the caregiver. It is appropriate that Thanksgiving week has been designated by Congress as "National Family Caregivers Week" so that we may give thanks to the millions of Americans who contribute their time and energy caring for their aged loved ones.

DR. RICHARD H. KEATES

HON. PAUL E. GILLMOR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. GILLMOR. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize and salute an Ohioan who is an impressive national leader in the field of ophthalmology. I refer to Dr. Richard H. Keates.

Dr. Keates, who is currently a professor of ophthalmology at the Ohio State University hospitals, is an internationally recognized ophthalmologist. He broke new ground in his field in 1987, when he became the first eye surgeon in the country to implant bifocal lens in cataract patients.

This breakthrough gave cataract patients the hope of never having to wear glasses again. Dr. Keates' accomplishments represent the great American tradition of striving for new technologies that can help people in need.

While I am sorry to learn that Ohio will be losing this outstanding medical leader, I want to take this opportunity to wish Dr. Keates well as he assumes a new responsibility as professor and chairman of the Department of Ophthalmology at the University of California at Irvine. I am certain that he will quickly gain the respect and admiration of his peers in California in the same way he did in Ohio.

As a Member of Congress, I like to help place the spotlight on those whose genius and vision benefit the societies in which they live. Mr. Speaker, Dr. Richard H. Keates is just such an individual. I wish him the best in his future endeavors.

INTRODUCING FOOD TRANSPORTATION SAFETY LEGISLATION

HON. ROBERT A. BORSKI

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce H.R. 3647 which will restore the confidence of American consumers in the safety and reliability of our food supply. As a member of the subcommittee charged with oversight of transportation, I am proud of the speed and insight which the Public Works Committee brought to bear on this issue. This legislation is a prime example of how the congressional oversight process works at its best.

This past year, men and women across this Nation were shocked to discover that foodstuffs and garbage, juices, and chemicals, were being shipped by the same trucks on consecutive trips.

After the subcommittee held hearings on the backhauling of garbage and food, Jim and Rikki Pomerenke, two truckdrivers from Yakima, WA, decided last spring that they would no longer backhaul foods and chemicals. This cost them their jobs, but they felt strongly that the American people deserved to know how their food was transported. Their story formed the basis for a series of investigative articles by James Wallace for the Seattle Post-Intelligencer about chemical backhauling, which caused national concern over the reliability and safety of our food transportation system.

In hearings before the Public Works Subcommittee on Investigations and Oversight, we learned that trucks which carried garbage to midwestern landfills also brought meats and vegetables to the east coast.

We learned that milk and orange juice were carried by tanker trucks which also carried formaldehyde and marine oil. These hearings, particularly the testimony of the truckdrivers and State regulatory officials, demonstrated that these practices constituted a danger not only to our food supply, but to public confidence in the safety of our food chain.

This bill, Mr. Speaker, will restore safety and confidence to the system which carries meat, produce, and liquids across America. The hearings before the Public Works Investigations and Oversight Subcommittee answered three vital questions:

First, what products are carried in the trucks which bring food and drink to our tables?

The answer is that an appalling range of products including municipal waste and industrial chemicals are carried across the country in the same trucks which carry our meats and vegetables, and our juice and milk.

Second, can we be confident of the cleanup and the certification of loads carried in these trucks?

According to witnesses who have spent years driving thousands of loads across America, the answer is no. They, and other professionals who have come forward privately, have told the subcommittee that haulers can be pressured to falsify the documents which tell what loads have been hauled in that truck. They also say that some washout procedures are inadequate.

Third, how can we protect the American people from the risk of adulterated foods?

After the hearings and careful research by the subcommittee, the conclusion was clear: These practices constitute a Federal problem which demands a legislative solution. This bill is that solution.

It proposes straightforward remedies to the risks posed by these practices. This legislation would prohibit refrigerated trucks which transport food from carrying household garbage. Its provisions would also require that cargo tanks be permanently marked as either food grade or nonfood grade.

Food grade tankers would only be permitted to carry food grade products, except for those nonfood grade products specifically approved by the Secretary of Transportation. Permanently marked nonfood grade tankers will never be able to transport food grade products. Under this legislation, not only the carrier, but also the shipper, receiver, and broker would be held responsible for violations. Violations would result in both civil and criminal penalties.

In addition, this legislation would require that asbestos and infectious waste be transported only in dedicated truck lines. The Investigations Subcommittee is currently investigating reports that asbestos and infectious waste, like garbage, are being backhauled to Midwest landfills. Because of the life threatening nature of these materials, it is necessary to restrict their transport to dedicated vehicles.

The bill would require the Secretary of Transportation to issue regulations to ensure that cargo tanks were completely and safely washed out. The Secretary would also undertake a study to determine if there are other types of backhauling, not identified in this legislation, which need to be addressed.

Mr. Speaker, the overriding issue at stake is the transportation of our food supply. I urge my colleagues to join me in prompt support of H.R. 3647, which will ensure that Americans can be confident of the system which carries foodstuffs across America and onto our tables.

TRIBUTE TO LEN DeANGELIS

HON. RONALD K. MACHTLEY

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Mr. Len DeAngelis who was recently named to "1990 Rhode Island Teacher of the Year."

Mr. DeAngelis was chosen from a field of 16 applicants by the Rhode Island Department of Education and was notified of his honor by the Rhode Island education commissioner, J. Troy Earhart.

Mr. DeAngelis teaches English at the Middletown High School and is known for his innovative methods of teaching. Mr. DeAngelis assists his students with their problems both in and out of school and does not hesitate to take extra time for those in need.

A further tribute to Mr. DeAngelis is the fact that he was the second teacher from Middletown High School to be named Teacher of the Year in as many years. Against great odds, Mr. DeAngelis prevailed to prove his superiority.

I would like to thank Len DeAngelis for his devotion to his job. He has demonstrated a love for his work which transcends the classroom while pushing his students to the zenith of their ability. I hope that others will follow the advice of Mr. DeAngelis when he says "Learn as if you were to live forever. Live as if you were to die tomorrow."

THE NEED FOR PARTNERSHIPS IN EDUCATION

HON. MICHAEL A. ANDREWS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, Mirabeau B. Lamar, the second President of the Republic of Texas, said: "Education is the guardian genius of our democracy."

The education of our children is not just for their sake, it is for the sake of our Nation.

As the baby boom generation grows older, the labor market will become increasingly tight. At the same time, the job market will require technical skills and a proficiency in science and mathematics.

Women will comprise 64 percent of the growth in the labor force in the next decade. Minorities will make up one-third of all new workers by the year 2000. Both of these groups are among those traditionally least served by our educational system.

The shortcomings in our education system are clear. The national dropout rate is 25 percent. In my State of Texas, the dropout rate is 45 percent. And in many urban areas, the dropout rate among minorities—especially Hispanics—is as high as 50 percent.

Many of our students are struggling with the basics. Everyone is familiar with the studies showing the poor performance of U.S. students at all age levels on math and science compared to students in other developed and even some developing countries.

Perhaps even more discouraging is that on top of our dropout rate, every year 700,000 high school graduates receive their diplomas even though they can barely read.

Although the challenges are formidable, educational partnerships between the business community and our school systems have proven that we can rise to these challenges. In Houston we are fortunate to have one of the strongest programs in the country. The Volunteers in Public Schools Program was created in 1970 to provide an umbrella for parents, community volunteers and businesses for the children of the Houston Independent School District. This organization now consists of over 20,000 volunteers which give nearly 900,000 hours to the program a year.

In 1980, a Business/School Partnership Program began under the VIP umbrella. Today it boasts over 200 participating companies which provide over 2,000 employees to volunteer in the schools. In addition these businesses provide leadership examples, scholarships and summer jobs.

The businesses do this not just for altruistic reasons. The business community knows that their productivity relies on the productivity of our work force. They have seen the writing on the wall.

Chrysler reports that while its training and technical manuals are written at an eighth grade level, at least 25 percent of its employees now read at or below a sixth grade level.

At Motorola, 80 percent of the applicants cannot pass a simple seventh grade English comprehension exam or a fifth grade math test.

The time has past for the business community to blame educators for an inadequate work force. The ability of our State and our community to attract new businesses, relies on the investment everyone makes in our school systems.

In Houston, the business community and the volunteers have been energized by the volunteers in public schools programs. They have instilled hope in children and pride in volunteers. In addition, I believe their efforts will better prepare our children to meet the economic and intellectual challenges in the next decades.

Congressional activism in this area began in 1987 with the work of Senator Lawton Chiles, of Florida. He secured funds in the fiscal year 1988 Education appropriations bill for school volunteer and partnership programs and the National Association of Partners in Education for a national data base and training.

Senator Chiles had a vision of the future in which the Congress was an active partner with educators and the business community. Together we would work toward lowering the dropout rate and raise the competency of our youth.

Today many of us in Congress are working diligently to build on this foundation. We are at the point when we need to move beyond simply appropriating funds on a year-to-year basis and instead set up a permanent framework to support these programs. We must institutionalize this program enabling it to survive and grow on a long-term basis.

That is why the Business and Citizen School Volunteer Act was introduced. I am a proud sponsor of this bill because I believe it has served as a vehicle to increase awareness on this subject. As written, this legislation provides $5 million to State and local programs. As well as earmarking funds for the national center.

It is critical for Congress to be involved in this movement. Congressional action can provide an arena for dialog.

I know that when I met Jean Davis Myers of the Houston Independent School District and listened to the impact her partnership program was having in the lives of our children, I was struck with the potential these programs have. They have the power to fill in the cracks where so many of our children have fallen.

The business we are about, is our future. As Henry Brook Adams said "A teacher affects eternity, he can never tell where his influence stops."

IN RECOGNITION OF AN EAGLE SCOUT

HON. GEORGE W. GEKAS

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing an exceptional young man from my congressional district in Pennsylvania.

William Joseph Hudson joins the ranks of students from the 17th District who have attained the honor of eagle scout. This month, Bill will be initiated into this prestigous and elite group of young people, a group that represents integrity, honor, dedication, diligence, and duty.

Bill, a resident of Sunbury, graduated from Shikellamy High School last June. While in school, he was vice president of the Key Club, a member of the yearbook staff, and participated on the football and track teams. Bill was a member of the Hesline-Wormley National Honor Society and Who's Who Among American High School Students. While committed to all of these activities and his schoolwork, Bill still found time to hold down a part-time job.

Bill received 31 merit badges in his pursuit of eagle scout, and is now a freshman in the College of Science at Penn State University, where he has received a Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps 4-year scholarship.

Mr. Speaker, William Joseph Hudson represents the best of America's youth. We congratulate him on his impressive achievements and wish him the best of luck in his future endeavors.

AMENDMENTS TO THE FOOD STAMP ACT OF 1977

HON. BILL EMERSON

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, thank you. The chairman of the Committee on Agriculture has asked for consideration of a bill that will, among other things, extend for 1 year the exclusion of specific housing assistance payments from income for the purposes of the Food Stamp Act of 1977. The cost is $3 million for 1990. This exclusion was initially included in the 1987 Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act for the period of 2 years, which therefore means that it expired on September 30, 1989. The bill before the House today extends the income exclusion for 1 year and makes that exclusion retroactive to September 30, 1989.

This provision, both in 1987 and now, will exempt those payments made to welfare hotels from inclusion as income in determining food stamp benefits. As I said back in 1987, families placed in these so-called welfare hotels have special needs. They have limited access to grocery stores, limited food storage, and food preparation facilities. That is the reason for this special treatment of vendor payments made to hotels on their behalf. Nevertheless, the real problem rests with the housing situation. In 1987 I believed that keeping families in these welfare hotels and paying huge amounts for grossly inadequate living quarters did not make sense—the same statement is true today.

The Congress determined that this provision should only be in place for 2 years because it was a situation that must be changed. Unfortunately it has not been changed totally. I am informed that in 1987 there were approximately 4,500 families living in welfare hotels who were covered by this food stamp provision. Today, that number has been reduced to 3,600 families, half of which are in New York City and the remainder in the rest of the State, with New York City doing more to reduce this population than the rest of the State. It makes no sense to permanently continue to subsidize welfare hotels which provide grossly inadequate housing.

On November 19, 1986, the New York Times commented on this situation stating:

* * * But what New Yorker who can count can help calculating what the Federal, State, and city governments spend every month to keep (a) * * * family sleeping in squalor and eating junk? * * * That's $35,424 a year, $3,000 more than the median American income for a family of five. And what does the * * * family get for that? Hunger. Mice. Continued dependency * * *.

I do not object to this provision in the bill offered by the chairman. However, the 1 year gives New York additional time to resolve this terrible situation. I do not believe that the Federal Government should contribute to decisions allowing families to stay in these conditions for any longer.

UTILIZING RECYCLED NEWSPRINT

HON. RICHARD T. SCHULZE

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. SCHULZE. Mr. Speaker, every day a crisis in our Nation deepens without a resolution in sight. The crisis is our inability to utilize recycled newsprint. Municipal landfills are filled beyond capacity. The world's rain forests are being wiped out. In fact, each Sunday, an average edition of the New York Times uses as many as 75,000 trees to go to print. We must develop immediate avenues to ensure that newsprint is recycled.

Today, I am introducing the Newspaper Incentive Recycling Conservation Act. This legislation provides a 10-percent investment tax credit for construction of recycling facilities. It also penalizes newpapers who fail to utilize recycled newsprint after a generous 5-year transition period.

Newsprint today is the largest identifiable item in our landfills; 16 billion pounds of newsprint are thrown away each year; 30 million cubic yards of landfill space are lost to newsprint each year; yet, the Japanese recycle 95 percent of their newsprint and avoid these problems. While recycled newsprint in the United States once brought in $30 a ton, it now costs up to $25 a ton to haul away for disposal. We have a supply, but no demand.

Americans are recycling newsprint across the Nation, but our large newspapers won't do their part. My bill, endorsed by the Sierra Club, provides a carrot for recycling in the form of tax credits. It also includes a stick—tax penalties against the largest papers who fail to utilize recycled newsprint. I urge my colleagues to support my legislation to bring about the recycling of newsprint.

KIWANIS CLUB OF CROFTON, MD

HON. C. THOMAS McMILLEN

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. McMILLEN. Mr. Speaker, on Friday, November 17, 1989, the Kiwanis Club of Crofton, MD, will play host to the governor of the Kiwanis Capital District, Kavanaugh Y. "Spike" Thrift. The Capital District encompasses all of the Kiwanis clubs in Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

The purpose of his visit is to meet with the leaders of all of the Kiwanis clubs in division 14, which includes clubs in Anne Arundel, Howard, and Prince Georges counties. The lieutenant governor of division 14 is James W. Alford of Crofton.

It is appropriate that the Kiwanis Club of Crofton—to which I am proud to belong—has been selected to host the governor's visit. With more than 100 members, our club is the largest in Anne Arundel County and one of the seven largest Kiwanis clubs in Maryland.

More importantly, since its founding in May 1976, the club has compiled an outstanding record of community leadership and public service. It sponsors a regular blood drive in Crofton—which has earned the club a community service award from Kiwanis International—as well as the annual Crofton Halloween Parade, the Arundel High School Key Club, the Crofton Junior High School Builders Club, and many more worthwhile programs and projects.

In recent years, the club has emphasized the serious problem of drug and alcohol abuse among our young people. Using its own funds and a grant from the State of Maryland, the club has sponsored a number of innovative programs aimed at this problem. Among them have been several "Just Say No" days and "Positive Peer Scene Theatre," a group of high school youngsters who present powerful improvisational theater performances about adolescent problems to school assemblies, civic and community service organizations, and others.

One need only look at this club's membership roster to understand why it has become a positive force in the community. Among its members are State delegate Marsha Perry, the current and four past presidents of the Crofton Civic Association, and the current president of the greater Crofton Council. Furthermore, less than 2 weeks ago, the immediate past president of the club Donald B. Everitt, received the prestigious "Crofton Citizen of the Year" award.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to welcome Governor "Spike" Thrift to our area and to congratulate the Kiwanis Club of Crofton and its president, Steven Mehlman, for their outstanding accomplishments.

TRIBUTE TO MOTOROLA, INC., A LEADING GLOBAL COMPETITOR

HON. PHILIP M. CRANE

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, it is important that all public policy makers take note of the article, "The Rival Japan Respects," the cover story in the Business Week edition of November 13, 1989. The article concerns a leading global competitor, Motorola, Inc., which is headquartered in Schaumburg, IL, in the 12th Congressional District. If the Congress and the Bush administration are looking for examples of U.S. companies that know how to manufacture quality products and to successfully market them throughout the world, then this article about Motorola is "must" reading for them. It traces the company's performance from its inception in 1928 to its becoming the first winner of the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award in 1988. It is a proud record, indeed. Under the leadership of Chairman Bob Galvin and CEO George Fisher, we expect Motorola to be even more competitive and more successful in the years to come.

Mr. Speaker, I submit for the RECORD a copy of the Business Week article as follows:

THE RIVAL JAPAN RESPECTS—MOTOROLA'S SECRETS: STRONG R&D, BUILT-IN QUALITY, AND ZEALOUS SERVICE

With a gentle summer breeze wafting across the lake, the chairmen of two of the world's leading high-tech companies put thoughts of U.S.-Japan trade friction behind them. The business at hand was windsurfing. Robert W. Galvin, the athletic, sexagenarian head of Motorola Inc., had coaxed Sony Corp's silver haired Akio Morita into taking a stab at the sport. After some coaching on the shore of the pond on Galvin's estate in Barrington, Ill., the two plunged into the water, and soon Morita was skimming over the waves.

Since that 1986 initiation to windsurfing, Morita often refers lightheartedly to Galvin as "my teacher" Morita also harbors a sincere respect for Galvin's company, "It has kept up a strong emphasis on R&D," says Morita, "and it is willing to invest in research for the long term."

But teaching the Japanese lessons in competitiveness is anything but sport for Galvin and Chief Executive George M. C. Fisher. Motorola is waging a noholds-barred battle in a half-dozen world markets, from semiconductors and automotive electronics to pagers and cellular phones. "We intend to be the best manufacturer of electronics hardware in the world," Fisher insists.

SHRINKING ACTS

The wins are beginning to stack up. In just the past six months, Motorola knocked the wind out of the sails of Japanese telecommunications rivals with two new products, both marvels of miniaturization. First come the MicroTac cellular phone, a Star Trekky unit that slips into a coat pocket and flips open for use. It is far sleeker and a third lighter than the next closest portable phone, from Japan's Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. Despite the MicroTac's hefty $2,500 price, dealers haven't been able to satisfy demand since its April debut, either in the U.S. or Japan.

This summer, the company followed that act with the first wristwatch pager. This ultrasmall product, which resembles the wrist-radio familiar to Dick Tracy fans, has also garnered accolades. The wrist-pager, says John J. Egidio, president of Metromedia Paging Services Inc., seems to have "scooped the world by a year or two."

Compared with Motorola's fortunes of just a few years ago, this is a radical reversal. In the early and mid-1980s, Japanese dumping of better-quality products shattered the Schaumburg (Ill.) company's virtual lock on U.S. markets for pagers and cellular phones. And Motorola's Phoenix-based Semiconductor Products Sector suffered a body blow: It was forced out of dynamic random-access memories (DRAMs), the largest-selling type of chip. In a few short years, Motorola slid from being No. 2 in worldwide chip sales to tagging along behind NEC, Toshiba, Hitachi, and archrival Texas Instruments. At its ebe in early 1986, the company even kicked around a proposal to merge its semiconductor operations with those of Toshiba Corp.

BANDING TOGETHER

Instead, Motorola embarked on a daring plan to out-Japan Japan Inc. The company embraced such Japanese tactics as driving relentlessly for market share, sharply upgrading quality, and constantly honing manufacturing processes to pare costs. And it continues to pour billions into research and development, training, and capital improvements—$1.8 billion, or 19% of revenues, this year alone.

Motorola shook off its not-invented-here bias to become an ardent supporter of R&D consortiums, particularly Sematech, the semiconductor industry's last-ditch effort to stave off the Japanese by developing the best chipmaking technologies available. In addition, the company has been forging strategic alliances with chipmakers here and abroad. Most notable: a 1987 pact with Toshiba, which enabled Motorola to reenter the DRAM business, and a just-signed linkup with IBM to develop cutting-edge chipmaking methods.

Not content simply to copy the Japanese, Motorola has added a distinctive American flair to its efforts. It is exploiting Yankee know-how in areas where Japanese companies have been notoriously weak, such as marketing and software development. And it is pulling out all the stops to become a major force in Japan's home markets.

The payoff has been startling. In semiconductors, Motorola is now king of the U.S. hill, No. 4 in the world—and on the rise in Japan, thanks to its ties to Toshiba (page 121). Chip sales in Japan's sheltered market—the world's largest—jumped 70 percent last year, hitting an estimated $290 million.

Despite some entrenched opponents in Europe—Philips, SGS-Thomson Microelectronics, and TI in chips and L.M. Ericsson in telecommunications—Motorola is gaining ground there, too. And in Southeast Asia, the world's fastest-growing chip market, Motorola has become the No. 3 supplier.

Whether judged by U.S. or by Japanese standards, Motorola builds an unusually broad line of chips. It is strong in two crucial areas—microprocessors and memory chips—and it is a leader in the burgeoning automotive electronics market. Its microprocessors, the "brains" of computerized equipment, dominate most markets other than IBM-compatable personal computers, where Intel Corp. reigns supreme.

Last year, Motorola leapfrogged other chipmakers with a jazzy new breed of digital signal-processing (DSP) chip. Such chips are a sort of special-purpose microprocessor, tailored to handle images, sounds, and similar streams of analog signals. To gear up for high-definition television and other futuristic applications, Motorola plans by yearend to launch a still more powerful design. "Motorola builds chips so it can build things with chips," explains Carl Cobb, who left Motorola's management team in 1987.

What's really the feather in Motorola's cap is the soaring cellular-phone market. Split off from Motorola's communications division, whose principal products are two-way radios and pagers, cellular is bringing new growth potential—$1.3 billion this year. And smaller units in information systems and government electronics will generate revenues of roughly $650 million each. For example, Motorola is the world's largest maker of modems, which enable computers to "talk" to each other over phone lines.

All told, sales and operating profits should climb 13% this year, to $9.5 billion and $512 million respectively, predicts Andrew J. Kessler, an analyst for Morgan Stanley & Co. And that's after taking a $43 million charge in the third quarter for costs associated with trimming the payroll by 2,500. Next year, the staff cuts could add $100 million to the bottom line, Kessler says. Investors obviously like what's happening: Motorola's stock is up to 56, while archrival Texas Instruments Inc.'s has dropped to 32, after both started the year at around 42.

By the mid '1990s, cellular phones, pagers, and other telecom products should kick in a full 70% of total profits and sales, up from less than 50% now. Some of that growth will come from a new thrust in services. For example, in the U.S. and Japan, Motorola is installing nationwide radio networks through which fleet operators can keep in constant touch with their drivers.

The company does have its sour spots, particularly the computer business, acquired in 1982 when Motorola bought minicomputer-maker Four-Phase Systems Inc. Despite its estimated $310 million in sales last year, the unit hasn't chalked up an annual profit since 1984. Morgan Stanley's Kessler expects it to lose $38 million in 1989, bringing the red ink that started in 1985 to more than $200 million.

NO RETREAT

To come as far as it has in just a few years required a top-to-bottom overhaul of Motorola's corporate culture. Founded in 1928 by Galvin's father to hawk car radios—its name came from linking motor with Victrola—the company is no stranger to change. An earlier round of Japanese dumping forced the younger Galvin to sell Motorola's television business. In 1989, the company even bowed out of car radios.

But Galvin, who controls 6% of the company's stock, has now drawn the line. He is determined to leave a healthy legacy for his four children and 13 grandchildren. Many Motorola watchers expect that his 39-year-old son, Christopher, a senior vice-president and chief corporate staff officer, will one day take over as chairman. So Galvin and Fisher, his hand-picked successor as CEO since early 1988, have dyed the white flag red. There will be no more retreating or surrendering markets.

Their game plan calls for Galvin, 67, to spend much of his time in Washington briefing legislators on the realities of international competition and lobbying for the changes that he believes are essential to ensure America's competitiveness. Taking a cue from the Japanese, Galvin shed the laissez-faire attitude that once was a hallmark of high-tech companies. Now, Motorola has no compunction about calling in the cavalry and working hand-in-glove with Washington, especially when it comes to rooting out the various roadblocks that Japan throws in the way of imports. "We cannot allow our competition to have a sanctuary," Galvin declares.

In 1982 and 1984, Motorola convinced the Commerce Dept. that Japanese companies were illegally dumping pagers and cellular phones. Washington socked those imports with tariffs of up to 106%. Last spring, Motorola prodded Commerce into forcing the Japanese government to make good on an earlier promise by coughing up additional radio-spectrum frequencies so Motorola's cellular phone system could operate in the densely populated Tokyo-Nagoya corridor.

GLITCH PATROL

Implementing the company's internal competitiveness measures has fallen mainly to Fisher, 48, who left AT&T Bell Laboratories 13 years ago to join Motorola's mobile-radio unit. His mission has been distilled into a handful of key goals, capped by attaining Six Sigma quality. That's statistical jargon for near-perfect manufacturing—a rate of just 3.4 defects per million products. Only relatively simple products, such as calculators, have reached this level, but Motorola expects to do so across the board by 1992.

Another top priority is still higher customer satisfaction. Fisher wants Motorola to anticipate customer desires and have a solution ready by the time a client wakes up to its need. The company's semiconductor group may have the chip industry's most solicitous customer-service organization. Canon Inc. was so taken with the company's desire to please that it uses a Motorola microprocessor as the heart of its hot-selling EOS 35mm camera (page 118).

Like the Japanese, Motorola has discovered that better quality pays for itself. "Americans used to fall into the trap that high quality costs more," notes Fisher. "But high quality and low cost go hand in hand." That's because good quality reduces the so-called hidden plant: people, floor space, and equipment used for nothing but finding and fixing things that should have been done right the first time. This typically represents 25% to 35% of total production costs.

This lesson hit home for Fisher in 1982, when he directed a pivotal push to crack the Japanese telecom market, then rigorously protected. His team developed a pager that met the exacting demands of Nippon Telegraph & Telephone Corp. It was produced to quality standards at least five times better than Motorola's U.S. pager. But it turned out to be more profitable. Motorola now holds a leading share of the Japanese paging market.

That's because Motorola didn't rest on its laurels. It knew competitors would be burning the midnight oil, and Fisher didn't want to wind up with a me-too product beause "follower positions are secondary financial positions." So Motorola began developing the wrist-pager. Over a three-year period, with Timex Corp. as a partner, engineers shrank the number and size of parts until they could all be squeezed into a watch. They succeeded so well that they added some new features: It is the first pager on the U.S. market to time-stamp incoming messages, for example. It sells for $300, triple the price of many pagers.

To instill its far-flung work force with the new corporate goals, Motorola has launched a massive educational drive for all 105,000 employees. Some courses explore global competitiveness and risk-taking. Others hone practical skills in statistical process control or ways of reducing product cycle times. Workers and managers alike are now expected to keep their noses in books throughout their careers. This type of commitment doesn't come cheap: In 1989, the company will spend $60 million on education.

The emphasis on quality gets even more personal. "It's one thing to give this lip service," notes former executive Cobb. "It's another to make promotions, bonuses, and raises tied to quality improvement." Over the past three years, bonuses pegged in part to quality gains have averaged 3% of Motorola's total payroll. In order to qualify for such incentive awards, workers look beyond the immediate task. "Their job includes not just doing work but analyzing how it's done and fixing problems," says Merle L. Gilmore, general manager of portable communications products.

MIND SET

Overall, employees seem enthusiastic. Take paging. One production step involves putting alphabetic letters on a keyboard, then checking to make sure each key is placed correctly. So a group of workers fashioned a clear template with the letters positioned slightly off-center. By holding the template over a keyboard, assemblers can quickly spot mistakes. Motorola has even borrowed a quaint Japanese custom. Several senior managers bought daruma dolls in Japan. These pâpier-maché figures come without eyes. The ritual calls for blacking one eye when you make a wish, then blacking in the other only after the wish comes true. What did the Motorola exècs ask for? "Six Sigma quality."

To foster more team spirit, Motorola is tearing down the traditional walls that isolate various departments, such as design, manufacturing, and marketing. Now, people from each discipline get involved in new projects early on, so products are designed from the outset to be cost-effective to build and to provide the features that customers want.

Similar barriers between business units are also tumbling down. Collaborations involving two, three, or more divisions are common. For instance, government electronics and cellular communications designed a "secure" cellular phone that encrypts its signals so classified subjects can be discussed. And auto electronics, chips, and communications are developing futuristic systems to ease urban traffic by linking "smart" cars and traffic-control computers.

TOTAL MOBILIZATION

Motorola's gains in quality, efficiency, and costs have been nothing short of spectacular. On one line turning out two-way radios, it now takes just three days from receipt of an order to shipment. Eighteen months ago, that process took 30 days. For cellular phones, the goal is to begin production of new models just six months after the start of the design phase. There's still a way to go—it now takes up to 15 months. But that's down from three years in 1985.

Companywide, defects have been slashed from nearly 3,000 per million products in 1983 to less than 200, estimates Richard C. Buetow, director of quality. Since 1987, a vigorous attack on high-cost "find it and fix it" quality control has been saving $250 million annually—nearly 41% of last year's pretax income. Such improvements were a major reason that Motorola won last year's Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award.

All of the new thrusts came together in the MicroTac—especially collaborative design and engineering. "We were able to mobilize the whole company," says Robert N. Weisshappel, general manager for the North American subscriber division. The upshot: The pocket-slim phone has just 400 parts, about 12% as many as Motorola's first portable cellular phone in 1978. And at the MicroTac's state-of-the-art plant in Arlington Heights, Ill., those 400 parts are assembled by robots and workers in only two hours, down from the 40 hours required to build cellular phones in 1985.

The MicroTac would never have happened if Motorola had not been prepared to make a long-term investment, pumping in $100 million over 10 years before it saw any return. While that type of investment is standard for Japanese companies, it took grit for Motorola. The company is only a fraction of the size of Matsushita Electric, with revenues of $42 billion, and NEC Corp., at $24 billion. While these Goliaths can afford to wait patiently for long-term payoffs, "Motorola is held hostage to Wall Street's quarterly earnings fixation," notes Rudyard L. Istvan, a senior vice-president at Boston Consulting Group Inc. So, says Galvin, "we've learned to put capital to work faster and get the return much quicker."

But Motorola's risky 10-year wait now look prescient indeed. Market researchers predict that in the 1988-90 period, U.S. cellular subscribers will have doubled, to 4.5 million, then will skyrocket to 15 million by the mid-1990s. Rapid growth is expected in Europe and Japan, too. More important, each subscriber requires $1,500 in additional system equipment—a market in which Motorola is a world leader.

Of course, Motorola's competitors are hardly standing pat. One of the more formidable threats may come from a proposed merger involving communications units of Ericcson and General Electric Co. In September, Ericcson introduced a 14.8-oz. cellular phone. Although it costs more than MicroTac and won't be sold outside Scandinavia until next year, it could give Motorola a run for the market. NTT is also hustling to develop a smaller and lighter unit.

With an eye on customers who balk at the MicroTac's stiff price, Motorola in mid-October unveiled a slightly heavier, 16.5-ounce portable. But it still is lighter than most Japanese offerings—and less expensive, at $1,200. With this product lineup, Motorola should grab 50% of new U.S. cellular phone sales by 1990, says Herschel Shosteck, president of a Silver Spring (Md.) consulting firm.

Motorola has sunk even more into Japan—$200 million (excluding investments in a joint chipmaking venture with Toshiba), and only now is Nippon Motorola Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary, finally earning its keep. And it is winning grudging praise from some Japanese customers: "Motorola is not inferior to domestic suppliers on matters of quality, price, or delivery," says a purchasing manager at Matsushita's VCR plant near Osaka. Yet total sales in Japan, from semiconductors to pagers and cellular phones, last year ran a mere $750 million, or 7.8% of Motorola's worldwide revenues.

TOUGH SWIM

That's barely a token of what the company believes it could achieve. While the U.S. remains the world's most open marketplace, Japan continues to litter obstacles in the path of foreign makers. Observe Clyde V. Prestowitz, former trade counselor at Commerce: "You can be a fantastic swimmer, but you can't go too fast if you're swimming in wet cement."

So this American samurai isn't about to ease its hard-nosed stance—or allow Washington to look the other way because U.S. consumers may be reaping bargains from Japanese dumping. That cost the U.S. its consumer-electronics industry in the 1970s. "Until we have market shares in Japan comparable to those in the rest of the world, I don't think we can feel we've come close to our goals," insists Fisher. That goes for U.S. industry as a whole, too.

TAKING ON JAPAN: WHY U.S. BUSINESS WANTS BACKUP

Tokyo police got their first taste of Motorola, Inc.'s communications savvy in 1946, when U.S. occupation forces lent them some mobile radio equipment. Then, to help spur industrial recovery, the Army told the Japanese they could copy the equipment. Motorola engineers even stood by with technical advice. There was no mention of patents or license fees.

Back then, no one could anticipate Japan's microelectronics miracle and the havoc it would wreak on U.S. industry. Within 40 years, Motorola would be driven out of color TVs, then computer memory chips, by some of the same companies it helped raise from the rubble of World War II. Other American companies suffered worse fates: They no longer exist.

With the casualties mounting, some U.S. politicians have called for an industrial policy patterned on Japan's. But cloning Japan, with Uncle Sam designating winning industries and sheltering fledging technologies from offshore competition, will never fly on Capitol Hill. Too many legislators recognize, thankfully, that Washington isn't up to that challenge. So American high-tech companies are pioneering their own industry-led policy: What they ask is that the government apply some political leverage with countries prone to treat trade as a one-way street.

RADIO DAZE

This approach has worked. In the summer of 1988, IBM and a handful of supporters enlisted the Commerce Dept. to block a plan by the Japanese Ministry of Posts & Telecommunications to impose standards that would have locked the U.S. out of a profitable niche in international data communications. This summer, it was Motorola's turn. The ministry tried to shut Motorola out of Tokyo's lucrative market for cellular phones, saying that there was a shortage of radio frequencies. In fact, the ministry was sitting on extra bandwidth—reserved for a group of Japanese companies. Threatened with retaliatory trade sanctions, Japan gave Motorola some of that voice-communications spectrum.

Were Washington to backpedal now, Japan's bureaucrats would take it as a sign of weakness and edge the door shut again. But U.S. Trade Representative Carla A. Hills may have sent a crossed signal on her recent visit to Tokyo. She made conciliatory gestures to Posts Minister Senpahci Oishi, then publicly railed against managed trade.

Yet managed trade is exactly what the U.S. is insisting on. Japan is voluntarily curbing exports to the U.S. of autos, machine tools, and textiles. And Japanese dumping of DRAM computer chips was ended by the Semiconductor Trade Agreement. Hills's puzzling behavior will only make it tougher to convince Tokyo that the U.S. cannot go on paying for manufactured products with real estate and capital assets that Japan must instead accept U.S.-made goods in return.

Japan's high-tech policies, while hard-hitting, provide some important lessons for Washington. Hitachi, Matsushita, Toshiba, and other giants were allowed to savage the U.S. consumer electronics industry in the 1970s. Now, they reap all profits on car stereos and large-screen TVs sold in America—and plow those profits back into projects to expand Japan's worldwide markets. Billions are being lavished on chipmaking techniques, for example. Hitachi Ltd. is already testing equipment for making the 64-megabit memory chips that won't be introduced until a decade from now.

So Japan seems destined to control more and more of the chip and chip-equipment markets, making Motorola, IBM, and other equipment manufacturers increasingly dependent on their competitors. And as the innovation lead shifts inexorably to Japan, U.S. companies can't hope to stay in the running without access to Japanese markets. Only resolute pressure from Washington can crack that door and keep it open, because Tokyo officials are worried about more domestic competition from the likes of Motorola and IBM. Both have strong manufacturing arms, cutting-edge technology in chips and electronic systems, and reputations for high quality.

MEMORIES

Until the Japanese pay more than lip service to freer trade Washington has little choice but to redress the disadvantages under which U.S. companies operate. That's why more and more U.S. executives argue that in markets faced with substantial foreign competition, cooperation of any type, including manufacturing, should be exempt from antitrust laws. That would pave the way for consortiums such as U.S. Memories Inc., the co-op that plans to produce memory chips. U.S. Memories "needs to be done," says Robert N. Noyce, vice-chairman of Intel Corp., "for the sake of national security and the national economy."

In addition, the American Electronics Assn. believes a national program in high-definition television is vital to revive the U.S. consumer electronics industry. Others feel that the Bush Administration should make certain the U.S. loses no more ground in semiconductor production equipment. At the same time, they say, Washington must keep pressing Japan to buy more U.S.-made chips.

Unfortunately, the trends are in the opposite direction. Commerce is backing off from its flirtation with an HDTV project, and it is no longer insisting that Japan honor its commitment to help U.S. chipmakers win a 20% share of the Japanese semiconductor market. Nor is Washington paying much heed to the plight of the small but technology-rich companies in the chip-equipment industry.

In 1946, Mitsubishi, Matsushita, and NEC had Motorola to show them the ropes in mobile communications. Should the shoe ever be on the other foot, would any Japanese giant return the favor?

DOWN IN PHOENIX, EVERYTHING IS CHIP-SHAPE—THE MOTOROLA SEMICONDUCTOR UNIT GETS LOTS OF RESPECT THESE DAYS

It has always been the other Motorola, the stepchild a half-continent and a full mindset away from Motorola Inc.'s suburban Chicago headquarters. Chicago was where people made real products, like car radios and walkie-talkies. Those slightly wacky, entrepreneurial types who made seminconductors in Phoenix just supplied the components.

Well, the stepchild has grown up, and Chicago is taking notice. Motorola's Semiconductor Products Sector now sells more chips than any other U.S. company. For the first time ever, a semiconductor manager, Gary L. Tooker, has been promoted to top corporate management. The Phoenix folks still have a chip on their shoulder, though. When Tooker was named chief operating officer, recalls one wag, the reaction in Arizona was: "Why's our guy only No. 2?"

FRONT-RUNNER

Last year, when market researcher Dataquest Inc. surveyed chip purchasers for their assessments of vendors in terms of products, price, quality, delivery, and technical support, no one came close to Motorola's ratings. "Motorola sticks by its customers with product lines that others have long since vacated," says Charles M. Clough, president of Wyle Laboratories and a longtime veteran of Motorola's archrival, Texas Instruments Inc.

Computer memory chips exemplify Motorola's commitment to its customers. In 1985, when Japanese dumping of DRAMs, or dynamic random-access memory chips, finally drove Motorola from that business, "we made the decision to get back in on the same day we decided to get out," recalls James A. Norling, head of chip operations. Motorola reasoned that because DRAMs are the workhorse of the whole electronic industry, it could hardly claim to be a full-service supplier without these chips.

Nine months later, Motorola was back in—putting slivers of silicon from Japan's Toshiba Corp. into Motorola packages. That arrangement soon blossomed into a far-reaching technology-exchange agreement: Toshiba would put Motorola back in the business of making DRAMs in exchange for Motorola's crown-jewel microprocessors—a field where the U.S. retains a distinct advantage over Japan.

Motorola has always vied for the leadership role with microprocessor pioneer Intel Corp. But after IBM in 1981 selected Intel's design for its personal computers, other customers began considering the Intel chip. So Motorola decided "we had to have something much better," says Murray A. Goldman, senior vice-president at the Microprocessor Group. "We changed to a leapfrog strategy."

SLOW START

It worked. Today, Motorola's designs dominate most markets apart from IBM-compatible PCs. And now, high-powered engineering workstations with Motorola "engines" are slowly moving in on the top-end PC market.

Motorola has also staked a claim in the emerging top-end microprocessor technology dubbled RISC, for reduced instruction-set computing. The idea is to boost processing speed by trimming the number of commands that a chip must mainpulate. Motorola dallied in developing its own RISC processor—for what many analysts worried was too long—but its chip is now being shipped. And Alice Leeper, a Dataquest market researcher, is confident that "Motorola will emerge as one of the standards."

The Phoenix chipmaker is also taking steps to ensure that it is one the cutting edge of semiconductor manufacturing technology. In late October, Motorola teamed up with IBM to develop ways of using X rays to "print" the ultrathin circuit lines that will be essential to 21st century superchips.

With the cost of world-class semiconductor factories now $500 million and climbing, Motorola's marriage with deep-pocketed Toshiba is often held up as a model for U.S. chipmakers. Observers especially admire Motorola's tactic of making sure it gets as much as it gives. Many previous U.S. Japan deals have been criticized because the U.S. company sold the store up front and got nothing of on-going value in return. But Motorola is doling out microprocessor technology only in exchange for increased market share in Japan.

That's one reason why Motorola is coming on strong in Japan, now the world's biggest chip market. Since 1987, its business there has more than doubled, and the future looks still brighter. Motorola will supply the next generation of engine-control chips in Toyota cars and a circuit to enhance picture quality in Panasonic video products.

So Motorola's chipmakers are proving they aren't so wacky after all. They can drive bargains as hard as the best of the street fighters back in Chicago.

INTRODUCTION OF THE SECURITIES MARKETS STABILIZATION ACT OF 1989, AND THE COORDINATED CLEARING AND SETTLEMENT ACT OF 1989

HON. EDWARD J. MARKEY

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, today I, along with Mr. RINALDO, the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance, which I chair; and my subcommittee colleague from New Mexico, Mr. RICHARDSON, am introducing the Securities Markets Stabilization Act of 1989 and the Coordinated Clearance and Settlement Act of 1989, both of which were unanimously approved this morning by the subcommittee.

The Securities Markets Stabilization Act of 1989 represents the first legislative step toward reform of the stock market in the aftermath of the frightening crashes of October 1987 and October 1989, events that have shaken investor confidence to its very core. This long-awaited and much-needed first step comes after nearly 2 years of extensive consideration of all the issues surrounding market reform, a process that has included 12 hearings by this subcommittee, 4 in this year alone; in-depth expert analyses by the Brady Commission, the Katzenbach Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the working group on financial markets; as well as a further series of 6 SEC investigations of program trading and other related issues initiated in response to requests of this subcommittee. I first introduced comprehensive market reform legislation in the 100th Congress, with H.R. 4997. And earlier this year, at the request of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Chairman JOHN DINGELL and I introduced similar legislation, H.R. 1609, the "Stock Market Reform Act of 1989."

The Stabilization Act contains four provisions necessary to market reform: (1) a grant to the SEC of authority to halt all trading in a market emergency, (2) a directive to the SEC to require large traders to report their transactions, (3) a directive to the SEC to assess the financial health of parents and affiliates of broker/dealers, and (4) a grant of authority to the SEC to constrain program trading. A fifth provision would direct the Commission to facilitate coordinated clearing and settlement with other Government agencies. This provision stands alone in the coordinated clearance and settlement committee print.

All these provisions have been the subject of extensive negotiation with the SEC and Treasury, who strongly support moving forward on market reform. The provisions we have negotiated with the SEC and the securities industry on large trader reporting, risk assessment and others are extremely valuable from a market surveillance standpoint. In addition, the section concerning powers to prohibit certain trading practices addresses the one issue at the top of every investors list—the habitual, excessive, and violent market volatility that has driven the individual investor out of the stock market. This manufactured volatility has turned Wall Street into the mean streets of investing. It's as if we turned off all the Nation's stop lights, made all speed limits voluntary, stopped filling the pot holes, or repairing the bridges—and told the American public to go it alone. Such a retreat from common sense would not be tolerated in any of our hometowns, yet we are treating Wall Street with the kind of appalling disregard that can only result in financial disrepair. For this reason, the Securities Markets Stabilization Act committee print includes a provision that would authorize the SEC to suspend or constrain manipulative, abusive, or disruptive practices that feed volatility—such as program trading—during times of excessive market volatility.

Right now, we are faced with the tyranny of our own ingenuity. Somewhere along the way our regulators and our Government forgot the fundamental notion that technology must exist to serve, not suppress, human needs. Technology must continue to serve as an instrument to nurture our financial markets, markets which were first established to serve the capital raising needs of Amercia's corporations. And technology must serve to allow individual Americans to invest in a piece of corporate America. But since October 1987, I have received numerous calls and letters from angry investors who have withdrawn their money from the market because they find no security in a stock market that behaves more like a yo-yo than an orderly mechanism for buying and selling shares in corporate America.

I do not believe that Congress can or should legislate up markets or down markets—what we should do is legislate fair markets. Right now we have unfair markets—markets that are dominated by a few 1-minute stockholders at the expense of the many. In the words of one recent subcommittee witness, comparing a program trader to an investor is like comparing a shark to a gourmet diner. We have large institutional shareholders who have engaged in trading strategies that are based on the erroneous notion that our markets contain unlimited liquidity. And we have aggressive traders whom I believe engage in manipulative trading strategies that profit from the volatility created by the lack of liquidity in our markets.

Excessive volatility in our securities markets is a national problem that demands a national solution. The SEC must have the necessary legal authority to address the impact of all of these trading strategies, legal, and illegal, that fuel harmful market volatility. By the same token, we are not banning program trading—this bill will only give the SEC authority to suspend or constrain such trading practices during periods of high volatility.

I want to add in closing that our financial markets are a national treasure and a national resource. We should treat them with respect. The actions we take here today on market reform in particular are a true measure of that respect and are the first step in restoring the integrity and stability of our securities markets.

Mr. Speaker, for the benefit of my colleagues, I am enclosing section-by-section analyses of the two bills introduced today.

I urge my colleagues to join me in cosponsoring this legislation.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF "SECURITIES MARKETS STABILIZATION ACT OF 1989"

Section 1. Short Title

This section provides that the bill may be cited as the "Securities Markets Stabilization Act of 1989".

Section 2. Emergency Authority; Trading Halts

This section of the bill amends Section 12(k) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 by clarifying and broadening the Commission's authority to suspend trading and to take temporary actions in the event of an emergency. The Commission would be authorized to take such action in order to maintain or restore fair and orderly securities markets and to ensure prompt and accurate clearance and settlement of securities transactions. This section also specifically authorizes the SEC to suspend trading for stated periods of time, subject to some limitations. In the case of a market-wide trading halt, in lieu of the President's approval, the new subsection (k)(1) would require the Commission to notify the President of its decision and be notified by the President that the President does not disapprove of such a halt before a market-wide halt could be put into place. And finally the section defines an emergency as a major market disturbance characterized by, or constituting a substantial threat of sudden and excessive fluctuations of securities prices that threaten fair and orderly markets, or as a substantial disruption of the safe or efficient operation of the national system for clearance and settlement of securities.

Subsection (k)(1)—Trading Suspensions. Under existing Section 12(k) of the Exchange Act, the Commission is authorized to (i) suspend trading in any security (other than an exempted security) for a period of time not exceeding ten days, and (ii) with the approval of the President, summarily to suspend all trading on any national securities exchange or otherwise, in securities other than exempted securities, for a period not exceeding ninety days. It also prohibits a member of a national securities exchange, broker, or dealer from acting in contravention of a Commission suspension order.

Subsection (k), as amended, would preserve the Commission's present authority to suspend trading in individual securities without change. However, with respect to potential market-wide trading halts, in lieu of the President's approval, the new subsection (k)(1) would require the Commission to notify the President of its decision and be notified by the President that he does not disapprove of such decision.

The exisitng prohibition on actions by brokers, dealers or exchange members contained in Section (k) is altered slightly and transferred to new subsection (k)(4), which is discussed below.

Paragraph (k)(2)—Emergency Actions. This new subparagraph (A) would authorize the Commission, by order, to take temporary emergency action with respect to any matter subject to regulation under the Exchange Act. The Commission's authority to take summary action under this subsection would extend to all matters subject to regulation under the Exchange Act by the Commission, and the securities self-regulatory organizations, including, but not limited to, the ability to alter, supplement, suspend, or impose requirements or restrictions with respect to hours of trading, position limits, and clearance and settlement. Thus, the Commission's emergency authority could be used to relax or to impose more stringent requirements or restrictions in an emergency.

Emergency actions ordered by the Commission under subparagraph (B) would remain in effect for the time specified by the Commission. The Commission would be authorized to extend the effectiveness of emergency actions, but in no event would any action taken in response to a particular emergency remain in effect for more than ten business days, including extensions. This limitation would not apply with respect to actions taken in response to any other emergency that might occur during the ten business day period. While many of the measures authorized under this paragraph would be necessary only for very short periods, perhaps hours or minutes, other matters, such as those relating to hours of business and clearance and settlement, might be required for longer periods, up to ten days, in order to be effective.

Prior to taking temporary emergency action, the Commission would be required to make only the findings required by this paragraph, and would not be required to make findings or observe procedures prescribed by any other provisions of the Exchange Act. To ensure that the Commission would be able to take emergency action without procedural delay, the paragraph would expressly exempt the Commission, in excercising its emergency authority, from the agency rule-making requirements prescribed by the Administrative Procedure Act, and from the requirements prescribed by the Exchange Act Section 19(c) for abrogating, adding to, or deleting from the rules of a self-regulatory organization.

Paragraph (k)(3)—Presidential Override. This paragraph expressly limits the Commission's authority to act to halt trading on any national securities exchange as provided in subsection (k)(1)(B) and to take emergency action pursuant to subsection (k)(2). This paragraph provides that the President may terminate any suspension of trading or other summary action taken by the Commission under those subsections.

Paragraph (k)(4)—Compliance. This paragraph provides that no member of a national securities exchange, broker, or dealer shall act in contravention of a Commission order entered under subsection (k) of Section 12, unless such order has been stayed, modified, or set aside as provided in paragraph (k)(5) of Section 12.

Paragraph (k)(5)—Judicial Review. Emergency action taken by the Commission under subsection (k) would be subject to judicial review in the United States Courts of Appeals as provided in Section 25(a) of the Exchange Act, based on an examination of all information before the Commission at the time such action was taken subject to the assertion of any applicable privilege by the Commission. The reviewing court would be prohibited from entering a stay, writ of mandamus or similar relief unless the courts finds, after notice and hearing before a panel of the court, that the Commission's action is arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law. Thus, a court reviewing emergency action, taken by the Commission under subsection (k) would be permitted to act only after the Commission had an opportunity to explain the basis for its action.

Paragraph (k)(6)—Definition of "Emergency." This paragraph defines "emergency" to mean a major market disturbance characterized by, or constituting a substantial threat of sudden and excessive fluctuations of securities prices generally that threaten fair and orderly markets, or a substantial disruption of the safe or efficient operation of the national system for clearance and settlement of securities.

Section 3. Large Trader Reporting

Section 3 adds a new subsection (h) to Section 13 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 providing for the filing of reports concerning substantial securities transactions. This new subsection is designed to assist the Commission in its surveillance of the U.S. securities markets, clarifying and expanding its broad authority to adopt record-keeping and reporting rules for the purpose of monitoring the impact on the securities markets of large transactions. Generally speaking, the section would authorize the Commission to establish a two-tiered information-gathering and reporting system for monitoring large securities transactions. The first tier requires large traders to report their identity, and all the accounts which such large traders have used to effect such transactions. The second tier requires every registered broker or dealer to keep records of large trader transactions and provide such records to a self-regulatory organization or the Commission on request. The Commission could use the information required by this new subsection to reconstruct trading activities in periods of market stress, and for surveillance, enforcement and other appropriate regulatory purposes.

Paragraph (h)(1)—Large Trader Reporting. This paragraph woud authorize the Commission to adopt rules requiring any person effecting large transactions to provide information. The information provided would identify the "large trader" and also identify the accounts in and through which he effects large securities transactions. It is anticipated that each such "large trader" reporting under this paragraph will obtain a unique identifying number.

Paragraph (h)(2)—Broker-Deal Transaction Reporting. This paragraph requires brokers and dealers effecting transactions for large traders to keep records of such transactions that equal or exceed a limit to be set by the Commission from time to time. Such records must be available for immediate reporting to the Commission (or any designated self-regulatory organization) at the opening of business on the business day following the day the transactions were effected. In addition, the paragraph requires that the records and reports be maintained and transmitted to the Commission in a format and in a manner to be prescribed by the Commission (including, but not limited to, machine readable form). It is anticipated that brokers and dealers will utilize the large trader's unique identifying number in order to record and report the large trader's transaction.

Paragraph (h)(3)—Aggregation. This paragraph authorizes the Commission to prescribe rules governing the manner in which transactions shall be aggregated. Generally, aggregation of accounts among different broker-dealers will occur at the self-regulator level or at the Commission, through use of the unique large trade identifying number.

Paragraph (h)(4)—Examinations. The paragraph reiterates authority currently contained in Section 17(b) of the Securities Exchange Act. It would require that all records made by brokers and dealers pursuant to subsection (h) be available at any time to reasonable, special, or other examinations by representatives of the Commission.

Paragraph (h)(5)—Considerations. This paragraph provides that, in exercising its authority under this subsection, the Commission shall take into account existing reporting systems, and the costs associated with maintaining information with respect to transactions effected by large traders and reporting such information to the Commission or self-regulatory organizations. The Commission understands the need for setting parameters for reporting securities transactions and making available records of such transactions. Every effort would be made to minimize the economic burdens of record-keeping and reporting whenever possible. Moreover, the costs and benefits of beneficial ownership reporting would be carefully considered, and the Commission would not impose requirements on broker-dealers to report beneficial ownership information that is not recorded in the normal course of business. For example, many broker-dealers currently maintain no beneficial ownership record of transactions of foreign persons that are carried out through banks, particularly foreign banks, which serve as the record holder of such securities. Finally, the paragraph requires the Commisison, in adopting any rules under subsection (h), to consider the relationship between the U.S. domestic markets and the international marketplace for securities.

Paragraph (h)(6)—Exemptions. This paragraph would permit the Commission by rule, regulation, or order, to exempt any person, transactions, or classes or persons or transactions, either conditionally or upon specified terms and conditions or for stated periods of time, from the operation of subsection (h) and the rules and regulations thereunder.

Paragraph (h)(7)—Confidentiality. This paragraph provides that the Commission (or any other Federal department or agency) could not be compelled to disclose publicly any information required to be reported under this section for which disclosure might otherwise be required pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. 552, or of any other law. However, the Commission is not prevented under this paragraph from complying with information requests from Congress, any other Federal department or agency requesting the information for purposes within the scope of its jurisdiction, or a court of the United States in any action commenced by the United States or the Commission.

Paragraph (h)(8)—Definitions. This paragraph contains definitions necessary to carry out the purposes of this subsection.

(A) The term "large trader" means every person who for his own account or an account for which he exercises investment discretion, effects transactions for the purchase or sale of any publicly traded security in an aggregate amount equal to or in excess of the identifying activity level. Large traders may include, among others, individuals, banks, broker-dealers, insurance companies, investment advisors, mutual funds, pension funds, and trust companies.

(B) The term "publicly-traded security" means any equity security (including an option on individual equity securities, and an option on an index or group or equity securities) listed, or admitted to unlisted trading privileges on a national securities exchange, or quoted in an automated inter-dealer quotation system.

(C) The term "identifying activity level" means transactions in publicly traded securities at or above a level of volume or dollar amount, which occur over a set period of time, both items of which shall be set by the Commission from time to time.

(D) The term "reporting activity level" means largely the same as "identifying activity level."

(E) In addition to the entities described in Section 3(a)(9) of the Exchange Act, the term "person" is deemed to include two or more persons acting as a partnership, limited partnership, syndicate or other group for the purpose of trading, acquiring, holding or disposing of any publicly traded security, except a foreign central bank.

Section 4. Risk Assessment for Holding Company Systems

This section amends section 17 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 by adding a new subsection (h). The new subsection is intended to assist the Commission in obtaining information regarding the financial activities of affiliates of broker-dealers that are part of holding company systems that are reasonably likely to have a material impact on the financial and operational condition of broker-dealers under the Commission's jurisdiction. Over the past decade, an increasing number of broker-dealers have formed holding company systems and have moved many potentially risky activities (such as bridge loan financing, interest rate swaps, and foreign currency transactions) outside of the broker-dealer and into affiliates or holding companies that are not under direct regulatory oversight. Many of these activities may involve significant potential exposure to the broker-dealer entity. In periods of adverse market conditions, it is particularly important for the Commission to have access to information regarding the extent of such activities in order to assess the stability of broker-dealer participants in the marketplace.

The new subsection builds on the Commission's existing authority contained in the Exchange Act (i) to adopt rules concerning safeguards with respect to financial responsibility and related practices of brokers and dealers; (ii) to require record-keeping and reporting requirements for brokers, dealers, and municipal securities dealers; and (iii) to examine brokers, dealers, municipal securities dealers, and government securities brokers and dealers for which it is the appropriate regulatory agency. This new subsection, however, requires only record-keeping and reporting relating to the financial and securities activities of associated persons. It does not in itself provide the Commission with any new authority to regulate directly the activities of such associated persons.

Paragraph (h)(1)—Record-keeping and Summary Reporting. This paragraph would require registered brokers and dealers, and registered municipal securities dealers for which the Commission is the appropriate regulatory authority, to obtain information and make and keep records regarding the registered person's policies, procedures or systems for monitoring and controlling activities of any of its associated persons. The paragraph would not require information concerning the activities of any associated person that is a natural person. The information and records to be kept pursuant to this paragraph, to be prescribed by the Commission by rule, shall describe in the aggregate each of the financial and securities activities conducted by, and customary sources of capital and funding of, those of its associated persons whose business activities are reasonably likely to have a material impact on the financial or operational condition of such registered person. Financial and securities activities would include, but not be limited to, activities of securities firms, futures, forwards, and spot market commodity transaction; commercial paper factoring and dealing; purchases of financial assets for sale as securities; merchant banking (including bridge financing); lending; and the exchange rate or foreign currency obligations. The record-keeping and reporting obligation would not extend to non-financial, non-securities activities, such as manufacturing. This paragraph also would enable the Commission to require, by rule, summary reports of the records kept pursuant to this paragraph to be filed with the Commission no more frequently than quarterly.

Paragraph (h)(2)—Call Reports.—This paragraph would empower the Commission to require special "call" reports, containing more detailed information than is required pursuant to paragraph (h)(1), concerning the financial and securities activities of an associated person of a broker-dealer. In addition to covering registered brokers and dealers and registered municipal securities dealers for which the Commission is the appropriate regulatory agency, paragraph (h)(2) would permit the Commission also to request "call" reports from registered government securities brokers or dealers for which the Commission is the appropriate regulatory agency.

As a result of adverse market conditions or as a result of the summary information provided to the Commission pursuant to paragraph (h)(1) or based on other available information, the Commission may require further reports concerning the financial and securities activities of a broker-dealer's associated persons if it reasonably concludes that it has concerns regarding the broker-dealer's financial or operational condition. For example, pursuant to this authority, the Commission may require registered persons to disclose the trading positions of their affiliates. Again, the paragraph would not require information to be required concerning the activities of any associated person that is a natural person. Special call reports required under this paragraph (h)(2) shall specify the information required, the period for which it is required, the time and date on which the information must be furnished, and whether the information is to be furnished directly to the Commission or to a self-regulatory organization with primary responsibility for examining the registered person's financial and operational condition.

Paragraph (h)(3)—Exclusion for Small Affiliates of International Holding Companies. This paragraph provides for an exclusion for entities with a net worth of less than $25 million that are part of an international holding company that, on a consolidated basis, does not devote a significant amount or proportion of its assets to, or obtain significant revenue from, activities in the U.S. securities markets.

Paragraph (h)(4)—Commission Exemptive Authority. This paragraph permits the Commission to provide exemptions by rule, regulation or order from the record-keeping and reporting requirements contained in paragraphs (h)(1) and (h)(2), either condtionally or upon specified terms and conditions or for stated periods. In granting such exemptions, the paragraph requires the Commission to consider the primary business of any associated person; the nature and extent of domestic or foreign regulation of the associated person's activities; the nature and extent of the registered persons securities activities; and, with respect to the registered person and its associated persons, on a consolidated basis, the amount and proportion of assets devoted to, and revenues derived from, activities in the United States securities markets. Moreover, with respect to regulated entities, the Commission must consider whether information of the type required by the section is available to the Commission, from a supervisory agency as defined in section 1101 of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3401(6)), a state insurance commission or similar state agency, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, or a similar foreign regulator.

Paragraph (h)(5)—Confidentiality. Paragraph (h)(5) provides that the Commission could not be compelled to disclose publicly any information required to be reported under paragraph (h) for which disclosure might otherwise be required pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. 552, or any other laws. However, the Commission is not prevented from providing information to Congress, any other Federal department or agency requesting the information for purposes within the scope of its jurisdiction or a court of the United States in an action commenced by the United States or the Commission.

Subsection (b)—Conforming Amendments. In conforming amendments to be made to the Government Securities Act contained in section 15C of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 780-4), the Secretary of the Treasury would be given similar rulemaking authority with respect to government securities brokers and dealers registered under section 15C(a)(1)(A) of the Exchange Act, i.e., those that are not registered brokers or dealers or financial institutions. In exercising that authority the Secretary would be required to avoid unnecessary duplicative requirements concerning holding company systems that have both registered brokers and dealers and registered government securities brokers and dealers. Specifically, the section requires that the requirements applicable to associated persons of government securities brokers and dealers who are also associated persons of registered broker dealers reporting to the Commission conform, to the greatest extent practicable, to the reporting and record-keeping requirements established by the Commission under Section 17(h).

Section 5. Limitation on Practices Which Result in High Levels of Volatility

This section amends section 9 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 by adding a new subsection (h). This new subsection authorizes the SEC by rule or regulation to prohibit or constrain manipulative or abusive practices that will result or are reasonably likely to result in levels of volatility that may adversely affect the integrity or stability of the securities markets. This provision is aimed at arming the SEC with the necessary tools to control excessive volatility and thereby to restore and retain the confidence of the investing public in our nation's securities markets. The SEC's authority to control and prevent such volatility does not extend beyond its currently authorized jurisdictional domain—the securities markets.

Paragraph (2) of this subsection provides for the Commission to seek monetary penalties in judicial proceedings for violations of this section. The penalties shall be determined by the court in light of facts and circumstance, but may not exceed the greater of either $100,000 for a natural person or $500,000 for any other person or the pecuniary gain to such defendant as a result of the violation.

Paragraph (3)(A) of this subsection provides the Commission, after notice and the opportunity for hearing, to issue a cease and desist order to persons violating, to those who have violated or to those who are planning to violate regulations or rules prescribed under this subsection. Subparagraph (B) provides that if the Commission determines that that violation is likely to cause significant disruption of the securities markets or otherwise significantly harm investors prior to the completion of the proceeding, the Commission may issue a temporary order requiring the respondent to cease and desist from any such violation and to take action to prevent such disruption or harm pending completion of such proceeding. Subparagraph (C) provides the Commission to recover through a civil action a penalty on those who violate a cease and desist order. Such penalty shall not exceed $100,000 in the case of a natural person, or $500,000 in the case of any other person, for each violation.

THREE ST. CROIX YOUTHS PROVIDE OUTSTANDING SERVICE DURING HURRICANE

HON. RON de LUGO

OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. DE LUGO. Mr. Speaker, as St. Croix and the U.S. Virgin Islands rebuild from the devastation of Hurricane Hugo, we now have a moment to look around and express our appreciation for some of the local heroes who performed so well in our time of need.

Today, I want to commend three young men from St. Croix who were instrumental in preserving the safety and the lives of many people on that island during the dark hours of this howling hurricane when the winds gusted to 200 miles per hour. Carl Wells, Edgar Austrie, and Marlon Tonge were absolutely heroic in their efforts to help their neighbors in the community of Croixville.

When the storm hit in the dark of night, and the lights went out, and the radios went dead, and people were uncertain and afraid for their safety, these young men stepped into guide people from their battered homes through the darkness to the safety of shelters. Their action was spontaneous, caring, and courageous. Many people owe their health and safety to Carl, Edgar, Marlon, and others who performed with equal bravery.

In those desperate hours, they took it upon themselves to take care of their neighbors. I want to commend these three fine young men for their action. I also want the U.S. Congress to know that Carl Wells, Edgar Austrie, Marlon Tonge, and many other people of St. Croix reached out in concern and bravery to help one another during this terrible storm.

I am proud to say that these three young men represent the best spirit of the Virgin Islands and our determination to build a better future. Their performance is an inspiration to our community as it begins the long road of reconstruction.

ON THE LOSS OF LESTER F. BURLEIN

HON. JOSEPH M. McDADE

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, northeastern Pennsylvania has lost a good friend and a good neighbor. Lester F. Burlein of Honesdale, passed away Friday, November 10 following an illness.

He was the chariman of the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission for 15 years and also served as deputy secretary of highways of Pennsylvania.

He served as the Wayne County Republican chairman for 33 years and was a graduate of Penn State University where he earned his engineering degree.

He was a member of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church in Honesdale, Blue Lodge 218, Anthony Wayne Chapter 204, Savona Commandery 89, Irem Temple, Wilkes-Barre, and Wayne-Pike Shrine Club. He was a life member of Texas No. 4 Fire Department and president of Wallerville Hunting Club, Equinunk.

Our thoughts go out to his wife, the former Una Foster; his son, Dr. John P. Burlein of Honesdale; his two daughters, Mrs. Richard (Joyce) Osborne of Honesdale, and Mrs. Aldon (Joan) Michelotti of Mechanicsburg; and all the members of his family.

Lester was a good friend, a trusted adviser, and a great American. We will all miss him.

YMCA CELEBRATES 100TH ANNIVERSARY IN HAMILTON

HON. DONALD E. "BUZ" LUKENS

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. DONALD E. "BUZ" LUKENS. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to say that tomorrow marks the 100th anniversary of the YMCA in Hamilton, OH. I rise to commend this organization, which has provided a valuable, much-needed service, "ministering to body, mind, and spirit," for a century in my district. Since incorporating in November 15, 1989, the Hamilton YMCA has grown dramatically, and now, known as the Hamilton-Fairfield YMCA, consists of four branches with an annual budget of over $2 million.

Tomorrow night the Hamilton community will gather to commemorate this centennial, and although I will be unable to attend I would like to take this opportunity to publicly salute the YMCA, its staff and all those who have made the program successful for so long, and to offer my best regards and wishes for another successful 100 years and beyond.

Mr. Speaker, I submit for the RECORD a brief history of the YMCA in Hamilton, OH, written by Jim Blount.

YMCA: CENTURY OF SERVICE

Hamilton civic and religious leaders recognized the need for YMCA services in the expanding industry city in 1889.

In fact, the YMCA's original mission was directly related to the industrial growth, which was attracting hundreds of young, single men from farms and smaller towns to work in Hamilton factories.

Local leaders saw the YMCA as a place where those young men could find pleasant companionship, sympathetic advice and other services for their physical and moral well-being.

December 3, 1889, an old house at the northwest corner of the Third and Dayton Streets in Hamilton was purchased for $13,000. It was remodeled and expanded to serve as the city's first YMCA.

The first major expansion of YMCA facilities came 75 years ago when the present downtown building—at the northwest corner of N. Second and Market Streets—was completed and dedicated in September, 1914.

The Central YMCA building—the result of a successful $150,000 fund-raising effort in 1910—had a rough beginning. Construction had started on the four-story structure when Hamilton was devastated by the flooding Great Miami River in March, 1913. The flood washed away the foundation of the new YMCA building, requiring construction to be restarted.

Twelve years later, as part of the Association's continued effort to serve young men, Camp Campbell Gard was added. It was partially opened in June, 1926, and completed and dedicated in July, 1927.

In the late 1960's, as the YMCA's emphasis shifted to family service, more than $1.2 million was raised in the Hamilton-Fairfield community to build the Fairfield and Hamilton West, branches, which completed their first full year of operation in 1972.

The YMCA's varied facilities—during a distinguished century of service—have multiplied from that single, renovated house in 1889 to four multi-purpose locations today—Central YMCA, Fairfield, Hamilton West, and Camp Campbell Gard.

Now, 100 years later, instead of focusing on young men who had just moved to the community, the YMCA is offering a variety of programs and services for males and females of all ages, plus families.

Throughout the 100 years—which have included several wars, a major depression and other local and national crises—the YMCA has maintained its commitment to molding and strengthening the body, mind, and spirit.

H.R. 525

HON. MERVYN M. DYMALLY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 14, 1989

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank you and the rest of the Members of the House for voting unanimously to pass H.R. 525, a bill to provide for the naturalization of natives of the Philippines through active-duty service in the Armed Forces of the United States during World War II. I would also like to commend the distinguished gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MORRISON], chairman of the Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees, and International Law for the leadership he demonstrated in getting this bill to the House floor, and for his diligence in substantively amending this bill.

In 1941, President Roosevelt, faced with growing Japanese strength in the Pacific, called the Philippine Army into military service under General MacArthur. Soon after, the war with Japan erupted and America's position in the Pacific was seriously threatened. The Filipinos responded bravely when the United States needed them most.

For example, during the notorious Bataan Death March, Filipino guerrillas risked their lives by dropping food from trees to starving American POW's, an act punishable by death. Japanese soldiers would openly execute Filipinos alongside the road whenever they fell too far behind or collapsed from exhaustion.

At one point, 300 Filipinos were brutally beheaded during the march. In the end, of the 78,000 Filipinos who started the journey, 10,000 perished from hunger, disease, or execution. However, these terrible conditions did not deter the Filipinos from assisting United States soldiers in need and saving many American soldiers in the process. They fought with great determination against terrible odds, and died by the thousands.

During the course of the war, the Filipinos were an indispensible part of America's effort against Japan and contributed significantly to America's eventual victory. But sadly, the heroic acts of the Filipinos went unrewarded, and America's wartime promises were unjustly rescinded through a series of ignoble acts.

In 1942, Congress acted to reestablish the policy it had set forth during World War I, by providing for the naturalization of aliens honorably serving in the Armed Forces of the United States during World War II. However, many veterans were unable to meet the filing deadline because of the Attorney General's wrongful decision not to accept naturalization petitions by not assigning an examiner in the Philippines for a period of 9 months.

Since that time, Filipino veterans have sought retribution in the courts, winning three circuit court judgments. In each case, the court found that the Government lacked authority to have revoked the naturalization authority in the Philippines and as such could not deny naturalization by enforcing the filing deadline. The third district court in the case of Pangilinan versus INS, held that the courts' powers were sufficiently broad to offer a remedy for what it found to be the wrongful decision of the Attorney General—not to provide continuous naturalization authority in the Philippines during the filing period.

Paradoxically enough for these valiant veterans, the Supreme Court in INS versus Pangilinan, overturned the three ninth circuit court decisions on a technicality, rather than on the merits of their case. The Supreme Court essentially stated, that the courts do not possess the legal authority to override a statutory deadline imposed by Congress on naturalization benefits that it has conferred. Only Congress, which previously recognized the contribution made by these veterans during World War II, is capable of restoring naturalization rights to them.

Mr. Speaker, the bill that I have introduced, H.R. 525, would permit the naturalization of these veterans, and resolve their long battle for justice. This legislation would extend United States citizenship to all war veterans who were born in the Philippines and served honorably in an active duty status in the military, air, or naval forces of the United States between September 1, 1939, and December 31, 1946. It is my understanding that the Department of Justice, and the Veterans' Administration support this bill. In fact, H.R. 525 was redrafted carefully in accordance with the Department of Justice's recommendations to extend the filing deadline to 2 years and include veterans who are currently residing outside the United States. These provisions would effectively include all Filipinos who bravely fought against the Japanese under United States command. I am pleased to note that this bill, as amended by the distinguished chairman of Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees, and International Law, applies to all members of the recognized guerrilla units, who continued the fight against the Japanese invaders until the liberation of the Philippines, as well as the Filipino Scouts whose assistance was invaluable for our forces during the war.

District courts have ruled in favor of Filipino claims, but were overturned by the Supreme Court on the premise that only Congress had the authority to remedy the situation.

Mr. Speaker, the continuing plight of the Filipino veterans, now over four decades old, needs to be resolved. These veterans fought bravely against the Japanese during World War II, and were promised United States citizenship in return. However, this promise was never kept, effectively denying thousands of Filipinos their guaranteed right to naturalize.

Mr. Speaker, we are legally and morally obligated to return to the promise of the Congress of 1942. As a nation that promotes equality, fairness, and justice globally, we must keep our promise to the Filipinos.

Mr. Speaker, fulfilling our promise to these Filipino veterans is a simple matter of justice. For as Judge Renfrew of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California once stated, "Loyalty is a matter of the heart and mind, not of race, creed, or color." It is time we repay the loyalty of these Filipino war veterans by reestablishing their right to naturalization. In the words of one of the counsels in the Pangilinan case, "the least our country [can] do for them in return for their heroic service during the war would be to provide the opportunity for naturalization which Congress originally provided in March of 1942."

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Wednesday, November 15, 1989

The Reverend Thomas B. Curran, member of the Oblates of St. Francis de Sales, Philadelphia, PA, offered the following prayer:

Heavenly Father, we ask You to send Your spirit upon these lawmakers of the 101st Congress. Endow them with inspiration, courage, and selfless leadership. May their deliberations and decisions address the true needs of our Nation.

We recall the words of our first President, George Washington, who prayed for the protection of Almighty God upon these United States. We repeat his prayer that God might dispose our leaders to do justice, to love mercifully, and to act in imitation of the ruler of all humanity.

For we can be that "city upon a hill." The eyes of all people may be upon us but our eyes are fixed upon You. For You, Heavenly Father, are the source of our strength and guidance. We are confident that You will lead us into the next century and into Your presence forever.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BUECHNER] come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance?

Mr. BUECHNER led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 2120. An act to amend the Deep Seabed Hard Mineral Resources Act to authorize appropriations to carry out the provisions of the act for fiscal years 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, and 1994.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 978) entitled "An Act to authorize the establishment within the Smithsonian Institution of the National Museum of the American Indian, to establish a memorial to the American Indian, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 3402. An act to promote political and economic democracy in Poland and Hungary to those countries develop and implement programs of comprehensive economic reform.

WELCOME TO FATHER THOMAS CURRAN, TODAY'S GUEST CHAPLAIN

(Mr. BORKSI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BORKSI. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank Father Thomas Curran for giving today's opening prayer.

For each of the last 3 years, Mr. Speaker, Father Curran has invited me to address his civics class at Father Judge High School in northeast Philadelphia.

Today I am delighted to return the favor.

Father, welcome to my job.

As an Oblate of St. Francis de Sales, Father Curran taught for 7 years at Father Judge.

I can tell you from personal experience in his classroom that he was a dedicated teacher who inspired respect, interest, and enthusiasm in his students.

His commitment to the Catholic Church and to helping people stimulated his interest in the law, and earlier this year, he began law school at Catholic University here in Washington.

When he completes his legal education, Father Curran hopes to become an advocate for the poor, possibly as a public defender.

I am especially pleased that Father Curran could join us on such a historic day.

We will soon convene a joint session of Congress to receive Polish solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

It is the first time in 165 years that a joint session has been called for a private citizen.

Mr. Speaker, one of the greatest of my predecessors said that "in this House, sir, the people govern."

I am proud to be a Member of the body which today honors a man who has done as much for the cause of giving people the power to govern as any man in this century.

So, Father Curran, and our other distinguished guest "Vee-Tom" Pon Vah-Wen-Sa.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to make an announcement.

The Chair announces that during the joint meeting to receive the Honorable Lech Walesa, only the doors immediately opposite the Speaker and those on his left and right will be open.

[Applause, the Members rising.]

ADDRESS BY THE HONORABLE LECH WALESA, CHAIRMAN, SOLIDARNOSC

(The following is an English translation of the address delivered in Polish by Chairman Lech Walesa before the joint meeting, through an interpreter.)

Mr. WALESA. Mr. Speaker, Mr. President, members of the Cabinet, distinguished Members of the House and Senate, ladies and gentlemen,

"We the people * * *."

With these words I wish to begin my address. I do not need to remind anyone here where these words come from. And I do not need to explain that I, an electrician from Gdansk, am also entitled to invoke them.

"We the people * * *."

I stand before you as the third foreign non-head-of-state invited to address the joint Houses of Congress of the United States. The Congress, which for many people in the world, oppressed and stripped of their rights, is a beacon of freedom and a bulwark of human rights. And here I stand before you, to speak to America in the name of my nation. To speak to citizens of the country and the continent whose threshold is guarded by the famous Statue of Liberty. It is for me an honor so great, a moment so solemn, that I can find nothing to compare it with.

The people in Poland link the name of the United States with freedom and democracy, with generosity and high-mindedness, with human friendship and friendly humanity. I realize that not everywhere in the world is America so perceived. I speak of her image in Poland. This image was strengthened by numerous favorable historical experiences, and it is a very well-known thing that Poles repay warm-heartedness in kind.

The world remembers the wonderful principle of the American democracy: "government of the people, by the people, for the people."

I too remember these words; I, a shipyard worker from Gdansk, who has devoted his entire life—along with other members of the Solidarity movement—to the service of this idea: "government of the people, by the people, for the people." Against privilege and monopoly, against violations of the law, against the trampling of human dignity, against contempt and injustice.

Such in fact are the principles and values—reminiscent of Abraham Lincoln and the Founding Fathers of the American Republic, and also of the principles and ideas of the American Declaration of Independence and the American Constitution—that are pursued by the great movement of Polish Solidarity; a movement that is effective. I know that Americans are idealistic, but at the same time practical people endowed with common sense and capable of logical action. They combine these features with a belief in the ultimate victory of right over wrong. But they prefer effective work to making speeches. And I understand them very well. I, too, am not too fond of speeches. I prefer facts and work. I treasure effectiveness.

Ladies and gentlemen, here is the fundamental, most important fact I want to tell you about. I want to tell you that the social movement bearing the beautiful name of Solidarity, born of the Polish Nation, is an effective movement. After many long years of struggle it bore fruit which is there for all to see. It pointed to a direction and a way of action which are today affecting the lives of millions of people speaking different languages. It has swayed monopolies, overturning some altogether. It has opened up entirely new horizons.

And this struggle was conducted without resorting to violence of any kind—a point that cannot be stressed too much. We were being locked up in prison, deprived of our jobs, beaten and sometimes killed. And we did not so much as strike a single person. We did not destroy anything. We did not smash a single windowpane. But we were stubborn, very stubborn, ready to suffer, to make sacrifices. We knew what we wanted. And our power prevailed in the end.

The movement called Solidarity received massive support and scored victories because at all times and in all matters it opted for the better, more human, and more dignified solution, standing against brutality and hate. It was a consistent movement, stubborn, never giving up. And that is why after all these hard years, marked by so many tragic moments, Solidarity is today succeeding and showing the way to millions of people in Poland and other countries.

Ladies and Gentlemen, it was 10 years ago, in August 1980, that there began in the Gdansk shipyard the famous strike which led to the emergence of the first independent trade union in Communist countries, which soon became a vast social movement supported by the Polish Nation. I was 10 years younger then, unknown to anybody but my friends in the shipyard, and somewhat slimmer. And I must frankly say, it was important. An unemployed man at that time, fired from my job for earlier attempts to organize workers in the fight for their rights, I jumped over the shipyard wall and rejoined my colleagues who promptly appointed me the leader of the strike. This is how it all began. When I recall the road we have traveled I often think of that jump over the fence. Now others jump fences and tear down walls, they do it because freedom is a human right.

But there is also another reflection that comes to my mind when I think of the road behind us. In those days, at the beginning, many warnings, admonitions, and even condemnations were reaching us from many parts of the world. "What are those Poles up to?" we heard. "They are mad, they are jeopardizing world peace and European stability. They ought to stay quiet and not get on anybody's nerves."

We gathered from those voices that the other nations have the right to live in comfort and well-being, they have the right to democracy and freedom, and it is only the Poles who should give up these rights so as not to disturb the peace of others.

In the days before the Second World War there were many people who asked: Why should we die for Gdansk? Isn't it better to stay at home? But war soon paid them a visit, and they had to start dying for Paris, for London, for Hawaii. This time, too, there were many who complained: There is that Gdansk again disturbing our peace.

But the recent developments in Gdansk carried a different message. This was not the beginning but the true end of that war. This was the beginning of a new, better, democratic and safe era in the history of our world. There is no longer a question of dying for Gdansk, but of living for it.

Looking at what is happening around us today we may state positively that the Polish road of struggle for human rights, struggle without violence, the Polish stubbornness and firmness in the quest for pluralism and democracy show many people today, and even nations, how to avoid the greatest dangers. If there is something threatening European stability today, it certainly is not Poland. Poland's drive toward profound transformations, transformations achieved through peaceful means, through evolution, negotiated with all the parties concerned, makes it possible to avoid the worst pitfalls, and may be held up as a model for many other regions. And as we know, changes elsewhere are not so peaceful.

Peacefully and prudently, with their eyes open to dangers, but not giving up what is right and necessary, the Poles gradually paved the way for historic transformations. We are joined along this way, albeit to various extents, by others: Hungarians and Russians, the Ukrainians and people of the Baltic Republics, Armenians and Georgians, and, in recent days, the East Germans. We wish them luck and rejoice at each success they achieve. We are certain that others will also take our road, since there is no other choice.

So I ask now: Is there any sensible man understanding the world around him who could now say that it would be better if the Poles kept quiet because what they are doing is jeopardizing world peace? Couldn't we rather say that Poles are doing more to preserve and consolidate peace than many of their frightened advisers? Could we not say that stability and peace face greater threats from countries which have not yet brought themselves to carry out long-ranging and comprehensive reforms, which do their utmost to preserve the old and disgraced ways of government, contrary to the wishes of their societies?

Things are different in Poland. And I must say that our task is viewed with understanding by our eastern neighbors and their leader, Mikhail Gorbachev. This understanding lays foundations for new relations between Poland and the U.S.S.R. much better than before. These improved mutual relations will also contribute to stabilization and peace in Europe, removing useless tensions. Poles have had a long and difficult history, and no one wants peaceful coexistence and friendship with all nations and countries—and particularly with the Soviet Union—more than we do. We believe that it is only now that the right and favorable conditions for such coexistence and friendship are emerging.

Poland is making an important contribution to a better future for Europe, to a European reconciliation—also to the vastly important Polish-German reconciliation—to overcoming of old divisions and to strengthening of human rights on our continent. But it does not come easily for Poland.

In the Second World War Poland was the first country to fall victim to aggression. Her losses in terms of human life and national property were the heaviest. Her fight was the longest; she was always a dedicated member of the victorious alliance; and her soldiers fought in all the war's theaters. In 1945 Poland, theoretically speaking, was one of the victors. Theory, however, had little in common with practice. In practice, as her allies looked on in tacit consent, there was imposed on Poland an alien system of government, without precedent in Polish tradition, unaccepted by the nation, together with an alien economy, an alien law, and alien philosophy of social relations. The legal Polish Government, recognized by the nation and leading the struggle of all Poles throughout the war was condemned, and those who remained faithful to it were subjected to the most ruthless persecution. Many were murdered, thousands vanished somewhere in Russia's east and north. Similar repression befell soldiers of the underground army fighting the Nazis. It is only now that we are discovering their bones in unmarked graves scattered among forests.

These atrocities were followed by persecutions of all those who dared think independently. All the solemn pledges about free elections in Poland that were made in Yalta were broken.

This was the second great national catastrophe, following the one of 1939. When other nations were joyously celebrating victory, Poland was again sinking into mourning. The awareness of this tragedy was doubly bitter, as the Poles realized that they had been abandoned by their allies. The memory of this is still strong in the minds of many.

Nonetheless, the Poles took to rebuilding their devastated country and in the first years following the war they were highly successful. But soon a new economic system was introduced, in which individual entrepreneurship ceased to exist and the entire economy ended up in the hands of a state run by people who were not elected by the nation. Stalin forbade Poland to use aid provided by the Marshall plan, the aid that was used by everyone in Western Europe, including countries which lost the war. It is worth recalling this great American plan which helped Western Europe to protect its freedom and peaceful order. And now it is the moment when Eastern Europe awaits an investment of this kind—an investment in freedom, democracy, and peace—an investment adequate to the greatness of the American Nation.

The Poles have traveled a long way. It would be worthwhile for all those commenting on Poland, often criticizing Poland, to bear in mind that whatever Poland has achieved she achieved through her own effort, through her own stubbornness, her own relentlessness. Everything was achieved thanks to the unflinching faith of our nation in human dignity and in what is described as the values of Western culture and civilization.

Our Nation knows well the price of all this.

Ladies and gentlemen, for the past 50 years the Polish nation has been engaged in a difficult and exhausting battle. First to preserve its very biological existence, later to save its national identity. In both instances Polish determination won the day. Today Poland is rejoining the family of democratic and pluralistic countries, returning to the tradition of religious and European values.

For the first time in half a century Poland has a non-Communist and independent government, supported by the nation.

But on our path there looms a serious obstacle, a grave danger. Our long subjection to a political system incompatible with national traditions, to a system of economy incompatible with rationality and common sense, coupled with the stifling of independent thought and disregard for national interests—all this has led the Polish economy to ruin, to the verge of utter catastrophe. The first government in 50 years elected by the people and serving the people has inherited from the previous rulers of the country a burden of an economy organized in a manner preventing it from satisfying even the basic needs of the people.

The economy we inherited after almost five decades of Communist rule is in need of thorough overhaul. This will require patience and great sacrifice. This will require time and means. The present condition of the Polish economy is not due to chance, and is not a specifically Polish predicament. All the countries of the Eastern bloc are bankrupt. The Communist economy has failed in every part of the world. One result of this is the exodus of the citizens of those countries, by land and by sea, by boat and by plane, swimming and walking across borders. This is a mass-scale phenomenon, well known in Europe, Asia, and Central America.

But Poland entered its new road and will never be turned back. The sense of our work and struggle in Poland lies in our creating situations and prospects that would hold Poles back from seeking a place for themselves abroad, that would encourage them to seek meaning in their work and a hope for a better future in their own country, their own home.

One hears sometimes that people in Poland do not care to work well. But even those who say this, know that Poles work well and effectively if only they see the sense and usefulness of their toil. The working people know their arithmetic too. They are working much harder and in worse conditions than their opposite numbers abroad, and on top of that are paid much lower wages. The economic system around them is absurd. To make matters worse, every several or dozen years the country has suffered a new crisis, a new crunch, and time and time again it turned out that past efforts went to waste. Show me people who would have worked well, stuck for decades under such a system. Wouldn't they too have succumbed to pessimism? But I wish no one experiences such as these.

This system had to be changed. And the Poles took it upon themselves to change it.

I know that America has her own problems and difficulties, some of them very serious. We are not asking for charity. We are not expecting philanthropy. But we would like to see our country treated as a partner and a friend. We would like cooperation under decent and favorable conditions. We would like Americans to come to us with proposals of cooperation bringing benefits to both sides.

We believe that assistance extended to democracy and freedom in Poland and all of Eastern Europe is the best investment in the future and in peace, better than tanks, warships, and war planes, an investment leading to greater security.

Poland has already done much to patch up the divisions existing in Europe, to create better and more optimistic prospects. Poland's efforts are viewed with sympathetic interest by the West—and for this thanks are in order. We believe that the West's contribution to this process will grow now. We have heard many beautiful words of encouragement. These are appreciated, but, being a worker and a man of concrete work, I must tell you that the supply of words on the world market is plentiful, but the demand is falling. Let deeds follow words now.

The decision by the Congress of the United States about granting economic aid to my country opens a new road. For this wonderful decision, I thank you warmly. I promise you that this aid will not be wasted, and will never be forgotten.

Ladies and gentlemen, from this podium, I'm expressing words of gratitude to the American people. It is they who supported us in the difficult days of martial law and persecution. It is they who sent us aid, they protested against violence. Today, when I am able to freely address the whole world from this elevated spot, I would like to thank them with special warmth.

It is thanks to them that the word "Solidarity" soared across borders and reached every corner of the world. Thanks to them the people of Solidarity were never alone. In this chain of people linked in solidarity there were many, very many Americans. I wish to mention here with warm gratitude our friends from the U.S. Congress, the AFL-CIO trade unions, from the institutions and foundations supporting freedom and democracy, and all those who lent us support in our most difficult moments. They live in all States, in small and large communities of your vast country. I thank all those who through the airwaves or printed word spread the truth. I also wish to say thank you and to greet all Polish Americans who maintain warm contacts with their old fatherland. Their support was always priceless for us. And the support of American Polish was always tremendously worth it to us.

Wholeheartedly thank the President of the United States and his administration for involvement im my country's affairs. I will never forget the then Vice President George Bush speaking in Warsaw over the tomb of the Reverend Jerzy Popieluszko, the martyr for Poland. And I will not forget President George Bush speaking in Gdansk in front of the monument of the Fallen Shipyard Workers. It's from there that the President of the United States was sending a message of freedom to Poland, to Europe, to the world.

Pope John Paul ll once said: "Freedom is not just something to have and to use, it is something to be fought for. One must use freedom to build with it personal life as well as the life of the nation."

I thank this weighty thought can equally well be applied to Poland and to America.

I wish all of you to know and to keep in mind that the ideals which underlie this glorious American Republic and which are still alive here, are also living in faraway Poland. And although for many long years efforts were made to cut Poland off from these ideals, Poland held her ground and is now reaching for the freedom to which she is justly entitled. Together with Poland, other nations of Eastern Europe are following this path. The wall that was separating people from freedom has collapsed. And I hope that the nations of the world will never let it be rebuilt.

[Applause, the Members rising.]

At 12 o'clock and 10 minutes p.m., the Honorable Lech Walesa, Chairman, Solidarnosc, accompanied by the committee of escort, retired from the Hall of the House of Representatives.

The Doorkeeper escorted the invited guests from the Chamber in the following order:

The Members of the President's Cabinet.

The Ambassadors, Ministers, and chargés d'affaires of foreign governments.

JOINT MEETING DISSOLVED

The SPEAKER. The Chair declares the joint meeting of the two Houses dissolved.

Accordingly, at 12 o'clock and 10 minutes p.m., the joint meeting of the two Houses was dissolved.

The Members of the Senate retired to their Chamber.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The House will continue in recess until 12:45 p.m.

□ 1250

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mrs. SCHROEDER] at 12 o'clock and 50 minutes p.m.

PRINTING OF PROCEEDINGS HAD DURING RECESS

Mr. BRENNAN. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the proceedings had during the recess be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maine?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION FOR SUBCOMMITTEE ON CIVIL AND CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS OF COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY AND SUBCOMMITTEE ON CIVIL SERVICE OF THE COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICE AND CIVIL SERVICE TO SIT ON TOMORROW DURING 5-MINUTE RULE

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Madam Speaker, I ask that the Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights of the Committee on the Judiciary and the Subcommittee on Civil Service of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service may be permitted to sit while the House is reading for amendments under the 5-minute rule on Thursday, November 16.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

LECH WALESA: AN INSPIRATION FOR FREEDOM

(Mr. BRENNAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BRENNAN. Madam Speaker, the moving words we have just heard from Lech Walesa were truly inspirational and show that the call for freedom cannot be stifled.

Lech Walesa's struggles in forming the trade union Solidarity were rewarded by the true political reforms taking place today in Poland. His courage and determination led a nation in breaking the bonds of repression they had known for 40 years, but never accepted.

A key part of Lech Walesa's strategy for political reform in Poland, was the strength and unifying force of organized labor—Something we have seen in our country, but many seem to forget. Organized labor serves as a force for change and improvement in many important aspects of our daily lives—through improved working conditions and improved compensation.

The United States has a special responsibility to Lech Walesa and his fellow Poles. We must not remain on the sideline offering little more than words of encouragement. The time is now for economic assistance to keep democracy and freedom alive in Poland. We cannot let Poland fail.

THE NAVY NEEDS TO ANSWER QUESTION ON ACCIDENTS

(Mr. SCHULZE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SCHULZE. Madam Speaker, for some time now, I have been trying to focus attention on the problems of the U.S. Navy, which had three more accidents yesterday—a sad day in the history of our Armed Forces.

Some questions must be answered. Chief of Naval Operations Trost. The Navy has an accident a day and sailors are dying. Why is this happening? Our other services are not having this problem.

Navy Secretary Garrett. Mothers are coming up to me on the street asking me if their sons are safe on naval ships. Why is this happening? A GAO study I requested documented the extreme number of naval fatalities. Have you read it? Have you finally noticed?

Defense Secretary Cheney. How many more of our sons and daughters will die before the Navy solves this crisis? What are you doing, Mr. Secretary, to address this matter of life and death?

CUT LARGESSE AT PENTAGON

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Madam Speaker, the Soviets are cutting defense spending, and America should do likewise. The truth of the matter is we are going broke around here. What really hurts is the Air Force has a B-1 bomber. It was shot down by a pelican; the Navy has a rocket that acts like Shamu, it does cartwheels; the Army has a tank that couldn't hit the ocean if it was fired from dockside. To boot, none of these great lethal weapons have any spare parts.

Congress should cut the largesse at the Pentagon, straighten out our budget and economic ills, which is the first place to start, and take a look at NATO spending.

AIDS: A PUBLIC HEALTH PROBLEM, NOT A CIVIL RIGHTS PROBLEM

(Mr. DANNEMEYER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Madam Speaker, a very significant event took place in the efforts of the Nation to deal with the AIDS epidemic yesterday in New York City when the New York City Board of Health, on the recommendation of Dr. Joseph, the health officer of New York City, recommended to the State health officer, Dr. Axelrod of New York State that we treat HIV carriers, report them in confidence to public health, and conduct contact tracing.

This is significant because New York State has the largest number of AIDS cases in America. It is significant because the voice of organized medicine in New York State, the New York State Medical Society, sued Dr. Axelrod to prepare a list of HIV carriers as a reportable disease. It is significant because the voice of organized medicine in the State with the largest number of AIDS cases is finally waking up to the fact we have to treat this epidemic as a public health problem, not a civil rights problem.

A NEW AGE BEGINS

(Mr. NAGLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NAGLE. Madam Speaker, the historian Page Smith titled his "people's history" of the American Revolution, "A New Age Now Begins."

That title seems to describe, as well, the dramatic impact of the rapid changes taking place in Eastern Europe. We do, indeed, appear to be witnessing what one television correspondent described as the "almost hourly disintegration of the Soviet empire."

But while we may well be witnessing a new age now beginning, it is important to remember that what we are seeing is just that—only a beginning, in fact, only the beginning of a beginning.

The transformation of Eastern Europe is far from complete; the outcome far from certain.

While the President's cautious response to these developments is, generally, appropriate, there is one area where he must be bolder.

Mr. Gorbachev's policies of perestroika and glasnost—the historic changes in Soviet policy which allow these developments to unfold—place him at grave political risk at home. If he does not survive, all that we have witnessed may go crashing down with him.

We can help ourselves and the cause of freedom by acting now to increase our trade with the Soviet Union, to help the Soviet Union meet the basic domestic needs of its own people.

For in the final analysis, Mr. Gorbachev will be judged by the hardliners at home by whether or not his reforms help put bread on Soviet shelves and consumer goods in the hands of the Soviet people.

The time has come for the President to lift the Jackson-Vanick trade sanctions, extend most-favored-nation trading status and begin aggressively marketing American products to the Soviet Union.

Countries which trade together have a harder time pursuing hostilities, and Mr. Gorbachev's survival seems to rest, in part, on his obtaining that goal.

CONDEMN TERRORIST ACTIVITIES IN EL SALVADOR

(Mr. DOUGLAS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DOUGLAS. Madam Speaker, earlier today right here in this Chamber we heard from a man who believes very strongly in democracy, Lech Walesa. Unfortunately, today in El Salvador a democratically elected government is under attack by Communist-backed guerrillas. Over 500 people have been killed in the fighting.

What is unique about this is the attack has been on civilian neighborhoods, not military targets. That is what makes the difference between a guerrilla who fights the military and a terrorist who goes after civilian homes of elected officials and tries to kill the spouses and children of men and women who are elected and chosen in a democratic process.

I would like to say to the other side of the aisle that Jim Wright, when he was Speaker, stood right where the Speaker is, and said he concluded it was a fair election in El Salvador. I was down there in March during the election with Tony Coelho. We flew out and watched that election. That election is now under attack.

I certainly hope that our Committee on Foreign Affairs will have a resolution of condemnation of this Communist attempt to destroy a democratically elected government.

NEW ALLIANCE WITH AN OLD ADVERSARY

(Mr. TORRICELLI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TORRICELLI. Madam Speaker, Mikhail Gorbachev reminds us that one man can challenge the world for change, but is still requires two people, two voices, to bring that change.

In a few days George Bush will have an opportunity to play an historic role. He can be that second person. He can end his observation of a new and evolving world, and he can join the architects of a new order.

George Bush seeks to control expectations for his upcoming summit. I believe that our expectations should soar. We have no less of an opportunity than to end the cold war and to begin a new alliance with an old adversary, to join in a fight against our traditional enemies of hunger, of homelessness, of disease.

Those are the opportunities for this summit, and those should be the expectations of all Americans.

HOPE: FIGHTING THE TRAGEDY OF HOMELESSNESS

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Madam Speaker, we here in Washington have long grown accustomed to the hundreds of thousands of men, women, and children who travel—literally, from all over the world—to witness the majestic sights and symbols of this Nations's Capital.

Sadly, some sights in this city aren't so pretty. What tourists and residents regularly see each day, in our parks and in our streets, from the White House to Capitol Hill, is the tragic face of homelessness.

The President has seen this tragedy. So has the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. In response, as part of a bold new legislative initiative called Hope, this administration is taking a fresh look at meeting the needs of our Nation's homeless.

Two-thirds of the homeless living on the streets of our country suffer from drug dependency or mental illness. Theirs is a larger life tragedy in which homelessness is merely one symptom of a much greater problem.

Project Hope—by recognizing both the root causes of homelessness and the comprehensive strategy required to get at those roots—can help extend the social safety net for the hard core homeless.

Under Hope, Federal housing funds will be coupled with State and local service resources, including the community health block grant, to provide not only shelter, but the professional treatment that nearly 70 percent of all homeless Americans require to lead normal, dignified lives.

A NO VOTE URGED ON BILL TO EXTEND CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION

(Mr. SENSENBRENNER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Madam Speaker, within a matter of minutes the House of Representatives will be voting on legislation to extend the Civil Rights Commission. I strongly urge the House to defeat the motion to suspend the rules and pass this bill.

One of the features of the motion to suspend the rules takes the power to appoint the staff director away from the President of the United States and instead vests it in the Commission itself. The Office of Management and Budget has a letter in the works that says that if the bill lands on the President's desk in this form, it will be vetoed.

The Civil Rights Commission under new management can perform a very useful function in bringing civil rights issues to the attention of the American public, but to change the structure of the Commission at this late date is not good public policy, and I urge the membership to defeat the motion to suspend the rules.

EXPRESSING SUPPORT OF LEGISLATION TO EXTEND U.S. COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

(Mr. EDWARDS of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Madam Speaker, in a few minutes we will be voting on the life of the Civil Rights Commission, that wonderful organization that has existed for the benefit of minorities and other people for many years.

A "no" vote on this bill will mean the end of the life of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. I urge my colleagues to vote "aye" on the bill to extend the life of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights for 6 months.

BIPARTISAN SUPPORT NOTED FOR AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT

(Mr. HOYER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, yesterday the Education and Labor Committee, by a vote of 35 to 0 passed out the Americans With Disabilities Act. I want to observe that that event occurred because of the bipartisan work of a number of us, the support of the President of the United States, and the overwhelming vote given to the document by the U.S. Senate.

The Americans With Disabilities Act will fairly and reasonably extend civil rights protection to 43 million disabled Americans and ensure that the words, "and justice for all," will ring true for all Americans.

Madam Speaker, yesterday's markup and the support of the gentleman from Texas and the minority whip of the House reemphasize the bipartisan support for this landmark legislation. I expect and hope that the three remaining committees of jurisdiction will soon complete their work. I look forward to House passage and enactment of the bill sponsored by our former majority whip, Tony Coelho, the Americans With Disabilities Act, early next year.

BERLIN WALL CRUMBLES, IS SYMBOLIC OF RISE OF CAPITALISM

(Mr. McMILLEN of Maryland asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McMILLEN of Maryland. Madam Speaker, like so many of you I was moved by the dramatic events of last week. The almost unbelievable sight of Germans from both East and West Germany celebrating together on top of the Berlin Wall.

The opening of East Germany's borders signals once again the ongoing worldwide movement toward capitalism. The victory of Adam Smith over Karl Marx. Everywhere one looks, in Eastern Europe, Latin America, and yes even in China, capitalism grows in influence. More and more the economics of socialism are thrown by the wayside, in recognition of the economic promise of capitalism. The debate no longer is communism versus capitalism, but the degree and speed to which socialist economies are converted to free market economies.

These are historical times. The actions taken by the East German Government are irreversable. The crack in the wall cannot be patched. The transformation of their political system cannot be stopped.

We in the United States must recognize the magnitude of these changes in Eastern Europe. The President needs to act swiftly in offering economic assistance to the increasing number of nations in the East bloc moving toward democracy. It is time for us to offer our hand to those behind the Iron Curtain, to help pull them over the wall.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 1989

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mrs. SCHROEDER). The unfinished business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 3532.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS], that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3532, on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. GEKAS. Madam Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. GEKAS. Madam Speaker, when the present bill was passed out of the Judiciary Committee, it was in one form, and that was the form in which the original motion to have the vote on suspension was created. My point of parliamentary inquiry is this: How does the House now know that the bill that is about to be voted on is substantially different from that which was passed by the Judiciary Committee? How do we explain to the House that that is so?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman can look at yesterday's RECORD. It carries a copy of the bill in the form in which the motion was made, and all Members have had 1 day to reflect upon that.

Mr. GEKAS. Madam Speaker, I have a further parliamentary inquiry.

What I really want to know is, why is it that the Clerk cannot read the bill as it now is constituted prior to this vote?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the Clerk will read the bill.

Mr. GEKAS. I would like to hear that, Madam Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman making a request that the Clerk read the bill?

Mr. GEKAS. Yes, Madam Speaker, I am.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the Clerk will read the bill.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 3532

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "The Civil Rights Commission Reauthorization Act of 1989".

SEC. 2. REAUTHORIZATION.

The United States Commission on Civil Rights Act of 1983 is amended—

(1) in section 7, by striking "1989" and inserting "1990"; and

(2) in section 8, by striking "six years after its date of enactment" and inserting "on May 31, 1990".

SEC. 3. STAFF DIRECTOR.

Section 6(a)(1) of the United States commission on Civil Rights Act of 1983 is amended by striking "the President with the concurrence of a majority of".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3532, on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 278, nays 135, not voting 20, as follows:

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Kleczka for, and Mrs. Morella with Mr. McEwen against.

Mr. BUECHNER, Mr. PASHAYAN, and Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. KASICH and Mr. HENRY changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. NATCHER. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 3566 and to include extraneous matter along with tables and charts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. SCHROEDER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. MOODY. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall vote No. 354, H.R. 3552, the Civil Rights Commission Reauthorization Act of 1989, it was my intention to vote "yes," and I believe I voted "yes." Unfortunately, my vote was recorded as "no." I would like the RECORD to reflect that it was my intention to vote "yes" on reauthorizing the Civil Rights Commission.

DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1990

Mr. NATCHER. Madam Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3566) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990 and for other purposes, and pending that motion, Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the general debate be limited to not to exceed 1 hour, the time to be equally divided and controlled by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE] and myself.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER].

The motion was agreed to.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 3566, with Mr. SHARP in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the bill was considered as having been read the first time.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER].

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, as you know, this is the second bill which I have presented to the House this year making appropriations for fiscal year 1990 for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education and related agencies. This is necessary because of the veto of H.R. 2990 which the House did not override.

In this bill we have $156,700,000,000, the exact amount, Mr. Chairman, that was in the vetoed bill.

For the Department of Labor we have $6,728,000,000; for the Department of Health and Human Services we have the sum of $124,803,000,000; for the Department of Education we have the sum of $24,151,000,000.

This bill is the best bill that has ever been presented to the Congress for the Department of Labor, for the Department of Health and Human Services, and for the Department of Education.

Mr. Chairman, we believe on this subcommittee and full committee that if you educate your children and take care of the health of your people, you continue living in the strongest country in the world.

As Members will recall, when we presented the bill H.R. 2990 to the House, we said to the Members at that time that this is the best Labor-HHS appropriations bill that has ever been presented to the Congress. That bill was passed in the House, sent to the Senate, the Senate passed the bill, and then we went to conference. Unfortunately the bill which went to the President was vetoed on October 21.

Mr. Chairman, we now present a new bill to the House. Following the veto of H.R. 2990 I introduced a new bill, H.R. 3566. We reported it out yesterday to the House. There are no changes in any of the numbers in the bill for the amounts agreed to in H.R. 2990. The only matter in the bill that is different is the matter pertaining to abortion funding.

Mr. Chairman, we carry in this bill current law. No funds shall be appropriated for abortion, unless the life of the mother is endangered if the fetus is carried to term.

As we have seen again this year, the issue of Federal funding for abortion provokes deeply held beliefs on both sides. I must remind the Members, however, that the House did not have the votes to override the President's veto, and I therefore urge my colleagues to support this new bill. It represents the best we can do for the many important programs that are funded within it. These programs have been held hostage by the abortion issue too long. And the longer this impasse continues, the more these critical activities will be hurt.

Since we do not have an enacted bill, the programs of the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education are currently funded at the rate specified in the continuing resolution. This rate is the lower of the House or Senate as provided for in H.R. 2990. Compared to the levels in the vetoed bill, the continuing resolution provides at least $1.87 billion less in 1990 budget authority. Just to cite a few examples of programs that are being penalized by the continuing resolution:

[In millions of dollars]

Chapter 1 Grants	−327
Low Income Home Energy Assistance	−114
Pell Grant Shortfall	−131
Homeless Assistance	−52
Vocational Rehabilitation State Grants	−48
Math and Science Grants	−37
Mental Health Research	−30
Community Services Block Grant	−27
Dislocated Workers	−20

In addition, at least 15 new program starts are being delayed, including $20 million for home-based AIDS care and $15 million for comprehensive head injury grants.

It is not right for these programs and many others like them that do so much to improve the health of our country and the education of our children to be further jeopardized while we debate the abortion matter. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3566.

Mr. Chairman, we recommend this bill to the House at this time.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this bill, H.R. 3566, the second Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriations bill for fiscal year 1990, for a very good reason. Every appropriation that was in here when the first conference report passed the House 364-56 on October 11 is in here now. You name it, this bill does it. And in some programs, by carefully setting priorities, and holding many programs at the current level, it does it better than ever before: Retraining for displaced workers, up $186 million; AIDS research and services, up $318 million; National Institutes of Health, up $586 million; Head Start, up $170 million; education for the disadvantaged, up $855 million; and student aid, up $360 million.

These are the reasons why we need to pass this bill and get it signed.

The veto, and the fact that the veto was sustained, make it clear that the Congress and the President can get into a lengthy battle over this bill. We can go back and forth for weeks and months, as we have in the past, when we have searched for consensus on the abortion funding issue.

But there are very good reasons why we ought to pass this bill as a first step in trying to get a bill signed into law, and those reasons are the ones I just gave—the millions of people who receive help from this bill—the young, the old, the handicapped, the poor, the disadvantaged, the sick, the unemployed. These people get hurt if we don't enact a bill into law.

What could be worse than to see months of work, of hard choices, of deliberation, cooperation, and accommodation, go out the window. What could be worse than forcing this bill into a continuing resolution at last year's rate. Then, nobody, nobody, would get any benefits out of what we have tried to accomplish this year.

I must temper my words, however, because much of our effort is at risk from another front, the grim reaper of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings sequestration. We have worked for months to comply with the balanced budget agreement reached last April. We have met our targets. We have made difficult choices. Many, many programs are kept at last year's level. Most other programs probably do not keep up with current services. I nearly busted my gut trying to get a lousy $10 million increase for low-income energy assistance.

Yet, because other committees in this Congress, Ways and Means, Merchant Marine, and others, have not met their targets under the budget agreement, the programs in this bill get hit with a 5.3-percent across-the-board, meat-ax cut. The Social Security Administration has described the impact as devastating and staggering. So if people want to make a responsible contribution to the process, one thing to do is to urge passage of a reconciliation bill that makes $14 billion in savings and repeals sequester.

With respect to the abortion funding provision, this bill retains the Hyde language prohibiting funding for abortion with the Conte exception where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term. There is always the possibility that something further can be worked out. I hope it can.

□ 1340

The only way that this will happen, however, is if we go to conference with a little elbow room to work it out. And I pledge that I will do all I can to do something here to get a bill so that we can have it signed and get on with our work.

I sincerely believe the passage of this bill is the best way to move forward.

I ask for the support of everyone in this Chamber interested in assuring that this bill is passed, which assists so many people in this country. Let us get it signed into law.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH].

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Chairman, when we debated this issue last, I spoke about the fragility of life and the senselessness of compounding that fragility by robbing a soul of a chance in life. I spoke of my twin granddaughters and their struggle for survival, after having been born prematurely.

Many in this body would like to continue the debate over the rape and incest exceptions, riding the wave of the recent election cycle. Many may be justifiably heartened by the action of the Pennsylvania Legislature. However, shouldn't this body concern itself less with the cycle of elections and political opinion and conern itself more with the cycle of life?

There are some of my very special women colleagues in this body who have addressed their concerns over this issue with President Bush. I have deep respect for their willingness to stand up for their beliefs and to discuss openly and candidly their concerns with the President. However, there are other women in this body on both sides of the aisle who support the President on this issue, and I am one of them. We are also willing to stand up for our beliefs in the sanctity of human life.

I urge my colleagues to support the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill in its current form. I urge you to support the President.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair reminds our guests that they are here as guests of the House and that any manifestation of approval or disapproval of the proceedings is in violation of the rules of the House.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. PERKINS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, in regard to funds for demonstration programs under subpart 1 of part B of title IV of the Perkins Act, would not joint labor-management training funds organized under section 302(c) of the National Labor Relations Act be eligible for such funds?

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PERKINS. I yield to the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER].

Mr. NATCHER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, in answer to the gentleman's question, I am not aware of any reason why these programs would not be eligible.

Mr. PERKINS. I thank the chairman.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, the President vetoed the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriations bill because it contained a provision that permitted the use of Federal funds for abortions in cases of rape or incest.

My colleagues are probably well aware of my views of this subject. I believe that the President's veto was unreasonable. The President's veto was unfair. The President's veto was wrong.

Worst of all, the President's veto, reflected a surprising indifference—a willingness to turn away from poor women who are victims of brutal and heinous crimes.

I hope that as this legislation emerges from conference, we will have crafted language that encourages the President to join a majoirty of the American people and majority of their elected representatives in considering the emotional and physical condition of poor women who have been the victims of rape or incest.

However, we should not permit the consideration of the people's bill by this body for the third time this year to pass without reminding the President of the important national priorities funded in this legislation.

President Bush strives to be the education President. Consider the impact of his veto and his preference for permitting the sequestration order to stand.

A $250 million cut in chapter 1 will deprive 400,000 disadvantaged children of extra help in reading and math.

Under the Gramm-Rudman ax, Head Start looses $70 million and 26,000 kids lose access to one of the most successful early childhood programs funded by the Federal Government.

More than 100 historically black colleges and universities would suffer if the estimated $10 million is cut from the Title III Developing Institutions Programs.

The sequester would eliminate 40,000 students from the trio programs designed to prepare low-income students for post-secondary education, students who are the first generation in their families to attend college.

The sequester would also deny 35,000 students part-time employment under the College Work Study Program, and 1 million needy students would not receive Pell grants.

Mr. Chairman, the President's veto focuses on a very narrow issue in an attempt to deny Medicaid funded abortions for poor women who are the victims of horrible crimes.

But I believe that we fail the children of this Nation, that we endanger their future and perhaps their very lives, when the President places the programs in this bill in jeopardy through his intransigence on this important issue.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the President will think on these things as we seek to conclude work on the Labor, Health and Human Services appropriations bill for fiscal year 1990.

Mr. MILLER of Washington. Mr. Chairman, today I rise in support of this bill's increased funding for the Head Start Program. The bill includes $165 million more than last year. This money will allow 45,000 more children to be served by the program. Head Start provides child care and education to low-income preschoolers, currently only serves 16 percent of those who are eligible. Head Start is designed to help the disadvantaged child get a better start in life, and it can make a profound difference in the life of that child. I am proud this Congress and administration have so clearly demonstrated their support of this worthwhile program. We must continue to invest in our children and in our future.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3566

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes, namely:

For the payment of compensation, benefits, and expenses (except administrative expenses) accruing during the current or any prior fiscal year authorized by title V, chapter 81 of the United States Code; continuation of benefits as provided for under the head "Civilian War Benefits" in the Federal Security Agency Appropriation Act, 1947; the Employees' Compensation Commission Appropriation Act, 1944; and sections 4(c) and 5(f) of the War Claims Act of 1948 (50 U.S.C. App. 2012); and 50 per centum of the additional compensation and benefits required by section 10(h) of the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, as amended, $255,000,000, together with such amounts as may be necessary to be charged to the subsequent year appropriation for the payment of compensation and other benefits for any period subsequent to September 15 of the current year: Provided, That in addition there shall be transferred from the Postal Service fund to this appropriation such sums as the Secretary of Labor determines to be the cost of administration for Postal Service employees through September 30, 1990.

BLACK LUNG DISABILITY TRUST FUND

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For payments from the Black Lung Disability Trust Fund, $640,985,000, of which $590,486,000 shall be available until September 30, 1991, for payment of all benefits as authorized by section 9501(d) (1), (2), and (7), of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended, and of which $28,640,000 shall be available for transfer to Employment Standards Administration, Salaries and Expenses, and $21,350,000 for transfer to Departmental Management, Salaries and Expenses, and $509,000 for transfer to Departmental Management, Office of Inspector General, for expenses of operation and administration of the Black Lung Benefits program as authorized by section 9501(d)(5)(A) of that Act: Provided, That in addition, such amounts as may be necessary may be charged to the subsequent year appropriation for the payment of compensation or other benefits for any period subsequent to June 15 of the current year: Provided further, That in addition, such amounts shall be paid from this fund into miscellaneous receipts as the Secretary of the Treasury determines to be the administrative expenses of the Department of the Treasury for administering the fund during the current fiscal year, as authorized by section 9501(d)(5)(B) of that Act.

OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, $270,748,000 including not to exceed $60,633,000, which shall be the maximum amount available for grants to States under section 23(g) of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, which grants shall be no less than fifty percent of the costs of State occupational safety and health programs required to be incurred under plans approved by the Secretary under section 18 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended to prescribe, issue, administer, or enforce any standard, rule, regulation, or order under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 which is applicable to any person who is engaged in a farming operation which does not maintain a temporary labor camp and employs ten or fewer employees: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended to prescribe, issue, administer, or enforce any standard, rule, regulation, order or administrative action under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 affecting any work activity by reason of recreational hunting, shooting, or fishing: Provided further, That no funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended to administer or enforce any standard, rule, regulation, or order under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 with respect to any employer of ten or fewer employees who is included within a category having an occupational injury lost work day case rate, at the most precise Standard Industrial Classification Code for which such data are published, less than the national average rate as such rates are most recently published by the Secretary, acting through the Bureau of Labor Statistics, in accordance with section 24 of that Act (29 U.S.C. 673), except—

(1) to provide, as authorized by such Act, consultation, technical assistance, educational and training services, and to conduct surveys and studies;

(2) to conduct an inspection or investigation in response to an employee complaint, to issue a citation for violations found during such inspection, and to assess a penalty for violations which are not corrected within a reasonable abatement period and for any willful violations found;

(3) to take any action authorized by such Act with respect to imminent dangers;

(4) to take any action authorized by such Act with respect to health hazards;

(5) to take any action authorized by such Act with respect to a report of an employment accident which is fatal to one or more employees or which results in hospitalization of five or more employees, and to take any action pursuant to such investigation authorized by such Act; and

(6) to take any action authorized by such Act with respect to complaints of discrimination against employees for exercising rights under such Act:

Provided further, That the foregoing proviso shall not apply to any person who is engaged in a farming operation which does not maintain a temporary labor camp and employs ten or fewer employees.

MINE SAFETY AND HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for the Mine Safety and Health Administration, $170,593,000, including purchase and bestowal of certificates and trophies in connection with mine rescue and first-aid work, and the purchase of not to exceed twenty passenger motor vehicles for replacement only; the Secretary is authorized to accept lands, buildings, equipment, and other contributions from public and private sources and to prosecute projects in cooperation with other agencies, Federal, State, or private; the Mine Safety and Health Administration is authorized to promote health and safety education and training in the mining community through cooperative programs with States, industry, and safety associations; and any funds available to the Department may be used, with the approval of the Secretary, to provide for the costs of mine rescue and survival operations in the event of major disaster: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended to carry out section 115 of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977 or to carry out that portion of section 104(g)(1) of such Act relating to the enforcement of any training requirements, with respect to shell dredging, or with respect to any sand, gravel, surface stone, surface clay, colloidal phosphate, or surface limestone mine.

BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, including advances or reimbursements to State, Federal, and local agencies and their employees for services rendered, $193,771,000, together with not to exceed $49,518,000, which may be expended from the Employment Security Administration account in the Unemployment Trust Fund.

DEPARTMENTAL MANAGEMENT

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for Departmental Management, including the hire of 5 sedans, and including $2,880,000 for the President's Committee on Employment of People With Disabilities, $115,072,000 together with not to exceed $285,000 which may be expended from the Employment Security Administration account in the Unemployment Trust Fund.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR VETERANS EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING

Not to exceed $162,623,000 may be derived from the Employment Security Administration account in the Unemployment Trust Fund to carry out the provisions of 38 U.S.C. 2001-10 and 2021-26.

OFFICE OF THE INSPECTOR GENERAL

For salaries and expenses of the Office of the Inspector General in carrying out the provisions of the Inspector General Act of 1978, as amended, $41,997,000, together with not to exceed $5,194,000, which may be expended from the Employment Security Administration account in the Unemployment Trust Fund.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. Appropriations in this Act available for salaries and expenses shall be available for supplies, services, and rental of conference space within the District of Columbia, as the Secretary of Labor shall deem necessary for settlement of labor-management disputes.

SEC. 102. None of the funds appropriated under this Act shall be used to grant variances, interim orders or letters of clarification to employers which will allow exposure of workers to chemicals or other workplace hazards in excess of existing Occupational Safety and Health Administration standards for the purpose of conducting experiments on workers health or safety.

SEC. 103. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, no funds appropriated by this Act may be used to execute or carry out any contract with a non-governmental entity to administer or manage a Civilian Conservation Center of the Job Corps which was not under such a contract as of September 1, 1984.

SEC. 104. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be used by the Job Corps program to pay the expenses of legal counsel or representation in any criminal case or proceeding for a Job Corps participant, unless certified to and approved by the Secretary of Labor that a public defender is not available.

SEC. 105. (a) Within sixty days after the enactment of this Act, the United States, acting through the Secretary of Labor (or an official of the Department of Labor duly authorized by the Secretary of Labor) shall convey to the State of Oregon without consideration, all rights, title, and interest of the United States, in real property described in subsection (b) (and any improvements thereon).

(b) The real property referred to in subsection (a) is that property commonly known as the "Emerald Heights Housing Complex" located in the city of Astoria, Clatsop County, Oregon.

This title may be cited as the "Department of Labor Appropriations Act, 1990".

TITLE II—DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

HEALTH RESOURCES AND SERVICES ADMINISTRATION

HEALTH RESOURCES AND SERVICES

PROGRAM OPERATIONS

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 201. None of the funds appropriated by this title for grants-in-aid of State agencies to cover, in whole or in part, the cost of operation of said agencies, including the salaries and expenses of officers and employees of said agencies, shall be withheld from the said agencies of any State which have established by legislative enactment and have in operation a merit system and classification and compensation plan covering the selection, tenure in office, and compensation of their employees, because of any disapproval of their personnel or the manner of their selection by the agencies of the said States, or the rates of pay of said officers or employees.

SEC. 202. None of the funds made available by this Act for the National Institutes of Health, except for those appropriated to the "Office of the Director", may be used to provide forward funding or multiyear funding of research project grants except in those cases where the Director of the National Institutes of Health has determined that such funding is specifically required because of the scientific requirements of a particular research project grant.

SEC. 203. Appropriations in this or any other Act shall be available for expenses for active commissioned officers in the Public Health Service Reserve Corps and for not to exceed 2,400 commissioned officers in the Regular Corps; expenses incident to the dissemination of health information in foreign countries through exhibits and other appropriate means; advances of funds for compensation, travel, and subsistence expenses (or per diem in lieu thereof) for persons coming from abroad to participate in health or scientific activities of the Department pursuant to law; expenses of primary and secondary schooling of dependents in foreign countries, of Public Health Service commissioned officers stationed in foreign countries, at costs for any given area not in excess of those of the Department of Defense for the same area, when it is determined by the Secretary that the schools available in the locality are unable to provide adequately for the education of such dependents, and for the transportation of such dependents, between such schools and their places of residence when the schools are not accessible to such dependents by regular means of transportation; expenses for medical care for civilian and commissioned employees of the Public Health Service and their dependents, assigned abroad on a permanent basis in accordance with such regulations as the Secretary may provide; rental or lease of living quarters (for periods not exceeding five years), and provision of heat, fuel, and light and maintenance, improvement, and repair of such quarters, and advance payments therefor, for civilian officers, and employees of the Public Health Service who are United States citizens and who have a permanent station in a foreign country; purchase, erection, and maintenance of temporary or portable structures; and for the payment of compensation to consultants or individual scientists appointed for limited periods of time pursuant to section 207(f) or section 207(g) of the Public Health Service Act, at rates established by the Assistant Secretary for Health, or the Secretary where such action is required by statute, not to exceed the per diem rate equivalent to the rate for GS-18.

SEC. 204. None of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to perform abortions except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term.

SEC. 205. Funds advanced to the National Institutes of Health Management Fund from appropriations in this Act shall be available for the expenses of sharing medical care facilities and resources pursuant to section 327A of the Public Health Service Act.

SEC. 206. Funds appropriated in this title shall be available for not to exceed $37,000 for official reception and representation expenses when specifically approved by the Secretary.

SEC. 207. Amounts received from employees of the Department in payment for room and board may be credited to the appropriation accounts which finance the activities of the Public Health Service.

SEC. 208. None of the funds made available by this Act shall be used to provide special retention pay (bonuses) under paragraph (4) of 37 U.S.C. 302(a) to any regular or reserve medical officer of the Public Health Service for any period during which the officer is assigned to the clinical, research, or staff associate program administered by the National Institutes of Health.

SEC. 209. None of the funds appropriated in this title shall be used to transfer the general administration of programs authorized under the Native American Programs Act from the Department of Health and Human Services to the Department of the Interior.

SEC. 210. Funds provided in this Act may be used for one-year contracts which are to be performed in two fiscal years, so long as the total amount for such contracts is obligated in the year for which the funds are appropriated.

SEC. 211. The Secretary shall make available through assignment not more than 60 employees of the Public Health Service to assist in the child survival activities and to work in AIDS programs through and with funds provided by the Agency for International Development, the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund or the World Health Organization.

SEC. 212. For the purpose of insuring proper management of federally supported computer systems and data bases, funds appropriated by this Act are available for the purchase of dedicated telephone service between the private residences of employees assigned to computer centers funded under this Act, and the computer centers to which such employees are assigned.

SEC. 213. Funds available in this title for activities related to Human Immunodeficiency Virus may be transferred by the Secretary of Health and Human Services between appropriation accounts, except that this section shall not apply to funds made available for fiscal year 1990.

SEC. 214. No funds appropriated under this Act shall be used by the National Institutes of Health, or any other Federal agency, or recipient of Federal funds on any project that entails the capture or procurement of chimpanzees obtained from the wild. For purposes of this section, the term "recipient of Federal funds" includes private citizens, corporations, or other research institutions located outside of the United States that are recipients of Federal funds.

SEC. 215. None of the funds appropriated by this title shall be used to pay for any research program or project or any program, project, or course which is of an experimental nature, or any other activity involving human participants, which is determined by the Secretary or a court of competent jurisdiction to present a danger to the physical, mental, or emotional well-being of a participant or subject of such program, project, or course, without the written, informed consent of each participant or subject, or a participant's parents or legal guardian, if such participant or subject is under eighteen years of age. The Secretary shall adopt appropriate regulations respecting this section.

SEC. 216. In administering funds made available under this title for research relating to the treatment of AIDS, the National Institutes of Health shall take all possible steps to ensure that all experimental drugs for the treatment of AIDS, particularly antivirals and immunomodulators, that have shown some effectiveness in treating individuals infected with the human immunodeficiency virus are tested in clinical trials as expeditiously as possible and with as many subjects as is scientifically acceptable.

SEC. 217. None of the funds appropriated in this title for the National Institutes of Health and the Alcohol Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration shall be used to pay the salary of an individual, through a grant or other extramural mechanism, at a rate in excess of $120,000 per year.

SEC. 218. The Consolidated Office Building is hereby named the William H. Natcher Building; the Child Health/Neurosciences Building (building 49) is hereby named the Silvio O. Conte Building; the Stone House (building 16) is hereby named the Lawton Chiles International House; the Building numbered 36 is hereby named the Lowell P. Weicker Building.

SEC. 219. Of the funds appropriated in this Act for the National Institutes of Health, a reduction of $4,000,000 is to be applied to all appropriations as a result of improved procurement practices and a reduction of $10,000,000 is to be applied to all appropriations as a result of savings achieved under section 217 of this title.

SEC. 220. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, AIDS education programs that receive assistance from the Centers for Disease Control and other education curricula dealing with sexual activity that receive assistance under this Act—

(1) shall not be designed to promote or encourage, directly, intravenous drug abuse or sexual activity, homosexual or heterosexual; and

(2) with regard to AIDS education programs and curricula—

(A) shall be designed to reduce exposure to and transmission of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome by providing accurate information; and

(B) shall provide information on the health risks of promiscuous sexual activity and intravenous drug abuse.

SEC. 221. During the twelve-month period beginning October 1, 1989, none of the funds made available under this Act may be used to impose any reductions in payment, or to seek repayment from or to withhold any payment to any State pursuant to section 427 or 471 of the Social Security Act, as a result of a disallowance determination made in connection with a compliance review for any Federal fiscal year preceding Federal fiscal year 1990, until all judicial proceedings, including appeals, relating to such disallowance determination have been finally concluded, nor may such funds be used to conduct further compliance reviews with respect to any State which is a party to such judicial proceeding until such proceeding has been finally concluded.

This title may be cited as the "Department of Health and Human Services Appropriations Act, 1990".

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. None of the funds appropriated by this title for grants-in-aid of State agencies to cover, in whole or in part, the costs of operation of said agencies, including the salaries and expenses of officers and employees of said agencies, shall be withheld from the said agencies of any State which have established by legislative enactment and have in operation a merit system and classification and compensation plan covering the selection, tenure in office, and compensation of their employees, because of any disapproval of their personnel or the manner of their selection by the agencies of the said States, or the rates of pay of said officers or employees.

SEC. 302. Funds appropriated in this Act to the American Printing House for the Blind, Howard University, the National Technical Institute for the Deaf, and Gallaudet University shall be subject to financial and program audit by the Secretary of Education and the Secretary may withhold all or any portion of these appropriations if he determines that an institution has not cooperated fully in the conduct of such audits.

SEC. 303. No part of the funds contained in this title may be used to force any school or school district which is desegregated as that term is defined in title IV of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Public Law 88-352, to take any action to force the busing of students; to force on account of race, creed or color the abolishment of any school so desegregated; or to force the transfer or assignment of any student attending any elementary or secondary school so desegregated to or from a particular school over the protest of his or her parents or parent.

SEC. 304. (a) No part of the funds contained in this title shall be used to force any school or school district which is desegregated as that term is defined in title IV of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Public Law 88-352, to take any action to force the busing of students; to require the abolishment of any school so desegregated; or to force on account of race, creed or color the transfer of students to or from a particular school so desegregated as a condition precedent to obtaining Federal funds otherwise available to any State, school district or school.

(b) No funds appropriated in this Act may be used for the transportation of students or teachers (or for the purchase of equipment for such transportation) in order to overcome racial imbalance in any school or school system, or for the transportation of students or teachers (or for the purchase of equipment for such transportation) in order to carry out a plan of racial desegregation of any school or school system.

SEC. 305. None of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to require, directly or indirectly, the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest the student's home, except for a student requiring special education, to the school offering such special education, in order to comply with title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. For the purpose of this section an indirect requirement of transportation of students includes the transportation of students to carry out a plan involving the reorganization of the grade structure of schools, the pairing of schools, or the clustering of schools, or any combination of grade restructuring, pairing or clustering. The prohibition described in this section does not include the establishment of magnet schools.

SEC. 306. No funds appropriated under this Act may be used to prevent the implementation of programs of voluntary prayer and meditation in the public schools.

This title may be cited as the "Department of Education Appropriations Act, 1990".

For necessary expenses of the United States Institute of Peace as authorized in the United States Institute of Peace Act, $7,650,000.

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SERVICES

For carrying out activities under Public Law 100-382, $3,250,000, to remain available until expended.

TITLE V—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 501. The expenditure of any appropriation under this Act for any consulting service through procurement contract, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 3109, shall be limited to those contracts where such expenditures are a matter of public record and available for public inspection, except where otherwise provided under existing law, or under existing Executive order issued pursuant to existing law.

SEC. 502. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be expended by an executive agency, as referred to in the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 401 et seq.), pursuant to any obligation for services by contract, unless such executive agency has awarded and entered into such contract in full compliance with such Act and regulations promulgated thereunder.

SEC. 503. Appropriations contained in this Act, available for salaries and expenses, shall be available for services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109 but at rates for individuals not to exceed the per diem rate equivalent to the rate for GS-18.

SEC. 504. Appropriations contained in this Act, available for salaries and expenses, shall be available for uniforms or allowances therefor as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 5901-5902).

SEC. 505. Appropriations contained in this Act, available for salaries and expenses, shall be available for expenses of attendance at meetings which are concerned with the functions or activities for which the appropriation is made or which will contribute to improved conduct, supervision, or management of those functions or activities.

SEC. 506. No part of the funds appropriated under this Act shall be used to provide a loan, guarantee of a loan, a grant, the salary of or any remuneration whatever to any individual applying for admission, attending, employed by, teaching at, or doing research at an institution of higher education who has engaged in conduct on or after August 1, 1969, which involves the use of (or the assistance to others in the use of) force or the threat of force or the seizure of property under the control of an institution of higher education, to require or prevent the availability of certain curricula, or to prevent the faculty, administrative officials, or students in such institution from engaging in their duties or pursuing their studies at such institution.

SEC. 507. The Secretaries of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education are authorized to transfer unexpended balances of prior appropriations to accounts corresponding to current appropriations provided in this Act: Provided, That such transferred balances are used for the same purpose, and for the same periods of time, for which they were originally appropriated.

SEC. 508. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. 509. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used, other than for normal and recognized executive-legislative relationships, for publicity or propaganda purposes, for the preparation, distribution, or use of any kit, pamphlet, booklet, publication, radio, television, or film presentation designed to support or defeat legislation pending before the Congress, except in presentation to the Congress itself.

No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used to pay the salary or expenses of any grant or contract recipient, or agent acting for such recipient, related to any activity designed to influence legislation or appropriations pending before the Congress.

SEC. 510. The Secretaries of Labor and Education are each authorized to make available not to exceed $7,500 from funds available for salaries and expenses under titles I and III, respectively, for official reception and representation expenses; the Director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service is authorized to make available for official reception and representation expenses not to exceed $2,500 from the funds available for "Salaries and expenses, Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service"; and the Chairman of the National Mediation Board is authorized to make available for official reception and representation expenses not to exceed $2,500 from funds available for "Salaries and expenses, National Mediation Board".

SEC. 511. When issuing statements, press releases, requests for proposals, bid solicitations and other documents describing projects or programs funded in whole or in part with Federal money, all grantees receiving Federal funds, including but not limited to State and local governments, shall clearly state (1) the percentage of the total costs of the program or project which will be financed with Federal money, (2) the dollar amount of Federal funds for the project or program, and (3) percentage and dollar amount of the total costs of the project or program that will be financed by non-governmental sources.

SEC. 512. Such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1990 pay raises for programs funded by this Act shall be absorbed within the levels appropriated in this Act.

SEC. 513. (a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) illegal drug use is a serious problem of our society and educational institutions;

(2) drug use is incompatible with the educational process and destroys an atmosphere conducive to learning;

(3) our educational institutions and their administrators have traditionally been entrusted with the task of transmitting community values to their students who will lead our Nation in the future; and

(4) our educational institutions have the opportunity to enrich the lives of a significant portion of young Americans during their years in college by encouraging the study of values that enable them to distinguish right from wrong and moral from immoral.

(b) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that colleges and universities should demand drug-free campuses and should, with the support of parents, students, and the community, enforce strict but fair policies to eliminate drug use by students.

SEC. 514. (a) Not more than $26,643,000 of the funds appropriated by this Act may be obligated or expended for the procurement of advisory or assistance services by the Department of Labor; not more than $85,637,000 of the funds appropriated by this Act may be obligated or expended for the procurement of advisory or assistance services by the Department of Health and Human Services; and not more than $41,565,000 of the funds appropriated by this Act may be obligated or expended for the procurement of advisory and assistance services by the Department of Education.

(b)(1) Not later than forty-five days after the end of each fiscal quarter, the head of each department named in subsection (a) shall (A) submit to Congress a report on the amounts obligated and expended by the department during that quarter for the procurement of advisory and assistance services, and (B) transmit a copy of such report to the Comptroller General of the United States.

(2) Each report submitted under paragraph (1) shall include a list with the following information:

(A) All contracts awarded for the procurement of advisory and assistance services during the quarter and the amount of each contract.

(B) The purpose of each contract.

(C) The justification for the award of each contract and the reason the work cannot be performed by civil servants.

(c) The Comptroller General of the United States shall review the reports submitted under subsection (b) and transmit to Congress any comments and recommendations the Comptroller General considers appropriate regarding the matter contained in such reports.

SEC. 515. For purposes of section 202 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Reaffirmation Act of 1987, transfers, if any, in the following accounts are a necessary (but secondary) result of significant policy changes: Training and Employment Services; State Unemployment Insurance and Employment Service Operations; Health Resources and Services Program Operations; Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health; Low Income Home Energy Assistance; Interim Assistance to States for Legalization; and Community Services Block Grant.

SEC. 516. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, no funds appropriated by this Act may be used to execute or carry out any contract with a nongovernmental entity to administer or manage a Civilian Conservation Center of the Job Corps.

SEC. 517. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, funds appropriated for Labor-Management Services, Salaries and Expenses are hereby reduced by $1,000,000 and funds appropriated for Employment Standards Administration, Salaries and Expenses are hereby reduced by $2,000,000.

SEC. 518. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, funds appropriated for salaries and expenses of the Department of Health and Human Services are hereby reduced by $15,000,000: Provided, That no trust fund limitation shall be reduced.

This Act may be cited as the "Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990".

Mr. NATCHER (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered as read, printed in the RECORD, and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any points of order against the bill?

If not, are there any amendments?

Mr. AUCOIN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I want to start today by making three points.

First, I am very, very proud to have played a role with a number of my colleagues in ending 10 years of tyranny over the American women, particularly poor women who have been victims of rape and incest.

For the first time in 10 years the House, when it passed this bill originally, funded abortion services for such victims so they would not have to produce the offspring of the criminal who perpetrated that violence on them.

I am proud of that effort. That is point No. 1.

Point No. 2, I am dismayed and frankly disgusted with a Presidential veto on this bill which does so much good for the American people, a Presidential veto sustained by a minority of this House which thwarts the clear majority will not only of the Members of this House but the majority of the American women. That is point No. 2.

Point No. 3, I want to say it is my judgment the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER], chairman of the subcommittee, has been mistreated by the White House and by its antiabortion allies in the Congress that has been holding Mr. Bush and the White House hostage on this issue.

This bill could have been signed weeks ago, my friends, because under the terms of the rape and incest provisions passed by the House last week, the President had the authority to write rules and regulations defining the time period within which a rape should be reported.

But instead we got a veto for a political reason which I think does an injustice to a chairman who has been nothing but loyal to this administration and the same for the ranking Republican member on this committee.

I think that is a disservice, and I want to go on record as saying that.

Now to all who are listening, people should know this in terms of the floor procedure today: We are operating under a unique parliamentary procedure where there is no rule that waives points of order. Therefore, no substantive statutory amendments can be offered.

That means that if we were to try to restore rape and incest funding for those victims, someone would raise a point of order and it would be struck down.

So no amendments will be offered today. But let me make clear for those who have fought so hard so long on this issue: This is not the last inning, not by any means.

We still have the conference, and if it does not work out, we still have next year, my friends, and if that does work out, we have next November's elections.

And I would say to the antichoice minority that has thwarted the majority, that seems to have this hypnosis over the White House, it has walked the Republican Party down the gangplank, out of step with the mainstream of the American people, and I think you are going to find a number of Members who have stayed with the White House on this feeling very uncomfortable in the months to come.

Now, some Members have suggested a, quote unquote, compromise. They say that a compromise would be forcing the victim of rape who may have been sodomized and brutalized and beat up in every despicable, imaginable way, to march down to a precinct house within 48 hours or 72 hours and report to a cop what has happened to her, notwithstanding what her emotional state may be. Forty-eight hours, regardless of her emotional state.

Ladies and gentlemen, if you think that is workable, if you think that is fair, take the time to pick up the phone and call a rape crisis center in your district. They will tell you the condition some of these women are in.

They are not able under the convenience of the strict timeframe that you want to impose through your so-called compromise, which we are not going to let you offer today because it is unworkable and unfair, they are not able to report under those conditions. And let the American people know that we will not let you try to do that because it is unworkable.

What gets me also about this so-called compromise is that, as I read in the paper today, the New York Times, the White House is reported as wanting that tight timeframe because it does not want poor women to engage in an act of fraud in reporting rape.

□ 1350

Fraud. That is an interesting situation. When the antichoice crowd thinks of fraud, it seems to think of the American women. When I think of fraud, I think HUD and Sam Pierce.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. AuCoin was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. AuCOIN. I call fraud what happened in the Pentagon, in the ripoffs in the procurement procedure. I call fraud what Sam Pierce apparently has done down at HUD. I do not think the American women, when in the last time this was legal under the law, to be able to get funding for rape victims, only 72 in this country actually availed themselves of that privilege. I do not see that that can by any way be called wholesale fraud or massive abortion on demand question.

It is a narrow exemption. What a statement to say a person thinks American women cannot be trusted, to report something that most women do not feel comfortable reporting because of the evil that has been inflicted on them.

What happened, by the way, to murder? This used to be called by the antiabortion crowd, murder. Now it is not being called murder, and it stoppped being called murder when the Republican antichoice crowd started losing elections. Let the record show that was the time of the change.

I want to say to Members that if we had our way we would offer an amendment that would say to the President the obvious, Mr. President. The President has the authority, we write this into this bill, an amendment, the President has the authority to write regulations. What we want the President to do in writing those regulations is to take into account the emotional state of the mother. If George Bush would veto that, then what he would really be saying is save me from myself. I do not trust myself. I do not trust my own rule and regulation writer. I cannot imagine that the President would do that, but let the record show we are not able to offer such a thing. No side is able to offer such a thing. Our only hope is in conference, but I want to say to my friends in conference, if any Member thinks a 48-hour "compromise" is going to be acceptable out of conference, they were badly mistaken.

We will fight it in the trenches. We will fight it on the floor. We will fight the entire conference. That is not a compromise. That is worse than any exemption whatsoever.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I regret the turn of events here. I think we are going to start getting pejorative, and I do not intend to do so. However, if those Members who support the unborn, the innocent unborn, are going to be called "the antichoice crowd," that opens the gate, and one who opens the gate, I guess, should not complain if strange cattle wander through.

The prokiller crowd, the "death squads of the left," we can play that game, too, and if the gentleman wants his group to be called the prochoice crowd—which is an interesting euphemism, because there is no choice given to the unborn, he should be less pejorative about us. The choice, we are told is whether or not to have a baby. However, the woman, if she becomes pregnant, already has a baby, and the question is will she let him or her live or die?

If the gentleman wants to talk about fraud, interestingly enough, he omits Wedtech. There is a litany of fraud. I do not want to polarize this Chamber, but the gentleman is very selective in his speaking of fraud. He is dismayed by a veto. The gentleman is unacquainted with principle, evidently, because the President would have found it the easiest thing to sign that bill. The President is committed to saving the babies of poor women. The gentleman says "poor women" trippingly from the tongue, but he forgets there are children involved too. It is the children of the poor that deserve to be saved. The children of the rich are lost. If a wealthy woman wants to kill, to exterminate her unborn child, that is too bad. We cannot save that child yet. But the poor, their children are salvagable, and we, the party you liberals call the economic royalists, the malefactors of great wealth, care about the children of the poor. We care about them. The liberals who are supposed to defend the powerless, why the most powerless in the world is an unborn child whose mother finds that child inconvenient, unwanted, to be exterminated. Why is their defense left to us and abandoned by you liberals?

Report to a cop? Well, I should not be surprised by that choice of words. Police officers who risk their lives so citizens can get to their car at night and get home. "Report to a cop," well, I think Members would want to catch the rapist. I should think the brutal crime about which the gentleman waxed lyrically, would lead him to want to catch the rapist. The sooner we report it to the police, the sooner we get the rapist. Or does that not fit into the gentleman's scenario?

We should not impose on people, because there is no amendment going to be offered. We have heard this issue again and again. I am simply responding to my friend, the gentleman from Oregon. However, I suggest to the gentleman, unborn children have got to be considered. We can describe rape in all of its horrible details, and I agree with Members, and I want the victim protected as much as possible. However, a second destruction does not solve anything, but kill an innocent human life.

Your moral imagination, your compassion, your defense of the powerless ought to be big enough and strong enough to reach the little, tiny innocent child in the womb. But of course, some Members deny that is human life. Members say that is a randomly multiplying bunch of cells. It is a tumor to be extricated, like abcessed tonsils, a bad tooth. But it is a child. It is an unborn child. It is a little member of the human family. That is what we are defending. That is what the President is defending. Do not call the President unprincipled. He is doing a very difficult thing for principle.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, since I have been a Member of the Congress, I have had the pleasure and the opportunity to serve with eight Presidents. I have enjoyed serving with all eight of them. I say to the chairman and to the Members of the House that I personally like President Bush.

I am hoping, Mr. Chairman, that when this bill is passed in the House and it goes over on the other side, that we will bring back a bill that can be accepted. We will send it down to the White House and it will be signed.

I have had the opportunity and the pleasure of serving on the subcommittee and on the full Committee on Appropriations for a number of years with my friend, the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Conte]. We do not have an abler Member in the House than Mr. Conte. He is not only the ranking member on the subcommittee, Mr. Chairman, he is the ranking minority member on the full Committee on Appropriations.

This is the best bill that has ever been presented to the House for the Department of Labor, the Department of Health and Human Services, and for the Department of Education. Mr. Chairman, as Members well know, in this bill we have the money for the Summer Youth Program. We have the Job Corps. The feeding program for the elderly. We have all the programs concerning elementary and secondary education and higher education. We have the National Institutes of Health, over $7 billion. This is probably the most important appropriations bill that comes through the House each year. Anyone that called this bill the people's bill would be correct.

Mr. Chairman, I served in this House only a few weeks until I found out without any question that there are just as many smart people sitting on that side of the aisle as sit on this side of the aisle. It did not take me very long to decide that. I will walk back and forth across that center aisle any day. I have friends on both sides. I just wanted to make this statement, Mr. Chairman, to say to the Members that this bill is a vitally important bill that pertains to the Department of Labor, the Department of Health and Human Services, and the Department of Education. It must be passed. We still believe, Mr. Chairman, that when we take care of the health of our people and educate our children, we continue living in the strongest country in the world.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

I thank the chairman of the subcommittee for expressing his understanding of the views on both sides of the aisle.

□ 1400

I would like to say to the gentleman from Illinois—and I hope he is still in the Chamber, and perhaps he will stay to hear this—that I know he took offense at the term, "antichoice," but I have to say that to match that with the language he used, "prokiller," is absolutely not in the same realm, because I would like to ask the gentleman this: What about the 10,000 women a year who died due to botched abortions during the time that abortion was outlawed? Are those not lives worth talking about? Were those not lives of living, breathing women, some of them students, some of them mothers, some of them sisters, and some of them aunts?

I knew one of those who almost died in 1962, and she paid the price of infertility. So please, let us not throw the term, "killer," into this discussion.

Mr. Chairman, this Congress took an historic step toward compassion and toward fairness when it overturned a decade-long prohibition on Medicaid funding to end the pregnancy forced by the violence of rape or incest. As the author of that amendment and with thanks to my colleague, the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. AUCOIN], who asked me to offer it, I experienced a sense after that vote and after that victory that this Congress understands that our Government—and as Mr. Lech Walesa said, of, by, and for the people—should stand by innocent women and girls who need our help in these most atrocious circumstances, and that we as a Congress cannot say what our President says. He says: "I am for abortion if the victim of rape or incest wants it, but I will not fund it if she is poor. If she is wealthy, she can take care of it." The President said, and Marlin Fitzwater said today, that it is a moral issue. "It is a moral issue with me," the President said.

But I ask, what is moral about a dual system, one for poor women and one for wealthy women? What is moral about abandoning a victim of incest, a young girl, a bleeding woman, a traumatized woman?

Our amendment, I say to my friends, is not called beat the clock. That is not what we try to do in our amendment, and we would oppose a beat-the-clock amendment. A woman in that state, in that mental and physical state, cannot begin watching that clock from the time she has been raped, because I say to my friends that if they have ever talked with anyone who has been a victim of rape, they know that these people cannot think, they cannot even talk, and they do not even know what time it is. So let us not play beat the clock and force a woman to report a rape to the police in 24 hours. Let us stay with the Boxer amendment.

Mr. Chairman, let me say to the Members of Congress that we can count. We know that we are short of the super majority we need to override the President. We need about 50 more votes in this body of 435 Members, and that is not bad considering from whence we came. But rather than keep this argument in this Chamber, we will take it to the American people and we will tell them that this issue of compassion is in their hands. The American people have to help us win this issue for the victims of rape and incest. Seventy percent of them say they agree with us now.

They can help us in two ways. First, they can try to persuade their President that he is wrong. Maybe they could call him and write him during the holiday season. When he is happy and he is with his beautiful family and enjoying the peace and quiet of his beautiful home, maybe then they can ask him about the unfortunate victims of rape and incest and maybe he would say that in the spirit of the Christmas season and in the spirit of the new year, "Yes, I agree with you Congress, you are right."

Second, the American people, if they cannot persuade the President, should go out and elect 50 prochoice Members of this body, so then we would have the super majority and we can stand up for compassion and fairness, and we can win on this issue.

Mr. WEBER, Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I had not intended to speak, as my colleague, the gentleman from Illinois, had not intended to speak, because the House has heard these arguments many times. But I guess we cannot allow some of these arguments to go by without being responded to.

There are indeed strongly felt points of view on both sides of the issue, but it seems to me that we are intent on redebating the entire issue today. So I must respond to some of the comments of my colleague, the gentleman from California. First of all, most of us who have been involved in this issue for a long time understand that it is very difficult, if not impossible to identify accurately the number of women who died from illegal abortions back in those days when the figures were not accurate. I do not know the source of the gentlewoman's number of 10,000 a year. I do know, after having tried to figure that issue out, that any figure we reach is probably fairly grabbed out of the air.

Be that as it may, that is not my point, whether it is 10,000 lives a year or more. Our point is that if we are talking about trading lives, there are a million and a half lives lost every year because of abortion, and if the gentlewoman is dissatisfied with our raising the issue of "killer," it is because our friend, the gentleman from Oregon, got up and taunted us with the notion that murder has somehow moved out of the debate.

I have been involved in the "Right to Life" movement since I was in college. I have never used the word, "murder." I have tried to avoid the use of inflammatory language, but if the Members on the other side of the issue think that somehow we have changed our attitude, that what is involved in abortion is not the taking of an innocent life and that does not indeed involve killing, they are wrong. Abortion in this country kills a million and a half people every year. Let us be clear about that.

Second, I would like to respond specifically to the question of what is moral about abandoning poor women. It seems to me that in the entire debate on this issue we have really lost sight of a very simple fact. I have not yet heard from the other side of the aisle or from the other side of the issue, rather, I should say, how many poor women have not had abortions because they were not paid for by the Federal Government. I would be interested in hearing that statistic. In my State, I know there are virtually none, because there are private funds that have been available since the day of the passage of the Hyde amendment that have paid for the abortions of poor women regardless of whether their pregnancies resulted from rape or incest or other causes. I have yet to see statistics from across the country where those abortions are not available through private funding. The question we are talking about here is not whether those abortions for those poor women and those victims are going to be paid for. It is whether or not they are going to be paid for by voluntary private contributions or whether we are going to force millions of Americans who believe abortions to be killing to pay for those abortions with their moneys rather than have them paid for by private funds which are currently being used. We submit that, first of all, we do not believe in abortion, but if we are going to have to pay for those killings, we should allow people that do not find their consciences violated to pay for them through voluntary contributions. That has been the system.

But I say to the Members, do not force me and do not force my constituents and do not force those of your constituents who disagree with your choice and who do believe it is killing to pay for that killing with their tax dollars. Again, we do not know how many people are being denied access to abortions for economic reasons. I suspect your side of the issue would be more than happy to raise that statistic if there was any significant number. There is none. That is not the issue here. What is at issue is the consciences of tens of millions of Americans who do not wish to see their tax funds going to pay for a procedure that they believe in their hearts and souls to be killing.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, first let me pay some tribute to the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER]. He is right. For years he has guided this Chamber through thick and thin, and in doing so, with the Labor-HHS bill, we have achieved the kind of compassion and humanity that we all appreciate. This is an excellent bill, I agree with the chairman of the subcommittee it gets more excellent every year under his tutelage.

The chairman of the subcommittee is in a difficult position. He is in a difficult position because we know that on the issue of rape and incest a majority of this Chamber favors allowing the woman to have an abortion, but two-thirds does not.

Mr. Chairman, that is the tight rope. That is the dilemma which the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER] finds himself in. It is not an enviable position, and I have a great deal of sympathy for where he is coming from.

However, Mr. Chairman, let me tell the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER] that, at least in this gentleman's opinion, the pendulum is swinging, and swinging and swinging, and we may not have two-thirds today, but we will have two-thirds. Maybe it will be next month. Maybe it will be next year. But we will have it because the long and short of it is, my colleagues, that the American people do support a right to choose.

Mr. Chairman, very simply abortion is an issue of deep morality for many: the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE], the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WEBER]. I respect it. I really do. I have thought about this issue long and hard. But just as these gentlemen fervently believe that life begins at conception, I do not. Millions of Americans, men and women, north, east, south, and west, do not. And just as the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WEBER] asked us not to foist our views on him, I would say to the gentleman from Minnesota, "Don't foist your views on me, on my wife, on my family, the people who may not believe that life begins at conception."

Then I would say there is another school here. None of the people have spoken here because this is a moral issue, and Americans want moral issues decided within our individual brains, and within our families and within our churches, not within our House of Representatives or our Senate, especially when we are deeply divided. But there is a group of people who seem to be mixing morality and politics these days now that the pendulum has swung.

We have heard people say, the chairman of the other party, that that party can be prochoice. There is room for prolife Republicans and prochoice Republicans within the Republican Party. Mr. Chairman, if he believes that, if my colleagues believe that, then the logical extension is not just should the Republican Party have room for choice, but each individual should have room for choice because, if it is not a moral issue, if it is not a moral issue, but rather an issue for each person, or candidate or whatever to decide, then let us not claim morality.

In other words, Mr. Chairman, I say to my colleagues: "If you believe this is a moral issue, don't go for politics, and, if you believe it is a political issue, then don't claim morality. But to mix the two up is very unfair, very unfair."

Now one more point, about this 72 or 48 hours amendment. How can we ask a woman who has been raped or a victim of incest immediately to run to the nearest police station, and go to the nearest policeman and report it when she is in such turmoil? That is a copout. If people think that we are going to let them off the hook, the political hook, because some people are on a political hook, we are not. If they believe that a woman should not have to carry a fetus that came about through rape and incest, they believe it whether she had the wherewithal to run to the police station 48 or 72 hours later or whether she did not. That is not consistent with the deeply held views of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE], the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WEBER], and so many others who have spoken.

So, let us not play politics. Let us discuss this issue on the deeply held moral views that we all hold, and then let us make a decision.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] just a question on morality and politics, and I want to be sure I understood the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, perhaps I misunderstood.

Mr. SCHUMER. I doubt it.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, did the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] say that morality and politics are not to be confused?

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Chairman, what this gentleman said is indeed that morality, and one should not play politics with issues of deep morality, and one should not, if they are playing politics, claim morality. It is that simple.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] surely does not mean that politics and morality are not on many issues——

Mr. SCHUMER. No, no, no. What this gentleman was saying is that there are deeply held moral views on each side; OK? And I respect those, but what I am saying is that on those types of issues where a large number of people in the Nation feel one way about a deeply held moral view, and a large number of people feel the other way, then this House of Representatives, this Senate, ought not to foist its views, but we should let each person search in his or her own heart to the decision that they agree with.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would let me reclaim my time——

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, just let me agree with the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER].

Mr. Chairman, we have no disagreement, and I concede that everybody who disagrees with me does so from the noblest of motives, from the sincerest convictions. All I ask is that they accord the same consideration to us, and I did not detect that in the first speech.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, let me simply say to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] that the one problem I have with the way he phrased his statement there a moment ago is we would still have slavery in this country because the fact is it was a moral issue that was debated very intensely politically, and there was a wide division in the country about what we were going to do, and so I would say to the gentleman that we have got to be very careful on some of these issues.

Also the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] raised the whole issue of whether life begins at conception, and obviously there is a division of opinion on that. But I think we have to understand, and I do not want to misstate anybody's position here, but I think we would have to understand that I think virtually everyone who has spoken on the other side does not believe in just abortion when rape and incest is involved. They believe in abortion on demand, that in fact they believe that the taxpayers ought to fund abortion for everyone based upon the Roe versus Wade decision which permits abortion, not in just the first trimester, not in just the second trimester, but in the third trimester, so literally their position is, their political position, the true nature of their position, is that they believe the taxpayers should fund abortion on demand, and really the debate has to be on that premise, and I do not think I have misstated.

Mr. Chairman, I would be happy to yield to anyone on that side who would indicate to me that they do not fundamentally believe that abortion on demand is the position that they take. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. AUCOIN] is indicating to me that, yes, that is his position, and so——

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Chairman, I just want to point out that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] is misquoting Roe versus Wade. Roe versus Wade provides that in the third trimester, or upon viability, the State can step in, in any of the 50 States, can step in and forbid an abortion.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the point of the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS] except that the fact is that an abortion can be had in the third trimester under the Roe versus Wade decision. That is all the point this gentleman made, and the fact is that the proponents of these amendments would in fact have the State and have the Federal Government fund those kinds of abortions. I suggest to the gentleman that that is not something we want done.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, Roe versus Wade and Doe versus Bolton, its companion case, holds that during the third trimester the State may have an interest in the judgment of the pregnant woman to have or not to have an abortion except where the life of the mother is involved or the health of the mother. Then they define "health" according to the World Health Organization standard as the absence of distress. So, under that definition of health, a woman who is distressed during the last week of her pregnancy can have an abortion under Roe versus Wade.

Mr. AUCOIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Oregon. The gentleman would not yield to anyone during his time, but I am happy to yield to the gentleman myself.

Mr. AUCOIN. No one asked me to yield, I will tell the gentleman. I appreciate him yielding to me, since he mentioned my name in the course of his statement.

Mr. WALKER. I did not mention the gentleman's name.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

At the request of Mr. AUCOIN, and by unanimous consent, Mr. WALKER was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. AUCOIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WALKER. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. AUCOIN. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yield to me.

I cannot help but point out that the gentleman has totally changed the subject. The subject is not Roe versus Wade. The subject is rape and incest funding for victims of rape and incest.

I understand why the gentleman would change the subject, because if I were trying to take the position that those victims should not be helped, I would want to get off that topic as quickly as I could, too. I understand why the gentleman takes that position.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, let me reclaim my time.

This gentleman is replying to the gentleman from New York, who changed the topic, who talked about beginning of life at conception, who talked about the broad base of the debate on this.

This gentleman is simply replying. The gentleman from New York brought up the question of whether or not we are debating the politics of morality on this issue.

I am simply suggesting that the real position of the proponents of these measures before us today is to go much further than rape and incest, but to have abortion on demand.

The gentleman did not, in fact, refute that point. The gentleman does not, in fact, support abortion on demand and the gentleman does believe that the taxpayers ought to fund abortion on demand.

My suggestion is that that agenda ought to be raised on the floor. I do not think the gentleman should take offense that the real truth of the debate is being brought to the floor. The gentleman should not be upset about that.

Mr. AUCOIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield again?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. AUCOIN. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me, but I do not think the gentleman has polled every one of the 216 Members who voted for rape and incest funding.

Mr. WALKER. No, I have not. I referred to people who spoke on the floor and I gave the gentleman the chance to say to me that he did not support abortion on demand.

Let me ask the gentleman directly. Does the gentleman support abortion on demand?

Mr. AUCOIN. I do not support abortion on demand, and no one is pro-abortion. The gentleman wants to put his views on the American people. I want the American people to choose. I think there is a difference between the two.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman tell me, does the gentleman support abortion in the first trimester?

Mr. AUCOIN. I support Roe versus Wade.

Mr. WALKER. So the gentleman supports Roe versus Wade.

Mr. AUCOIN. The gentleman supports having the victims of rape and incest not having to produce the rapist's child.

Mr. WALKER. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that I have the time. Is that not correct?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has the time, but the time has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. WALKER was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman was talking over me, and that is often his technique on the floor, but I would simply point out to the gentleman that the only point I am making is that he does support abortion on demand in Roe versus Wade and would in fact have the taxpayers pay for those abortions. That is his real agenda. We just do not want to make a mistake as to what the real agenda of the people who are proponents out here have.

So when the gentleman raises his issues against the cops, and so on, understand that his attempt to be against the cops learning about rapists is in fact a part of a more broad agenda on abortion, abortion on demand.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I think that this debate saddens me tremendously. We started this morning with a very eloquent speech by the gentleman from Poland, who moved us all very much speaking about how America had been his beacon for freedom, for liberty, and here we are watching people argue over taking away freedom and liberty from people.

How could this thing degenerate so rapidly?

Let us also think about the holiday we are about to embark upon, Thanksgiving. That was people coming here for religious liberty, people saying that America is a big enough country for more than one opinion, saying that we are going to reflect different religions, different individual views.

I listened to some of the sharp words, and I cringed. What has driven us to calling each other killers? That is a very loaded word.

I see statements in the paper, as I saw this morning from the White House, saying that they are concerned about rape and incest where women might use that excuse to get abortions. What is that saying about women?

I do not think women are ever going to label themselves as the victim of rape to get an abortion or subject to incest to get an abortion.

And for crying out loud, where was that moral judgment when they were looking at the S&L bailout? Where was that moral judgment when they were looking at the HUD scandal? Is it not interesting that we only want to focus on women.

We also were not elected to impose our personal views on the public. This is a very difficult issue, talking about rape and incest. Many Americans, unfortunately, have had experiences of having their homes broken into or their cars broken into. I hope no one ever has that experience, but they know how disorienting that can be.

Imagine, those of you who are advocating a women must act sanely within hours, imagine having your body broken into, and imagine having it broken into by a parent who you trusted. You are probably a child at that point. You probably do not even know what is transpiring, and to have the Federal Government say, "You must respond within hours because we don't want you cheating," for crying out loud, that is a terrible, terrible thing to say. I think that is a gross injustice.

We are also talking about a whole range of views. We are talking about the life of a woman that we know is here. No one is debating whether or not there is a real women involved in this. We know that as a given.

Then there is the potential for life that some want to insist is a right of life upon the moment of conception. There are religious beliefs that believe that. There are other people, such as my religious beliefs, who do not believe that. They believe that is a strong potential for human life, but you must balance those two things, and as the pregnancy goes along, it tilts more and more in favor of the fetus. That is what Roe versus Wade does. It permits the State to tilt more and more as they look at these two lives as they developed.

But why do you want to come down so hard on one side or the other? What we are saying here is not that anyone must have an abortion, and we should also say no one must not have an abortion if they have been subject to rape and incest and are poor.

To stand up and also say there will be private funds for this, I am offended by what some of the Contras did. If we said, "Oh, well, do it with private funding," if we said, "We don't want people paying taxes because they may be offended by this," I represent many people who are offended by some of the weapons we purchase, and yet we do not let them get away from paying taxes. So that is not the kind of country this is, where everybody picks the little particular thing they want and they are only going to fund that and nothing else.

This is America. "Give me your tired, your poor, your humble yearning to be free."

For crying out loud, why are we imposing different standards on them? Why are we undoing all the religious freedom and the personal liberties that people all over the world are trying to join us on?

We are seeing the Berlin Wall become a speed bump because people are getting over so fast, and yet we want to turn around and start dictating what people's personal lives are going to be, when they have been the victim of a terrible crime.

Now, I respect those who think differently than I do about this and say that all women's rights should be waived in that case, period. It is all over. Because she got herself raped, then she has no more rights. All right, fine. They are now going to move to the fetus. Fine. That is their position, but they should not impose that on other people, and I find this whole debate is very saddening.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, the previous speaker just spoke about how there were two lives involved in the abortion issue, and we thank her, I thank her for that admission. We are indeed talking about another life. And when she says potential life, we are talking about life with potential, not a potential life.

When we talk about imposing morality, one and a half million unborn children are having morality—in the sense of their own destruction—imposed upon them by the abortionists.

Earlier in this debate, the gentlewoman from California repeated an oft-repeated mistake with regard to the number of maternal deaths, citing the totally fallacious, inaccurate statement that 10,000 women per year were dying from illegal abortions.

I would just point out, and I would hope the Membership would pay attention to this, that Dr. C. Everett Kopp said on January 19 of this year on the CBS Morning Show that "in order to get Roe versus Wade, the number of back alley abortions had to be exaggerated 100-fold".

Dr. Bernard Nathanson, one of the founders, along with Betty Friedan and Lawrence Lader of the National Abortion Rights Action League, has said, "I have come to the agonizing conclusion that I presided over 60,000 deaths," gave up doing abortions. he did them himself. He ran a clinic. He was one of the founders of NARAL.

□ 1430

He has said, and I quote, "In NARAL, we spoke of maternal deaths, 5,000 to 10,000. I confess," he goes on to say, "that figure was totally false, made up."

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. No, I will not yield.

The Centers for Disease Control in 1972 reported 39 maternal deaths due to illegal abortions, and significantly since Roe versus Wade, there have been over 200 women who have died from legal abortions. That information is from the Centers for Disease Control. Look it up.

Mr. Chairman, the gentlewoman from California earlier said that she took exception to the use of the word "killing." Finally, we are getting down to what this debate is all about. It is about killing children. It is about killing unborn children.

If we look at the methods of abortion, Mr. Chairman, we see saline abortions, and that is what the other side defends, the injection of high concentrated salt solutions that literally burn and scald the baby. The baby swallows that fluid, a poison, and dies a painful death.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield, since he referred to me twice?

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I have the time, and I would ask that those seeking to interrupt would cease.

Mrs. BOXER. The gentleman referred to me twice, and I would think that he should at least yield to me.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield, and at this point the gentleman is recognized.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, the second type of abortion is a D and C abortion or suction abortion, two types; suction, that which is most often procured, literallly is a procedure where a loop-shaped knife called a curette attached to a hideous suction machine, 20 to 30 times more powerful than a vacuum cleaner, literally goes in and dismembers the unborn child.

Mr. Chairman, we need to focus on what happens in an abortion. "The Silent Scream," which Dr. Nathanson produced showing an actual abortion in process, which was quickly put under the table by those who would not like to face this realty, especially by some of our friends in the media, showed very graphically this child being literally ripped apart, limb by limb, legs, arms, torso, head, ripped apart by the abortionist. That is what we are talking about.

Another method of abortion is the D and E, literally crushing of the head done later in the term, and then the baby is removed piecemeal, and that is supposed to be liberty and freedom as one of the speakers said earlier.

Then there is also a late-term abortion called a hysterotomy. That type of abortion is really a C-section, where the baby is lifted out of the mother's womb kicking, usually breathing, and the cord is cut, and the baby is thrown away. Many of those children, interestingly enough, have actually survived the abortion and gone on to be adopted.

There are cases that have been reported by the Associated Press and by the Philadelphia Inquirer where they did a whole cover story on a thing called the dreaded complication. This is a reference to the children who survive these late-term abortions, usually as a result of this hysterotomy type of abortion, which is again literally a C-section where the child is, in this case, thrown into the trash bin.

That is what abortion is all about. It is violent. Nobody wants to face that, it seems, but it takes the life of a child.

Planned Parenthood, now the leading purveyor of abortions, and they do about 100,000 in their own clinics per year, and refer for approximately another 100,000, back in the mid-1960's said in their literature that abortion kills the life of a baby after it has begun. They were right then, and unfortunately, for political or other reasons, they have shifted their position.

Mr. Chairman, this issue is finally being looked at the way it ought to be.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, there is no question but that abortion is an important issue, but I urge my colleagues not to vote against this bill regardless of where they are on the abortion issue, because this bill is not about abortion.

This bill is about funding Head Start. It is about funding vocational rehabilitation. This bill is about being sure that education of handicapped Americans continues. It is not about abortion. It is about funding America's libraries, America's historically black colleges. Do not vote against this bill regardless of what your position is on abortion; vote for this bill so that we can get on with carrying out the important agenda which the Government, the Federal Government, has had for 200 years with regard to those parts of domestic America that we want to encourage.

Speaking of that, let me say a word about the fact that we are now in a time in American history when we are under this law called Gramm-Rudman, and sequestration is now in effect, meaning, in effect, that the Nation's pursestrings have been tied, and money for these important efforts which I mentioned at the beginning of my remarks is hemorrhaging away.

If sequestration in America continues and this money continues to be lost for these purposes, let me share with my colleagues just a few of the things that will happen, and I want, first, to get the attention of the Members, to postsecondary education, higher education, because I happen to chair that subcommittee. With regard to Pell grants, and we have all heard from our constituents about the importance of Pell grants, the Office of Management and Budget tells me that if sequestration stays in effect, 1 million college students are going to lose their Pell grants, 1 million. With regard to guaranteed student loans, now called Stafford student loans, named after the former Senator from Vermont, Senator Stafford, the Office of Management and Budget informs us that lenders are at this moment refusing to issue guaranteed student loans, Stafford student loans, because there is this great period of uncertainty because of Gramm-Rudman and sequestration. Students are being denied access to loans despite our intention and the intention of this legislation.

Graduate education programs and international programs stand to be cut by $4.5 million, and that negates important additions to foreign language and area studies, and it reduces an estimated 250 3- and 4-year fellowship awards.

Let me just say a word about two programs that are very close to Americans: Head Start. Head Start stands to be cut by $70 million under the Gramm-Rudman ax, and 26,000 low-income students, Head Start students, are going to suffer those consequences if sequestration stays in effect.

Finally, with regard to vocational rehabilitation, more than 20,000 disabled American citizens who depend upon vocational rehabilitation to become self-sufficient and gainfully employed will not receive assistance if sequestration remains in effect.

Mr. Chairman, my point is this: There are important things that are going on in America as we are discussing this legislation. Abortion and the right of women to have abortions is one of those issues, but this bill is not about that. This bill is about funding critical services that propel this Nation and allow us to continue to be No. 1 in education, No. 1 in research and important health matters, allow the citizens of this Nation to be the most educated, generous, concerned citizens in all the world.

I ask the Members not to prevent that continued march forward. Do not vote "no" on this bill; vote "yes."

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, we by our Constitution and other enabling documents by which we established this Government, guarantee to the citizens of this Nation the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

My good friend and colleague, the gentleman from Montana, just outlined many things in this bill that clearly exist in this bill, by the judgment of some people, that it is our responsibility as a government to provide these things to young people in particular in the pursuit of happiness and the pursuit of their liberty. He also makes a point that he does not care to see all of these good things, by his judgment that we have provided in this bill, endangered by a quarrel over this provision.

The provision that we are talking about is a provision that, I think, perhaps many of us would agree should not be included in this bill. The provision is one that allows the use of the taxpayers' dollar to deny life to the unborn child, and in so doing makes the other two guarantees meaningless. The point is this is a spending bill, Mr. Chairman, and what we ought to be talking about is what are the responsibilities of Congress? What must we exercise by way of responsibilities in the expenditure of the taxpayers' money?

The fact is that for many of us, life does begin at conception. Let me say, many years ago when I was a professor and could enjoy the luxury of dealing with things only as academic exercises and had no responsibility for the consequences of my ideas, I believed, because it was simple and convenient and seemed so sophisticated, that life began at the end of the first trimester.

Then unhappily in a discussion with my wife and daughter I stumbled onto the question, if life begins at the end of the first trimester, then why does it not begin the day before? I had no answer. I backed myself up 90 days without an answer.

For me, and for many Members on this side of the issue, we cannot escape this conclusion.

Now, one may agree with us, one may disagree with us. One may tell us it is sophisticated or it is unsophisticated. But I will tell Members, their knowledge on that matter is not superior to ours, and their morality is no more superior than their knowledge.

For us it is a heartfelt belief that life begins at conception. Because we believe that, we believe it is our duty as we exercise our responsibilities over the expenditure of the taxpayers' money, to see to it that money is not used to deny life to an innocent person. It is our duty to protect that innocent child from the unilateral decision of the potential mother to commit that child to death.

That is why we are here, and why we feel so strongly about it. I think I can safely confess on behalf of a lot of us, that we share along with the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] the belief that we ought not to and would rather not be discussing this issue in this bill. I for one would rather not be discussing it any time. But duty compels us, if we believe that is a child, and an innocent child at that, to do what we can to protect its innocent life.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard a lot about deception, about fraud. The gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] talked about all we want to do to help young people learn to think critically, learn to separate fact from fiction, learn to intelligently cope with the world in which we live.

We know from Dr. Koop that statistical data has been manufactured around this issue. The facts are very elusive and most often exist only by assertion.

So it was with this person we know as Jane Roe. Jane Roe's case began with the assertion, known to be false by Jane Roe and by her attorney, an officer of the court, to be false, that she had been raped.

That false assertion carried through the courts and for 2 years thereafter. The most famous rape case in my lifetime was a false assertion of rape. About 2 years after the case Jane Roe confessed it was not true. That is a dastardly dissservice to the true victims of rape, to misrepresent the case through the Supreme Court.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, we have serving as chairman of the full Committee on Appropriations our friend and colleague from the State of Mississippi, JAMIE WHITTEN. As the chairman and I and all the members of this committee know, he is the dean of the Congress, House and Senate, elected in the year 1941.

When reelected again next year and after serving 6 or 7 months, the gentleman will then have the alltime record as far as the House of Representatives is concerned.

I served with Carl Vinson of Georgia, who established the record of 50 years and 4 months. On the other side we had Carl Hayden serving a longer period of time, but both in the House and in the Senate.

Mr. Chairman, since March 4, 1789, we have had 11,218 Members serve in both the House and the Senate. Six hundred ninety of those Members also served in the Senate.

I point this out, Mr. Chairman, because at this time my friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts, SILVIO CONTE, and I and all of the other members of the subcommittee want to thank our chairman, JAMIE WHITTEN. He knows the importance of this bill. We call on him from time to time every year to assist us. He is always for us.

The gentleman is not only chairman of the full committee, he serves on all 13 subcommittees. No Member has ever served in this Congress that is more interested in education and in health than my friend and my chairman, the gentleman from Mississippi, JAMIE WHITTEN.

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, it is very difficult to follow the appropriate and eloquent speech of the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. NATCHER], the chairman of the subcommittee, about the dean of the Congress, for whom we all have such affection and respect. I want to associate myself with the remarks of the chairman. I know they are shared by every Member of this body on both sides of the aisle.

Mr. Chairman, I do want to return for the amount of time I have remaining in my remarks to the extraordinarily important issue of abortion, that unfortunately will not be included in this legislation because those Members who believe so deeply on the prochoice side of the equation can count votes, and we understand that we do not have the votes to override a Presidential veto on this bill.

I would like to make a couple of brief points with regard to this issue. Although it is not going to be specifically in the language before the President the second time around, I think that it is an issue that will not abate in importance, and in fact will be more and more important as the months and years unfold.

I thought that the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] in her remarks several speakers ago made the appropriate contrast that is so critical to those of us who are on the floor today, when earlier this morning we were given one of the rare treats that a Member of this body has, when for the third time in the history of this Nation in a joint session of Congress we heard the inspiring remarks of a civilian, somebody who was not a formal head of state.

His remarks were the most eloquent testimony that we could have wished to hear with regard to the march toward freedom, a march that is irreversible, and a march that the speaker earlier today symbolized as eloquently as any other person does.

Those remarks to a considerable extent reflect what is occurring around us every single day when we see the crumbling of the Berlin Wall, when we see a radical transformation in the Soviet Union and in Eastern Europe, and when we see the irreversible tide of human rights and human liberty.

When we contrast that movement with the sad reality that we put before the President of the United States, a very modest statement, a very limited amendment to a very important bill, that talked about public funding of abortion in the case of rape and incest, that went to the most basic human freedoms that Americans should be expected to enjoy, and that wealthy Americans will be able to enjoy, but that poor American women will be deprived of because of the callous veto that sends this bill back before us today.

I think the contrast before us in terms of human rights and in terms of individual freedom is striking and is tragic. Unfortunately, we do not have the votes, and therefore we will not be seeking futilely to obtain 289 votes when we do not have them. At the bottom line, Mr. Chairman, is the following:

Last Sunday we saw from sea to shining sea, from coast to coast in this country, from the East to the West, from the North to the South, testimony to the support that exists throughout this country. Not just for the limited language that was vetoed by the President of the United States, but for Roe versus Wade and for the appropriate standards that this country has been guided by, at least for the course of the past 16 years.

□ 1450

And if we do not have the votes on the floor of this body, we therefore have no choice but to go to my home city of Los Angeles, to the streets of Washington, DC, as occurred last weekend when hundreds of thousands of people from communities throughout this country where so many people have expressed so strongly the depth of their concern on this issue.

I have no doubt that the attitudes on both sides are equally sincerely held. That is not an issue. Nobody is challenging the sincerity, nobody is challenging the integrity of the people on the other side of this. But I do believe that when I learned in Los Angeles last weekend, as I did, that 5,000 Republican women have come together to start an organization called Republicans for Choice, which is an organization that has only been around now for a matter of days but signed up 5,000 Republican women in Los Angeles alone in the course of the last several days, there is a groundswell of opinion in this country, Mr. Chairman, that says if President Bush will not sign a bill that calls for the most modest opening for public funding for rape and incest, then we have no choice but to continue to bring this issue to the people. That is the route that we will have to take.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEVINE] has expired.

(On request of Mr. SMITH of New Jersey and by unanimous consent, Mr. LEVINE of California was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEVINE of California. I would be happy to yield, and I would like to ask the gentleman a question during the minute as well.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman mentioned, I would say to my friend, appropriate standards. Just recently in the Pennsylvania Legislature a law, or a pending law, was passed, a proposal providing a restriction on third-trimester abortions, in other words, after the first 6 months. NARAL and the abortion lobby vigorously opposed it. It also provided for informed consent and there were also some other notification provisions in there for parents.

Would the gentleman and would the so-called prochoice side accept that kind of modest restriction?

Mr. LEVINE of California. I would say to the gentleman that that is as I understand the language in Pennsylvania very similar to what part of Roe versus Wade contains. And if that is the case, the Roe versus Wade standard has been the standard that has prevailed in this country for the past 16 years.

I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Does the gentleman agree with the Pennsylvania standard?

Mr. LEVINE of California. If I could take the second half of this minute simply to ask the gentleman: I did not understand his remarks in the context of a position I understand that a number of his colleagues are taking. I have a Los Angeles Times story quoting my distinguished colleague from California, Mr. DORNAN, as supporting or at least agreeing, "to live with," "I can live with this," the 48-hour standard that was suggested. In light of the remarks of the gentleman from New Jersey, does the gentleman also support or can he live with the 48-hour standard?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEVINE] has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. LEVINE of California was allowed to proceed for 30 additional seconds.)

Mr. LEVINE of California. I get this additional time in order to ask the gentleman to answer the question.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I would be happy to answer the question.

I just note that first of all the gentleman did not answer my question. Would he support that Pennsylvania statute? Roe versus Wade provided an open-door policy for abortion on demand for all 9 months of pregnancy. That is the situation. There are about 5,000 abortions in the third trimester per year.

Mr. LEVINE of California. I would suggest to the gentleman that he is misreading Roe versus Wade. I would suggest the gentleman reread Roe versus Wade. This is not an actual reading of Roe versus Wade.

Could the gentleman answer my question?

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. It clearly is an accurate reading, and that is why we need statutes like the Pennsylvania statute, which is the only one of its kind in this country.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEVINE] has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. LEVINE of California was allowed to proceed for 15 additional seconds.)

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Chairman, I take this time to get an answer to my question.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. We have looked at language that would—and I know Mr. CONTE and others were thinking about the possibility of offering something along these lines—while it is not our preferred position, it may unfortunately result in some loss of life, a 48-hour standard certainly is preferable to the very open-ended language that was offered by Congresswoman BOXER.

Mr. LEVINE of California. This is absolutely a fascinating, if not shocking, contradiction from the rhetoric that we have been hearing throughout this debate.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. No, it is not. It is my intention, within the parameters of what is double and achievable, to protect human life to the maximum extent possible. There is no contradiction.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise in favor of the bill.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Kentucky and I have a very difficult job. We are here to pass an appropriation bill amounting to $157 billion for some of the most important programs affecting this country of ours. Yet we have to sit here and listen to the debate. You would not know that there is $157 billion on the table here today.

We are trying to pass a bill, a bill that helps people. But because of issues like this, BILL NATCHER and I, who ought to be looked upon as Santa Claus, are coming out looking like boogeymen. I will say this, I said it before and I will say it again, we have got to figure out a way to keep extraneous issues off the appropriation bills. We should make a list of these issues as they come up, set them aside, and take them up separately during 1 week.

The same people who have spoken in this debate have been in it now time and time again. You look at the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, the same people on both sides of the issue.

Mr. Chairman, give them a week of their own and let them go after each other on these issues.

The Democrats over there keep talking about the will of the majority, like my good friend from Oregon, Mr. AUCOIN. If he wants to do justice to this issue, to this House and to the Appropriations Committee—he is a young guy, someday he will be a leader there—what he ought to do is get the Democrats to change the rules of the House at the beginning of the session.

You have 259 people over there. At the beginning of the session change the rules to say, "No more extraneous matters in an appropriation bill." And then everyone on both sides could have a separate bill and go after each other. But, let us pass this bill.

I hope everybody will be brief so that the gentleman from Kentucky and I and the committee can go to conference and try to get this bill done.

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I have been here for the last 2 hours. I do not want to prolong this debate, but I do want to take just a moment.

First, to say that we have passed this bill. This bill passed both Houses. It was sent to the President.

The reason we are discussing this is this is the reason why he vetoed it.

We have to say that we know we are not going to override that veto and we are giving up on it. We recognize that this is one of the most important bills before the House, that it is 46 percent of the budget and we want it to pass.

We know that we cannot sustain a veto. We could not even yesterday keep a bill on the floor for $15 million to help poor people, poor women in the world who are dying because they are denied family planning information.

But there is just one thing I need to say. First, I want to say to the gentleman from Massachusetts that that is a wonderful idea. I would be happy to support it.

The second thing is that I am very sad about this whole debate today because it all revolves around women, again.

The question is: Are they smart enough to know what they are doing? Can we trust them to do the right thing?

I have been hearing this debate all, one way or another, during my entire life. It started as a young woman in Kentucky, first, a disappointment not to be a son; hearing my gentle Southern mother always say to me, "I am partial to my boys," being told what school I could go to, whether I could or could not go to law school. Was I eligible to be a doctor? No, I was not.

But now we have come down to the point here in this century where women have made some gains, where the debate is, once again, whether or not women are going to lie.

Are they going to want to take on the stigma of being rape and incest victims so that they can get some kind of free medical attention from the Government? After they have been violated, after a crime has been perpetrated against them, after this Government cannot protect them from the crime, we are going to say to them, "We really don't trust you with it, we are going to have to have somebody else come in and certify to that fact. And by the way, lady, we want to do it pretty quick."

Well, women of my age have pretty strong memories about what it was like. I do not know how many women died. I knew some of them.

I remember what the talk was about in those days. The phrase was, "She got herself in trouble." Remember that? Some of you over there might.

Remember when she used to get herself in trouble and how she could get herself out of it any way she could? She could not have a job, she could not keep a job, could not stay in school. She was a disgrace to everybody. Where else could she go but to the back alley? Yes, a number of them died.

When we had a march here last spring, one woman that will always be in my memory came down from Vermont, she was 83 years old, and she said, "I came down here because of Bernice." Bernice, who died in 1929, that woman never forgot it.

Last spring was the first opportunity she had to come down here and to stand up for Bernice.

I remember, as I am sure you do, that there was one woman Member of Congress who took some 47 years to be able to discuss what had happened to her.

Can we not have some compassion and understanding here? Can we not understand that for the women of this country who are poor and who are victimized by crime, that we should give them all the comfort and all the help that we can, and not a litmus test as to whether or not they have lied?

□ 1500

Please, please, I say to the Members, let us show some compassion. Rape and incest victims have suffered enough. We will now go ahead and pass our education bill because it is important. But, believe me, the people of America do not want us making that choice for them here on the floor of this House.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mrs. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. I yield to the gentlewoman from New York.

Ms. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Chairman, I would just like to say to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts, that there are others of our colleagues who do not believe that the poor women who are victims of rape and incest should have the right to have an abortion. I would just like to say that if we are allocating $157 billion to help people, we also are going to have to be ready to allocate the additional billions of dollars to take care of those families and children who are going to be brought into this world. To me, that is a very important responsibility.

If we are going to deny a poor woman the right to move forward with her job, to get a job, to get out there and work and be a part of our productive society, then we have to be able to sustain that family and in particular that child, to give them a right to move forward with their lives.

The tides are turning, and I am hoping that with prochoice a winning issue, we can bring additional colleagues into this House who will give that woman an opportunity to control her life.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am sorry that the gentlewoman from New York did not even listen to one word I said. All I said was that the Democrats are in control at the beginning of the year, and they should change the rules so they do not put these issues on the Labor, HHS, and Education bill managed by BILL NATCHER and SIL CONTE. That is all I said.

Mr. Chairman, I would ask the gentlewoman to listen to me the next time.

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I was going to let the debate go by today in hopes that we could move this bill back to conference and try to reach some sort of civilized conclusion to this issue so we could go home and thank God for the bounty of this country at Thanksgiving and then celebrate Hanukkah and the birth of Jesus Christ. But I have heard the name of Lech Walesa mentioned three times by the proabortion side.

Let me advise the Members of something I happen to know personally. This man is very devout, and he happens to be prolife. He is a friend of the Pope in Rome, John Paul II. He owes his safety not only to President Reagan, who sent President Bush to Poland twice, but to the Holy Father in Rome. When Lech Walesa quoted the Pope this morning from that lofty position, as he put it, and said freedom is not just something to have and to use, it is something to be fought for, he was talking about the freedom of life also for the innocent unborn.

When he continued the Pope's words and said, "One must use freedom to bring with it personal life as well as the life of the nation," he was paying homage to a world religious leader who feels that you destroy a nation when you kill 1,600,000 of its innocent unborn in their mothers' wombs.

Mr. Chairman, I am just setting the record straight on Lech Walesa. Please, let us have no provocations today. Let us get this legislation to committee.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. MCHUGH) having assumed the chair, Mr. SHARP, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 3566) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes, had directed him to report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1990

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3610) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes; and pending that motion, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate be limited to not to exceed 30 minutes, the time to be equally divided and controlled by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. GALLO] and myself.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair designates the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER] as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole and requests the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NAGLE] to assume the chair temporarily.

□ 1507

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 3610, with Mr. NAGLE (Chairman pro tempore) in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON] will be recognized for 15 minutes, and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE] will be recognized for 15 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON].

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 3610, the District of Columbia appropriations bill, has only two changes from the bill (H.R. 3026) that was vetoed by the President. One change concerns abortions, and it is addressed on page 28 of the bill under section 117.

The other change is in the report and concerns reprogramming of Federal funds on a dollar-for-dollar match with local funds for the newly established Commision on Budget and Financial Priorities.

Mr. Chairman, regarding abortions, the D.C. bill mirrors that language in the Labor-HHS bill and restricts the use of Federal funds for abortions except to save the life of the mother. As I mentioned a moment ago, this is in section 117 on page 28 of the bill that is before us. The language does not place any restrictions on so-called local funds—those revenues raised by the city through local taxes and fees which total $2.9 billion or 84 percent of the District's $3.5 billion budget.

Mr. Chairman, this language is consistent with court decisions, including the recent Webster decision, which allow local jurisdictions to determine their own abortion regulations and the methods for paying for those abortions.

Regarding the Commission on Budget and Financial Priorities, the report language directs the District government to reprogram to the Commission up to a million dollars in previously appropriated Federal funds under the condition that those Federal funds are matched dollar for dollar with local funds. The Commission was established to prepare a 5-year comprehensive plan of the District's financial situation and to examine the size and structure of the District's work force and to compare the cost and benefits of major city agencies. The schedule calls for the Commission to complete its work no later than July 1990.

Mr. Chairman, it is our intent in next year's bill to replace these Federal funds.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to vote "aye" on this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I have no requests for time, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this is the same bill that was vetoed. It is changed now, and I hope that we pass it here today and send it to conference.

Mr. GALLO. Mr. Chairman, the District of Columbia appropriations bill provides Federal budget authority that is under our 302(b) allocation. We need to keep in mind the fact that over 80 percent of the appropratrions in this bill are funded by local District taxes and fees.

H.R. 3610 allocates almost $32 million that will be used to combat the terrible effect that substances like crack and cocaine have on the citizens of this city—users and nonusers alike.

The funds appropriated will enable the District to hire more than 1,000 new police officers and bring the Metropolitan Police Department back to the level of strength it had in the 1970's.

These funds will expand the court system and provide for security of judges and staff.

This bill also considers the drug user, as well as the potential user and the innocent victims of drug abuses.

Funds are provided to establish after-school programs that will give children safe places to spend their out-of-school hours and will give them constructive alternatives to street life.

In addition the bill provides an intervention program for a number of high-risk students and funds to locate and treat the appalling number of pregnant women who abuse drugs.

We must combat the striking increase in the number of babies who are born addicted to crack and cocaine who are abandoned by their mothers and fathers.

This bill, dealing mainly with locally raised funds, is not the proper vehicle to debate the issue of abortion and I urge my colleagues—Democrats and Republicans alike—and I urge my President, not to hold hostage the people of the District of Columbia.

Last night, the 391st person died a violent death in our Nation's Capital. Most of these deaths are due to the drug epidemic.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to vote to pass this bill so that the people of the District can get on with their lives.

I urge that we end our delay, so that the District government can hire the needed police and set up the after-school programs, as well as provide help for those babies born abandoned and addicted to crack and cocaine.

Mr. Chairman, I believe this is a responsible bill and I urge its passage and reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I have no requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3610

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes, namely:

FEDERAL PAYMENT TO THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

For payment to the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, $430,500,000: Provided, That none of these funds shall be made available to the District of Columbia until the number of full-time uniformed officers in permanent positions in the Metropolitan Police Department is at least 3,880, excluding any such officer appointed after August 19, 1982, under qualification standards other than those in effect on such date.

FEDERAL PAYMENT FOR WATER AND SEWER SERVICES

For payment to the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, in lieu of reimbursement for charges for water and water services and sanitary sewer services furnished to facilities of the United States Government, $8,685,000, as authorized by the Act of May 18, 1954, as amended (D.C. Code, secs. 43-1552 and 43-1612).

FEDERAL CONTRIBUTION TO RETIREMENT FUNDS

For the Federal contribution to the Police Officers and Fire Fighters', Teachers', and Judges' Retirement Funds, as authorized by the District of Columbia Retirement Reform Act, approved November 17, 1979

(93 Stat. 866; Public Law 96-122), $52,070,000.

TRANSITIONAL PAYMENT FOR SAINT ELIZABETHS HOSPITAL

For a Federal contribution to the District of Columbia, as authorized by the Saint Elizabeths Hospital and District of Columbia Mental Health Services Act, approved November 8, 1984 (98 Stat. 3369; Public Law 98-621), $15,000,000.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE INITIATIVE

For an additional amount for the design and construction of a prison within the District of Columbia, $20,300,000 to become available October 1, 1990: Provided, That these funds shall remain in the United States Treasury and shall be transferred to the District of Columbia government only to the extent that outstanding obligations are due and payable to entities other than agencies and organizations of the District of Columbia government, and payments to such agencies and organizations may be made only in reimbursement for amounts actually expended in furtherance of the design and construction of the prison.

The $50,000,000 previously appropriated under "Criminal Justice Initiative" for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1986, September 30, 1987, and September 30, 1989, for the design and construction of a prison within the District of Columbia shall remain in the United States Treasury and shall be transferred to the District of Columbia government only to the extent that outstanding obligations are due and payable to entities other than agencies and organizations of the District of Columbia government, and payments to such agencies and organizations may be made only in reimbursement for amounts actually expended in furtherance of the design and construction of the prison: Provided, That construction may not commence unless access and parking for construction vehicles are provided solely at a location other than city streets: Provided further, That District officials meet monthly with neighborhood representatives to inform them of current plans and discuss problems: Provided further, That the District of Columbia shall operate and maintain a free, 24-hour telephone information service whereby residents of the area surrounding the new prison, can promptly obtain information from District officials on all disturbances at the prison, including escapes, fires, riots, and similar incidents: Provided further, That the District of Columbia shall also take steps to publicize the availability of that service among the residents of the area surrounding the new prison.

DRUG EMERGENCY

For a Federal contribution to the District of Columbia, $31,772,000, to remain available until expended, to close open air drug markets, increase police visibility, and provide for speedier court processing of drug-related violent cases.

DIVISION OF EXPENSES

The following amounts are appropriated for the District of Columbia for the current fiscal year out of the general fund of the District of Columbia, except as otherwise specifically provided.

GOVERNMENTAL DIRECTION AND SUPPORT

Governmental direction and support, $112,971,000: Provided, That not to exceed $2,500 for the Mayor, $2,500 for the Chairman of the Council of the District of Columbia, and $2,500 for the City Administrator shall be available from this appropriation for expenditures for official purposes: Provided further, That any program fees collected from the issuance of debt shall be available for the payment of expenses of the debt management program of the District of Columbia: Provided further, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, there is hereby appropriated $6,726,000 to pay legal, management, investment, and other fees and administrative expenses of the District of Columbia Retirement Board, of which $818,000 shall be derived from the general fund and not to exceed $5,908,000 shall be derived from the earnings of the applicable retirement funds: Provided further, That the District of Columbia Retirement Board shall provide to the Congress and to the Council of the District of Columbia a quarterly report of the allocations of charges by fund and of expenditures of all funds: Provided further, That the District of Columbia Retirement Board shall provide the Mayor, for transmittal to the Council of the District of Columbia, an item accounting of the planned use of appropriated funds in time for each annual budget submission and the actual use of such funds in time for each annual audited financial report: Provided further, That an additional $150,000 out of local funds shall remain available until expended, to close open air drug markets, increase police visibility, and provide for speedier court processing of drug-related violent cases: Provided further, That no part of these funds shall be used for lobbying to support or defeat legislation pending before Congress or any State legislature.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND REGULATION

Economic development and regulation, $137,913,000: Provided, That the District of Columbia Housing Finance Agency, established by section 201 of the District of Columbia Housing Finance Agency Act, effective March 3, 1979 (D.C. Law 2-135; D.C. Code, sec. 45-2111), based upon its capability of repayments as determined each year by the Council of the District of Columbia from the Agency's annual audited financial statements to the Council of the District of Columbia, shall repay to the general fund an amount equal to the appropriated administrative costs plus interest at a rate of four percent per annum for a term of 15 years, with a deferral of payments for the first three years: Provided further, That notwithstanding the foregoing provision, the obligation to repay all or part of the amounts due shall be subject to the rights of the owners of any bonds or notes issued by the Agency and shall be repaid to the District of Columbia government only from available operating revenues of the Agency that are in excess of the amounts required for debt service, reserve funds, and operating expenses: Provided further, That upon commencement of the debt service payments, such payments shall be deposited into the general fund of the District of Columbia: Provided further, That up to $275,000 within the 15 percent set-aside for special programs within the Tenant Assistance Program shall be targeted for the single-room occupancy initiative.

PUBLIC SAFETY AND JUSTICE

Public safety and justice, including purchase of 130 passenger-carrying vehicles for replacement only for police-type use and 29 additional passenger-carrying vehicles for fire-type use without regard to the general purchase price limitation for the current fiscal year, $861,341,000, of which $150,000 shall be derived by transfer from "Governmental Direction and Support": Provided, That the Metropolitan Police Department is authorized to replace not to exceed 25 passenger-carrying vehicles and the Fire Department of the District of Columbia is authorized to replace not to exceed five passenger-carrying vehicles annually whenever the cost of repair to any damaged vehicle exceeds three-fourths of the cost of the replacement: Provided further, That not to exceed $500,000 shall be available from this appropriation for the Chief of Police for the prevention and detection of crime: Provided further, That not to exceed $26,000 shall be available solely for an accreditation study of the Metropolitan Police Department by a recognized law enforcement accreditation organization: Provided further, That funds appropriated for expenses under the District of Columbia Criminal Justice Act, approved September 3, 1974 (88 Stat. 1090; Public Law 93-412; D.C. Code, sec. 11-2601 et seq.), for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, shall be available for obligations incurred under that Act in each fiscal year since inception in fiscal year 1975: Provided further, That funds appropriated for expenses under the District of Columbia Neglect Representation Equity Act of 1984, effective March 13, 1985 (D.C. Law 5-129; D.C. Code, sec. 16-2304), for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, shall be available for obligations incurred under that Act in each fiscal year since inception in fiscal year 1985: Provided further, That $50,000 of any appropriation available to the District of Columbia may be used to match financial contributions from the Department of Defense to the District of Columbia Office of Emergency Preparedness for the purchase of civil defense equipment and supplies approved by the Department of Defense, when authorized by the Mayor: Provided further, That not to exceed $1,500 for the Chief Judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, $1,500 for the Chief Judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, and $1,500 for the Executive Officer of the District of Columbia Courts shall be available from this appropriation for official purposes: Provided further, That the District of Columbia shall operate and maintain a free, 24-hour telephone information service whereby residents of the area surrounding Lorton prison in Fairfax County, Virginia, can promptly obtain information from District of Columbia government officials on all disturbances at the prison, including escapes, fires, riots, and similar incidents: Provided further, That the District of Columbia government shall also take steps to publicize the availability of that service among the residents of the area surrounding the Lorton prison: Provided further, That not to exceed $100,000 of this appropriation shall be used to reimburse Fairfax County, Virginia, and Prince William County, Virginia, for expenses incurred by the counties during fiscal year 1990 in relation to the Lorton prison complex. Such reimbursements shall be paid in all instances in which the District requests the counties to provide police, fire, rescue, and related services to help deal with escapes, riots, and similar disturbances involving the prison: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated by this Act may be used to implement any plan that includes the closing of Engine Company 3, located at 439 New Jersey Avenue, Northwest: Provided further, That the staffing levels of each two-piece engine company within the Fire Department shall be maintained in accordance with the provisions of article III, section 18 of the Fire Department Rules and Regulations as then in effect: Provided further, That none of the funds provided in this Act may be used to implement District of Columbia Board of Parole notice of emergency and proposed rulemaking as filed with the District of Columbia Register July 25, 1986: Provided further, That the Mayor shall reimburse the District of Columbia National Guard for expenses incurred in connection with services which are performed in emergencies by the National Guard in a militia status and which are requested by the Mayor, in amounts that shall be jointly determined and certified as due and payable for these services by the Mayor and the Commanding General of the District of Columbia National Guard: Provided further, That such sums as may be necessary for reimbursements to the District of Columbia National Guard under the preceding proviso shall be available from this appropriation, and their availability shall be deemed as constituting payment in advance for the emergency services involved: Provided further, That $17,630,000 for the Metropolitan Police Department and $2,600,000 for the District of Columbia Superior Court shall remain available until expended: Provided further, That of funds provided to the Department of Corrections $36,311,000 shall be for the expense of housing D.C. Code violators in Federal Bureau of Prisons facilities, including $5,064,000 of payments previously forgiven.

PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM

Public education system, including the development of national defense education programs, $691,120,000, to be allocated as follows: $502,346,000 for the public schools of the District of Columbia; $86,300,000 for the District of Columbia Teachers' Retirement Fund; $76,088,000 for the University of the District of Columbia; $18,849,000 for the Public Library; $3,527,000 for the Commission on the Arts and Humanities; $3,440,000 for the District of Columbia School of Law; and $570,000 for the Education Licensure Commission: Provided, That the public schools of the District of Columbia are authorized to accept not to exceed 31 motor vehicles for exclusive use in the driver education program: Provided further, That not to exceed $2,500 for the Superintendent of Schools, $2,500 for the President of the University of the District of Columbia, and $2,000 for the Public Librarian shall be available from this appropriation for expenditures for official purposes: Provided further, That this appropriation shall not be available to subsidize the education of nonresidents of the District of Columbia at the University of the District of Columbia, unless the Board of Trustees of the University of the District of Columbia adopts, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, a tuition rate schedule that will establish the tuition rate for nonresident students at a level no lower than the nonresident tuition rate charged at comparable public institutions of higher education in the metropolitan area: Provided further, That funds provided under this head in Public Law 100-202 (101 Stat. 1329-94) to match private contributions to the District of Columbia Public Schools Foundation shall be available until September 30, 1990.

HUMAN SUPPORT SERVICES

Human support services, $827,918,000: Provided, That $18,611,000 of this appropriation, to remain available until expended, shall be available solely for District of Columbia employees' disability compensation: Provided further, That of the funds provided for the D.C. General Hospital subsidy, $646,000 shall be used to provide health care to homeless persons.

PUBLIC WORKS

Public works, including rental of one passenger-carrying vehicle for use by the Mayor and three passenger-carrying vehicles for use by the Council of the District of Columbia and purchase of passenger-carrying vehicles for replacement only, $223,898,000, of which not to exceed $3,600,000 shall be available for the School Transit Subsidy: Provided, That this appropriation shall not be available for collecting ashes or miscellaneous refuse from hotels and places of business.

WASHINGTON CONVENTION CENTER FUND

For the Washington Convention Center Fund, $7,874,000: Provided, That the Convention Center Board of Directors, established by section 3 of the Washington Convention Center Management Act of 1979, effective November 3, 1979 (D.C. Law 3-36; D.C. Code, sec. 9-602), shall reimburse the Auditor of the District of Columbia for all reasonable costs for performance of the annual Convention Center audit.

REPAYMENT OF LOANS AND INTEREST

For reimbursement to the United States of funds loaned in compliance with An Act to provide for the establishment of a modern, adequate, and efficient hospital center in the District of Columbia, approved August 7, 1946 (60 Stat. 896; Public Law 79-648); section 1 of An Act to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to borrow funds for capital improvement programs and to amend provisions of law relating to Federal Government participation in meeting costs of maintaining the Nation's Capital City, approved June 6, 1958 (72 Stat. 183; Public Law 85-451; D.C. Code, sec. 9-219); section 4 of An Act to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to plan, construct, operate, and maintain a sanitary sewer to connect the Dulles International Airport with the District of Columbia system, approved June 12, 1960 (74 Stat. 211; Public Law 86-515); section 723 of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act, approved December 24, 1973 (87 Stat. 821; Public Law 93-198; D.C. Code, sec. 47-321, note); and section 743(f) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act Amendments, approved October 13, 1977 (91 Stat. 1156; Public Law 95-131; D.C. Code, sec. 9-219, note), including interest as required thereby, $251,474,000.

REPAYMENT OF GENERAL FUND DEFICIT

For the purpose of reducing the $218,872,000 general fund accumulated deficit as of September 30, 1988, $20,000,000, of which not less than $442,000 shall be funded and apportioned by the Mayor from amounts otherwise available to the District of Columbia government (including amounts appropriated by this Act or revenues otherwise available, or both): Provided, That if the Federal payment to the District of Columbia for fiscal year 1990 is reduced pursuant to an order issued by the President under section 252 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-177, approved December 12, 1985), as amended, the percentage (if any) by which the $20,000,000 set aside for repayment of the general fund accumulated deficit under this appropriation title is reduced as a consequence shall not exceed the percentage by which the Federal payment is reduced pursuant to such order: Provided further, That all net revenue the District of Columbia government may collect as a result of the District of Columbia government's pending appeal in the consolidated case of U.S. Sprint Communications, et al. v. District of Columbia et al., CA 10080-87 (court order filed November 14, 1988), shall be applied solely to the repayment of the general fund accumulated deficit.

agement System: Provided further, That $20,300,000 of the $134,650,000 shall be available solely for the Correctional Treatment Facility to be constructed in the District of Columbia which is financed with Federal funds appropriated to the District of Columbia for fiscal year 1991: Provided further, That $547,000 for the Department of Recreation and $3,080,000 for the Department of Public Works for pay-as-you-go capital projects shall be financed from general fund operating revenues: Provided further, That all funds provided by this appropriation title shall be available only for the specific projects and purposes intended: Provided further, That notwithstanding the foregoing, all authorizations for capital outlay projects, except those projects covered by the first sentence of section 23(a) of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1968, approved August 23, 1968 (82 Stat. 827; Public Law 90-495; D.C. Code, sec. 7-134, note), for which funds are provided by this appropriation title, shall expire on September 30, 1991, except authorizations for projects as to which funds have been obligated in whole or in part prior to September 30, 1991: Provided further, That upon expiration of any such project authorization the funds provided herein for the project shall lapse.

WATER AND SEWER ENTERPRISE FUND

For the Water and Sewer Enterprise Fund, $199,382,000, of which $34,964,000 shall be apportioned and payable to the debt service fund for repayment of loans and interest incurred for capital improvement projects.

For construction projects, $29,700,000, as authorized by an Act authorizing the laying of water mains and service sewers in the District of Columbia, the levying of assessments therefor, and for other purposes, approved April 22, 1904 (33 Stat. 244; Public Law 58-140; D.C. Code, sec. 43-1512 et seq.): Provided, That the requirements and restrictions which are applicable to general fund capital improvement projects and are set forth in this Act under the Capital Outlay appropriation title shall apply to projects approved under this appropriation title: Provided further, That of the $27,085,000 in water and sewer enterprise fund operating revenues for pay-as-you-go capital projects, $1,200,000 shall fund new authority in the fiscal year 1990 capital budget and $25,885,000 shall fund prior year capital budget authority.

LOTTERY AND CHARITABLE GAMES ENTERPRISE FUND

For the Lottery and Charitable Games Enterprise Fund, established by the District of Columbia Appropriation Act for fiscal year 1982, approved December 4, 1981, (95 Stat. 1174, 1175; Public Law 97-91), as amended, for the purpose of implementing the Law to Legalize Lotteries, Daily Numbers Games, and Bingo and Raffles for Charitable Purposes in the District of Columbia, effective March 10, 1981 (D.C. Law 3-172; D.C. Code, secs. 2-2501 et seq. and 22-1516 et seq.), $8,600,000, to be derived from non-Federal District of Columbia revenues: Provided, That the District of Columbia shall identify the sources of funding for this appropriation title from its own locally-generated revenues: Provided further, That no revenues from Federal sources shall be used to support the operations or activities of the Lottery and Charitable Games Control Board.

CABLE TELEVISION ENTERPRISE FUND

For the Cable Television Enterprise Fund, established by the Cable Television Communications Act of 1981, effective October 22, 1983 (D.C. Law 5-36; D.C. Code, sec. 43-1801 et seq.), $1,600,000.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. The expenditure of any appropriation under this Act for any consulting service through procurement contract, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 3109, shall be limited to those contracts where such expenditures are a matter of public record and available for public inspection, except where otherwise provided under existing law, or under existing Executive order issued pursuant to existing law.

SEC. 102. Except as otherwise provided in this Act, all vouchers covering expenditures of appropriations contained in this Act shall be audited before payment by the designated certifying official and the vouchers as approved shall be paid by checks issued by the designated disbursing official.

SEC. 103. Whenever in this Act an amount is specified within an appropriation for particular purposes or objects of expenditure, such amount, unless otherwise specified, shall be considered as the maximum amount that may be expended for said purpose or object rather than an amount set apart exclusively therefor, except for those funds and programs for the Metropolitan Police Department under the heading "Public Safety and Justice" which shall be considered as the amounts set apart exclusively for and shall be expended solely by that Department; and the appropriation under the heading "Repayment of General Fund Deficit" which shall be considered as the amount set apart exclusively for and shall be expended solely for that purpose.

SEC. 104. Appropriations in this Act shall be available, when authorized by the Mayor, for allowances for privately owned automobiles and motorcycles used for the performance of official duties at rates established by the Mayor: Provided, That such rates shall not exceed the maximum prevailing rates for such vehicles as prescribed in the Federal Property Management Regulations 101-7 (Federal Travel Regulations).

SEC. 105. Appropriations in this Act shall be available for expenses of travel and for the payment of dues of organizations concerned with the work of the District of Columbia government, when authorized by the Mayor: Provided, That the Council of the District of Columbia and the District of Columbia Courts may expend such funds without authorization by the Mayor.

SEC. 106. There are appropriated from the applicable funds of the District of Columbia such sums as may be necessary for making refunds and for the payment of judgments that have been entered against the District of Columbia government: Provided, That nothing contained in this section shall be construed as modifying or affecting the provisions of section 11(c)(3) of title XII of the District of Columbia Income and Franchise Tax Act of 1947, approved March 31, 1956 (70 Stat. 78; Public Law 84-460; D.C. Code, sec. 47-1812.11(c)(3)).

SEC. 107. Appropriations in this Act shall be available for the payment of public assistance without reference to the requirement of section 544 of the District of Columbia Public Assistance Act of 1982, effective April 6, 1982 (D.C. Law 4-101; D.C. Code, sec. 3-205.44), and for the non-Federal share of funds necessary to qualify for Federal assistance under the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention and Control Act of 1968, approved July 31, 1968 (82 Stat. 462; Public Law 90-445; 42 U.S.C. 3801 et seq.).

SEC. 108. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. 109. Not to exceed 4½ per centum of the total of all funds appropriated by this Act for personnel compensation may be used to pay the cost of overtime or temporary positions.

SEC. 110. Appropriations in this Act shall not be available, during the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, for the compensation of any person appointed to a permanent position in the District of Columbia government during any month in which the number of employees exceeds 39,262.

SEC. 110A. (a) No funds appropriated by this Act may be expended for the compensation of any person appointed to fill any vacant position in any agency under the personnel control of the Mayor unless:

(1) The position is to be filled by a sworn officer of the Metropolitan Police Department; or

(2) The position is to be filled as follows:

(A) By a person who is currently employed by the District of Columbia government at a grade level that is equal to the grade level of the position to be filled; or

(B) By a person who is currently employed by the District of Columbia government at a grade level higher than the grade level of the position to be filled, and who is willing to assume a lower grade level in order to fill the position.

(b) Subsection (a) of this section shall not apply to any position for which the City Administrator certifies that:

(1) The position is necessary to the fulfillment of an identified essential governmental function; and

(2) The position cannot be filled from within the District of Columbia government:

(A) At a grade level that is equal to the grade level of the position to be filled; or

(B) By a person who is currently employed by the District of Columbia government at a grade level higher than the grade level of the position to be filled, and who is willing to assume a lower grade level in order to fill the position.

(c) The City Administrator shall submit the certification required by subsection (b) of this section to the Council on the 1st day of each month.

SEC. 110B. (a) APPLICATION FOR EMPLOYMENT, PROMOTIONS, AND REDUCTIONS IN FORCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The rules issued pursuant to the amendments to the District of Columbia Government Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act of 1978 made by the Residency Preference Amendment Act of 1988 (D.C. Law 7-203) shall include the provisions described in paragraph (2).

(2) DESCRIPTION OF POLICIES.—

(A) POLICY REGARDING APPLICATION FOR EMPLOYMENT.—The Mayor of the District of Columbia may not give an applicant for District of Columbia government employment in the Career Service who claims a District residency preference more than a 5 point hiring preference over an applicant not claiming such a preference, and, in the case of equally qualified applicants, shall give an applicant claiming such a preference priority in hiring over an applicant not claiming such a preference.

(B) POLICY REGARDING PROMOTIONS AND REDUCTIONS IN FORCE FOR CAREER SERVICE EMPLOYEES.—In calculating years of service for the purpose of implementing a reduction-in-force, the Mayor may not credit an employee in the Career Service who claims a District residency preference with more than 1 year of additional service credit, and in the case of equally qualified employees, shall give an employee claiming such a preference priority in promotion over an employee not claiming such a preference.

(C) INDIVIDUALS SUBJECT TO PROVISIONS.—The amendments to the District of Columbia Government Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act of 1978 made by the Residency Preference Amendment Act of 1988 shall apply only with respect to individuals claiming a District residency preference or applying for employment with the District of Columbia on or after March 16, 1989.

(b) SCOPE OF 5-YEAR DISTRICT RESIDENCY REQUIREMENT FOR EMPLOYEES CLAIMING PREFERENCE.—

(1) CAREER SERVICE EMPLOYEES.—Section 801(e) of the District of Columbia Government Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act of 1978 (section 1-608.1(e), D.C. Code), as amended by the Residency Preference Amendment Act of 1988 (D.C. Law 7-203), is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(7)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the Mayor may not require an individual to reside in the District of Columbia as a condition of employment in the Career Service.

"(B) The Mayor shall provide notice to each employee in the Career Service of the provisions of this subsection that require an employee claiming a residency preference to maintain District residency for 5 consecutive years, and shall only apply such provisions with respect to employees claiming a residency preference on or after March 16, 1989.".

(2) EDUCATIONAL SERVICE EMPLOYEES.—Section 801A(d) of such Act (section 1-609.1(d), D.C. Code), as amended by the Residency Preference Amendment Act of 1988 (D.C. Law 7-203), is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(7)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the Boards may not require an individual to reside in the District of Columbia as a condition of employment in the Educational Services.

"(B) The Boards shall provide notice to each employee in the Educational Service of the provisions of this subsection that require an employee claiming a residency preference to maintain District residency for 5 consecutive years, and shall only apply such provisions with respect to employees claiming a residency preference on or after March 16, 1989.".

SEC. 111. No funds appropriated in this Act for the District of Columbia government for the operation of educational institutions, the compensation of personnel, or for other educational purposes may be used to permit, encourage, facilitate, or further partisan political activities. Nothing herein is intended to prohibit the availability of school buildings for the use of any community or partisan political group during non-school hours.

SEC. 112. The annual budget for the District of Columbia government for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1991, shall be transmitted to the Congress no later than April 15, 1990.

SEC. 113. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be made available to pay the salary of any employee of the District of Columbia government whose name, title, grade, salary, past work experience, and salary history are not available for inspection by the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations, the House Committee on the District of Columbia, the Subcommittee on Governmental Efficiency, Federalism and the District of Columbia of the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs, and the Council of the District of Columbia, or their duly authorized representative.

SEC. 114. There are appropriated from the applicable funds of the District of Columbia such sums as may be necessary for making payments authorized by the District of Columbia Revenue Recovery Act of 1977, effective September 23, 1977 (D.C. Law 2-20; D.C. Code, sec. 47-421 et seq.).

SEC. 115. None of the funds contained in this Act shall be made available to pay the salary of any employee of the District of Columbia government whose name and salary are not available for public inspection.

SEC. 116. No part of this appropriation shall be used for publicity or propaganda purposes or implementation of any policy including boycott designed to support or defeat legislation pending before Congress or any State legislature.

SEC. 117. None of the Federal funds provided in this Act shall be used to perform abortions except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term.

SEC. 118. At the start of the fiscal year, the Mayor shall develop an annual plan, by quarter and by project, for capital outlay borrowings: Provided, That within a reasonable time after the close of each quarter, the Mayor shall report to the Council of the District of Columbia and the Congress the actual borrowing and spending progress compared with projections.

SEC. 119. The Mayor shall not borrow any funds for capital projects unless he has obtained prior approval from the Council of the District of Columbia, by resolution, identifying the projects and amounts to be financed with such borrowings.

SEC. 120. The Mayor shall not expend any moneys borrowed for capital projects for the operating expenses of the District of Columbia government.

SEC. 121. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used for the implementation of a personnel lottery with respect to the hiring of fire fighters or police officers.

SEC. 122. None of the funds appropriated by this Act may be obligated or expended by reprogramming except pursuant to advance approval of the reprogramming granted according to the procedure set forth in the Joint Explanatory Statement of the Committee of Conference (House Report No. 96-443) which accompanied the District of Columbia Appropriation Act, 1980, approved October 30, 1979 (93 Stat. 713; Public Law 96-93), as modified in House Report No. 98-265, and in accordance with the Reprogramming Policy Act of 1980, effective September 16, 1980 (D.C. Law 3-100; D.C. Code, sec. 47-361 et seq.).

SEC. 123. None of the Federal funds provided in this Act shall be obligated or expended to provide a personal cook, chauffeur, or other personal servants to any officer or employee of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 124. None of the Federal funds provided in this Act shall be obligated or expended to procure passenger automobiles as defined in the Automobile Fuel Efficiency Act of 1980, approved October 10, 1980 (94 Stat. 1824; Public Law 96-425; 15 U.S.C. 2001(2)), with an Environmental Protection Agency estimated miles per gallon average of less than 22 miles per gallon: Provided, That this section shall not apply to security, emergency rescue, or armored vehicles.

SEC. 125. (a) Notwithstanding section 422(7) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act of 1973, approved December 24, 1973 (87 Stat. 790; Public Law 93-198; D.C. Code, sec. 1-242(7)), the City Administrator shall be paid, during any fiscal year, a salary at a rate established by the Mayor, not to exceed the rate established for level IV of the Executive Schedule under 5 U.S.C. 5315.

(b) For purposes of applying any provision of law limiting the availability of funds for payment of salary or pay in any fiscal year, the highest rate of pay established by the Mayor under subsection (a) for any position for any period during the last quarter of calendar year 1989 shall be deemed to be the rate of pay payable for that position for September 30, 1989.

(c) Notwithstanding section 4(a) of the District of Columbia Redevelopment Act of 1945, approved August 2, 1946 (60 Stat. 793; Public Law 79-592; D.C. Code, sec. 5-803(a)), the Board of Directors of the District of Columbia Redevelopment Land Agency shall be paid, during any fiscal year, a per diem compensation at a rate established by the Mayor.

SEC. 126. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, the provisions of the District of Columbia Government Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act of 1978, effective March 3, 1979 (D.C. Law 2-139; D.C. Code, sec. 1-601.1 et seq.), enacted pursuant to section 422(3) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act, approved December 24, 1973 (87 Stat. 790; Public Law 93-198; D.C. Code, sec. 1-242(3)), shall apply with respect to the compensation of District of Columbia employees: Provided, That for pay purposes, employees of the District of Columbia government shall not be subject to the provisions of title 5 of the United States Code.

SEC. 127. The Director of the Department of Administrative Services may pay rentals and repair, alter, and improve rented premises, without regard to the provisions of section 322 of the Economy Act of 1932 (Public Law 72-212; 40 U.S.C. 278a), upon a determination by the Director, that by reason of circumstances set forth in such determination, the payment of these rents and the execution of this work, without reference to the limitations of section 322, is advantageous to the District in terms of economy, efficiency and the District's best interest.

SEC. 128. No later than 30 days after the end of the first quarter of fiscal year 1990, the Mayor of the District of Columbia shall submit to the Council of the District of Columbia the new fiscal year 1990 revenue estimates as of the end of the first quarter of fiscal year 1990. These estimates shall be used in the fiscal year 1991 annual budget request. The officially revised estimates at midyear shall be used for the midyear report.

SEC. 129. Section 466(b) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act, approved December 24, 1973 (87 Stat. 806; Public Law 93-198; D.C. Code, sec. 47-326), is amended by striking out "sold before October 1, 1989" and inserting in lieu thereof "sold before October 1, 1990".

SEC. 130. No sole source contract with the District of Columbia government or any agency thereof may be renewed or extended without opening that contract to the competitive bidding process as set forth in section 303 of the District of Columbia Procurement Practices Act of 1985, effective February 21, 1986 (D.C. Law 6-85; D.C.

Code, sec. 1-1183.3), except that the District of Columbia Public Schools may renew or extend sole source contracts for which competition is not feasible or practical, provided that the determination as to whether to invoke the competitive bidding process has been made in accordance with duly promulgated Board of Education rules and procedures.

SEC. 131. For purposes of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (99 Stat. 1037; Public Law 99-177), as amended, the term "program, project, and activity" shall be synonymous with and refer specifically to each account appropriating Federal funds in this Act and any sequestration order shall be applied to each of the accounts rather than to the aggregate total of those accounts: Provided, That sequestration orders shall not be applied to any account that is specifically exempted from sequestration by the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (99 Stat. 1037; Public Law 99-177), as amended.

SEC. 132. In the event a sequestration order is issued pursuant to the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (99 Stat. 1037; Public Law 99-177), as amended, after the amounts appropriated to the District of Columbia for the fiscal year involved have been paid to the District of Columbia, the Mayor of the District of Columbia shall pay to the Secretary of the Treasury, within 15 days after receipt of a request therefor from the Secretary of the Treasury, such amounts as are sequestered by the order: Provided, That the sequestration percentage specified in the order shall be applied proportionately to each of the Federal appropriation accounts in this Act which are not specifically exempted from sequestration by the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (99 Stat. 1037; Public Law 99-177), as amended.

SEC. 133. (a) It is the purpose of this section to improve the means by which the District of Columbia is paid for water and sanitary sewer services furnished to the Government of the United States or any department, agency, or independent establishment thereof.

(b) Section 106 of title I of the District of Columbia Public Works Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 102; D.C. Code, sec. 43-1552) is amended by—

(1) striking in subsection (a) all that follows the sentence beginning with "Payment shall be made as provided in subsection (b)"; and

(2) amending subsection (b) to read as follows:

"(b)(1) Beginning in the second quarter of fiscal year 1990, the government of the District of Columbia shall receive payment for water services from funds appropriated or otherwise available to the Federal departments, independent establishments, or agencies. In accordance with the provisions of paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection, one-fourth (25 percent) of the annual estimate prepared by the District government shall be paid, not later than the second day of each fiscal quarter, to the District government by the Secretary of the Treasury from funds deposited by said departments, establishments, or agencies in a United States Treasury account entitled 'Federal Payment for Water and Sewer Services'. In the absence of sufficient funds in said account, payment shall be made by the Secretary of the Treasury from funds available to the United States Treasury and shall be reimbursed promptly to the United States Treasury by the respective user agencies. Payments shall be made to the District government by the Secretary of the Treasury without further justification, and shall be equal to one-fourth (25 percent) of the annual estimate prepared by the District government pursuant to paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(2) By April 15 of each calendar year the District shall provide the Office of Management and Budget, for inclusion in the President's budget of the respective Federal departments, independent establishments, or agencies, an estimate of the cost of service for the fiscal year commencing October 1st of the following calendar year. The estimate shall provide the total estimated annual cost of such service and an itemized estimate of such costs by Federal department, independent establishment, or agency. The District's estimates on a yearly basis shall reflect such adjustments as are necessary to (1) account for actual usage variances from the estimated amounts for the fiscal year ending on September 30th of the calendar year preceding April 15th, and (2) reflect changes in rates charged for water and sewer services resulting from public laws or rate covenants pursuant to water and sewer revenue bond sales.

"(3) Each Federal department, independent establishment, or agency receiving water services in buildings, establishments, or other places shall pay from funds specifically appropriated or otherwise available to it, quarterly and on the first day of each such fiscal quarter, to an account in the United States Treasury entitled 'Federal Payment for Water and Sewer Services' an amount equal to one-fourth (25 percent) of the annual estimate for said services as provided for in paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(4) The amount or time period for late payment of water charges involving a building, establishment, or other place owned by the Government of the United States imposed by the District of Columbia shall not be different from those imposed by the District of Columbia on its most favored customer.".

(c) Section 212 of the District of Columbia Public Works Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 108; D.C. Code, sec. 43-1612) is amended by—

(1) striking in subsection (a) all that follows ": Provided, That"; and

(2) amending subsection (b) to read as follows:

"(b)(1) Beginning in the second quarter of fiscal year 1990, the government of the District of Columbia shall receive payment for sanitary sewer services from funds appropriated or otherwise available to the Federal departments, independent establishments, or agencies. In accordance with the provisions of paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection, one-fourth (25 percent) of the annual estimate prepared by the District government shall be paid, not later than the second day of each fiscal quarter, to the District government by the Secretary of the Treasury from funds deposited by said departments, establishments, or agencies in a United States Treasury account entitled 'Federal Payment for Water and Sewer Services'. In the absence of sufficient funds in said account, payment shall be made by the Secretary of the Treasury from funds available to the United States Treasury and shall be reimbursed promptly to the United States Treasury by the respective user agencies. Payments shall be made to the District government by the Secretary of the Treasury without further justification, and shall be equal to one-fourth (25 percent) of the annual estimate prepared by the District government pursuant to paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(2) By April 15 of each calendar year the District shall provide the Office of Management and Budget, for inclusion in the President's budget of the respective Federal departments, independent establishments, or agencies, an estimate of the cost of service for the fiscal year commencing October 1st of the following calendar year. The estimate shall provide the total estimated annual cost of such service and an itemized estimate of such costs by Federal department, independent establishment, or agency. The District's estimates on a yearly basis shall reflect such adjustments as are necessary to (1) account for actual usage variances from the estimated amounts for the fiscal year ending on September 30th of the calendar year preceding April 15th, and (2) reflect changes in rates charged for water and sewer services resulting from public laws or rate covenants pursuant to water and sewer revenue bond sales.

"(3) Each Federal department, independent establishment, or agency receiving sanitary sewer services in buildings, establishments, or other places shall pay from funds specifically appropriated or otherwise available to it, quarterly and on the first day of each such fiscal quarter, to an account in the United States Treasury entitled 'Federal Payment for Water and Sewer Services' an amount equal to one-fourth (25 percent) of the annual estimate for said services as provided for in paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(4) The amount or time period for late payment of charges for sanitary sewer services involving a building, establishment, or other place owned by the Government of the United States imposed by the District of Columbia shall not be different from those imposed by the District of Columbia on its most favored customer.".

(d) The first sentence of subsection (d) of section 207 of the District of Columbia Public Works Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 106) is amended to read as follows: "Whenever a property upon which a sanitary sewer service charge is a public park, or uses water from the water supply system of the District for an industrial or commercial purpose in such a manner that the water so used is likewise not discharged into the sanitary sewage works of the District, the quantity of water so used and not discharged into the sanitary sewage works of the District may be excluded in determining the sanitary sewer service charge on such property, if such exclusion is previously requested in writing by the owner or occupant thereof and approved in writing by the District government in advance of the billing period involved.".

(e) The amendments made by this section shall take effect January 1, 1990, and shall terminate December 31, 1990.

SEC. 134. (a) The paragraph under the heading "Lottery and Charitable Games Enterprise Fund" in the District of Columbia Appropriation Act, 1982, approved December 4, 1981 (95 Stat. 1174; Public Law 97-91), is amended—

(1) by striking the 10th proviso; and

(2) in the 11th proviso, by striking "1144, as well as in the Old Georgetown Historic District:" and inserting "1144:".

(b) The 11th proviso referred to in subsection (a)(2), as amended by such subsection, shall not apply with respect to any activity relating to a lottery, raffle, bingo, or other game of chance sponsored by, and conducted solely for the benefit of, an organization which is described in section 501(c)(3), and exempt from tax under section 501(a), of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

SEC. 135. No funds appropriated in this Act for the operation of programs, projects, or activities of the government of the District of Columbia for which the Council of the District of Columbia has approved a specific budget increase shall be reprogrammed or reduced prior to 30 days written notice to the Council of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 136. Such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1990 pay raises for programs funded by this Act shall be absorbed within the levels appropriated in this Act.

SEC. 137. For the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, the District of Columbia shall pay interest on its quarterly payments to the United States that are made more than 60 days from the date of receipt of an itemized statement from the Federal Bureau of Prisons of amounts due for housing District of Columbia convicts in Federal penitentiaries for the preceding quarter.

SEC. 138. Section 11-903, District of Columbia Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 11-903. Composition.

"Subject to the enactment of authorizing legislation, the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall consist of a chief judge and fifty-eight associate judges.".

SEC. 139. Of the funds appropriated in Public Law 100-202 for carrying out part B of title VII of the Higher Education Act that remain available for obligation, $6,700,000 shall be awarded without regard to section 701(B), section 721(B), and section 721(C) of said Act to the consortium of institutions of higher education in the Washington, DC metropolitan area for the purpose of constructing and equipping an academic research library to link the library and information resources of the universities participating in the consortium.

SEC. 140. TASK FORCE ON SUBSTANCE ABUSING PREGNANT WOMEN AND INFANTS EXPOSED TO MATERNAL SUBSTANCE ABUSE DURING PREGNANCY.—(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Department of Human Services of the District of Columbia (referred to as the "Director") shall establish a task force, to be known as the District of Columbia Task Force for Coordinated Service to Drug-Exposed Infants (referred to as the "Task Force"), to develop a plan for the most efficient and effective delivery of services to substance abusing pregnant women and infants who were exposed to maternal substance abuse during pregnancy, including recommendations to ensure maximum cooperation between service providers.

(b) MEMBERS.—(1) The Director shall appoint no more than 15 persons to serve on the Task Force, including persons with experience in treating substance-exposed infants, representing the following organizations and disciplines:

(A) Child protection and welfare.

(B) Local hospitals.

(C) Health care professionals, including drug treatment specialists, public health experts, primary care providers, and child development specialists.

(D) Public safety and justice.

(E) Public education.

(F) Community-based organizations serving substance abusing pregnant and post partum women and their infants.

(G) Public housing officials.

(H) Other human support services.

(2) In addition to the members of the Task Force appointed pursuant to paragraph (1), the United States Attorney or a designee of the United States Attorney shall be a member of the Task Force.

(3) The Director or the designee of the Director shall act as chairman of the Task Force and provide such clerical support as the Task Force requires.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act the Task Force shall submit a report to Congress making findings and recommendations for legislative or other action, and including a specific plan detailing how the District will provide for the care of abandoned or otherwise abused infants for whom foster homes have not been found within 6 months of birth; and a timetable for implementing its recommendations.

(d) TERMINATION.—The Task Force shall terminate on submission of its report in accordance with subsection (c).

SEC. 141. (a) This section may be cited as the "Nation's Capital Religious Liberty and Academic Freedom Act".

(b) Section 1-2520 of the District of Columbia Code (1981 edition) is amended by adding after subsection (2) the following new subsection:

"(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of the laws of the District of Columbia, it shall not be an unlawful discriminatory practice in the District of Columbia for any educational institution that is affiliated with a religious organization or closely associated with the tenets of a religious organization to deny, restrict, abridge, or condition—

"(A) the use of any fund, service, facility, or benefit; or

"(B) the granting of any endorsement, approval, or recognition, to any person or persons that are organized for, or engaged in, promoting, encouraging, or condoning any homosexual act, lifestyle, orientation, or belief.".

This Act may be cited as the "District of Columbia Appropriations Act, 1990".

Mr. DIXON (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered as read, printed in the RECORD, and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. NAGLE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Are there any points of order against the bill?

Are there any amendments?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. EMERSON

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

Mr. Chairman, I have not seen the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON] reserves a point of order.

The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. EMERSON: In section 117, strike "Federal".

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Does the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON] wish to raise a point of order?

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I would hope that we could expedite this. I will not make the point of order at this point. I will reserve it, but I do intend to make the point of order. The Chair has previously ruled on it, and I think the Chair will be consistent in that ruling however, if there is desire to have some further discussion on this, I will certainly reserve a point of order for at least 2 or 3 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON] reserves his point of order, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON] is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his amendment.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, the amendment I am offering will restore the current-law prohibition on the use of local funds for abortion, except where the life of the mother is at stake, in the District of Columbia.

This is not an issue of home rule. Article I of the Constitution mandates that Congress "exercise exclusive legislation in all cases" over the District of Columbia, and as a consequence, Congress must appropriate all funds, including local funds, to the District of Columbia.

This is an issue of human life. The former budget director of the District of Columbia was reported to have "confirmed that the District's Government has a policy of funding abortion on demand and does not attempt to determine the circumstances of the pregnancy." Not so much as a simple inquire.

Not surprisingly, figures from the Alan Guttmacher Institute reveal that the abortion rate in the District of Columbia is more than triple that of any of the 50 States. Almost half the women seeking abortions in the District of Columbia during 1986 acknowledged at least one previous abortion. Nineteen percent reported two or more previous abortions. And in 1986, the rate of abortions was the same as the rate of live births.

We are not talking about unusual and compelling circumstances here. The District of Columbia offers readily accessible abortion as a means of after-the-fact birth control, and from 1984 through 1987, it spent $6.1 million to do it.

When the President vetoed the D.C. appropriations bill a few weeks ago, he did so not only because it allowed Federal funds to pay for abortion-on-demand in the District of Columbia, but because it would also have allowed local funds to pay for abortions. When the bill was returned to Congress, the current-law restriction on Federal funding was restored. But H.R. 3610, as it is before us now, continues to allow local funds—funds which must be appropriated by Congress—to be used for abortion on demand. This bill is still unacceptable to the President, and my friends, unless current law is maintained and local funds are prohibited from funding abortion on demand, it will be vetoed again.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, by striking the word "Federal" the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON] in effect adds legislation to legislation already in the bill. The amendment of the gentleman from Missouri constitutes legislation on an appropriations bill and, as such, violates clause 2, rule XXI, of the House. The rule states in part that no amendment shall be in order in changing existing law.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for the ruling of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON] wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, I would only argue that this amendment does not in any way expand the bill, and I would rest my case.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. COOPER). The Chair sustains the point of order made by the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON].

The Chair has previously ruled on this question on several occasions, and I would cite for the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON] the rulings of June 26, 1987 and June 28, 1988 for the same reasons stated therein the Chair sustains the point of order made by the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON].

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I have always found it enjoyable to work with the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON], the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, as he knows. He is a man of honor, and he is up front, and that is much to be appreciated on this very delicate issue.

However, Mr. Chairman, I had an opportunity to visit with the President in the Oval Office on November 8. I was down at the White House for a totally different reason, to see some people about the tragedy of all the killing going on in Lebanon. It was the 1-year anniversary of President Bush's great election last year and he grabbed me and took me into the Oval Office, and we discussed two or three subjects, and this was one of them.

Mr. Chairman, the President told me, and I know the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON] does not know this, but the President told me again he is not going to let this bill go through if it contains abortion on demand.

What we have done now is gone back really to square one. This is the battle we fought last year before the elections changed, about 10 votes on this issue, though this issue never came up in one of those elections. So this is differently constructed House than the 100th Congress, and we are right back to the same old routine of debating the word "Federal," and the points of order and back and forth. But what we are facing with the word "Federal" in the bill is language that should not please anyone. For those who want rape and incest language, they are not going to find it with regard to federal dollars. And for those in this House who have voted against the pro-life position because they feel that they want a rape and incest position and nothing more, they are now being asked to allow abortions to start up again in the District of Columbia for all 9 months for any reason whatsoever. This is clearly not the position of the majority of Members. All the things that Pennsylvania prevented in its legislature just a few days ago on husband notification, on parental notification and approval, no gender selection, all of those things that I think are going to pass in probably 48 out of the 50 States; none of that is here in this language. This legislation does not even deal with District funds, though we are the legislature of the District. And make no mistake about it, that is the way our forefathers constructed it. This bill means abortion on demand for any reason, all 9 months, unstoppable abortion in the District, so that the killing can go on of mostly black children in their mothers' wombs.

Mr. Chairman, in 1975 this was the first American city that registered more abortions than live births, and it was the same in 1976, and 1977, and 1978, and Jimmy Carter's last 2 years, 1979 and 1980, and all of Reagan's 8 years. It took a dip last year because of the Dornan amendment to the D.C. appropriations bill that passed last year. That is something this Chamber should be proud of.

□ 1520

And now we are being asked again to have more abortions in our beautiful District of Columbia than live births. It is a tragic situation.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DORNAN of California. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, I would just like to ask the gentleman a question. Inasmuch as the Chair has ruled against the admission of my amendment to this bill, is it not then logical that the only way we can prevent legislatively a return to the syndrome of allowing abortion on demand in the District of Columbia, given the fact that we have on other legislative opportunity here, is to vote against the passage of the bill?

Mr. DORNAN of California. Absolutely. I will, of course, with no problems of conscience, vote against this bill because it is abortion on demand, all 9 months, across the board, for any frivolous reason whatsoever.

I think that every person who wants to go home during this Thanksgiving, Hanukkah and Christmas break, and tell their voters that they are still prolife, but that they just want to be reasonable about the horrible tragedies of rape, and incest, that they want to remain a proud prolifer, are going to have trouble if they do not reject this.

The sad part now is this thing is so utterly politicized that although there are reasonable people on this side, and 98 percent of the people are reasonable on the other side, there are some people like Molly Yard, standing down there where Martin Luther King stood in front the Washington Memorial, threatening to break every law in this country if the Supreme Court does not do her bidding. There are some people in this Chamber, a handful, I can count them on one hand, who are so politically driven that they think they are going to win the White House, that they are going to remove every Republican on this side about 20 in the 1990 election because of this issue. They are obsessed with the political lust of using abortion on demand for all 9 months. They want to use it for gender selection, to kill people in the womb if an amniocentesis test shows that somebody is going to be a daughter or a son. Anything to drive abortion all 9 months, on demand, for any ridiculous reason. That is what they want, and they are going to tear this House up. They have threatened that they will keep us through Thanksgiving, and I say to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER], they will keep us here until the eve of Jesus Christ's birthday. They love this issue because they think they are going to dominate American politics with it.

Mr. Chairman, I recommend a no vote, and if the bill is passed the President will veto it.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise simply to point out to my colleagues that on seven separate occasions President Reagan signed this bill with the same home rule provision that we have in it today, so if President Bush indeed vetoes the bill on the grounds of this provision, he is going to be taking this case far beyond where President Reagan took it.

I would hope, Mr. Chairman, that the President will think long and hard before he does that.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

I just want to point out so that everybody is clear, President Reagan in his last year in office vowed to veto this bill unless the word "Federal" was stricken from the bill, so that all appropriated funds, both the local D.C. funds and the Federal component, would not be used to pay for abortion on demand.

The President vetoed that bill, was perfectly prepared to do so, and the House backed him up. We were able to get what is now current law, and that is the Hyde amendment for both the local as well as Federal funds.

I also want to commend the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON] for offering this amendment. Unfortunately, once again the rules have been used to short-circuit consideration of a very important amendment; so the consequence is that this bill will be vetoed.

So I would urge, as the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] urged a moment ago, that Members vote this bill down. We will have an opportunity, I would hope, to vote for this kind of amendment and let the House work its will, but unfortunately we are not going to get it today.

Let me also point out to my colleagues that if the bill as crafted were to become law, we would see abortion on demand subsidized in the District of Columbia. That is not the case as of today. Current law provides for a life of the mother exception.

The bill that is presented is radically different and will provide for abortion on demand payments in the District of Columbia.

Let me also point out that in fiscal year 1988 when the old law was in effect, 3,139 children were aborted with taxpayer subsidies footing the bill.

Again, this is an issue of abortion on demand. We are not talking about rape and incest or more narrowly crafted language or anything of the kind. We are talking about abortion on demand.

Again, we were precluded from the opportunity to offer an amendment, which I think is most unfortunate. The membership has been deprived of the opportunity to work its will here on the floor because of the invoking of the rules, which I think are very unfair, but again I urge Members to vote no. This bill will allow payment for abortion on demand.

Mr. FAUNTROY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

I simply want to appeal to my colleagues to be consistent here today. We have approved an HHS appropriation that provides for prohibition on the use of Federal funds.

The citizens of the District of Columbia are in all respects full citizens of this great Nation, we pay more per capita in Federal taxes than the residents of 49 of the 50 States; our young people died more per capita in the Vietnam war than died per capita in 47 of the 50 States, and they all died defending a democracy that we do not fully share.

I hope that you will take that into account in supporting the committee position here, and urging the President to sign it.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, to quote the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. UDALL], although the abortion issue is a very divisive issue in our society, just about everything that could be said on this issue has been said and probably has not been said by everyone, and I hope that does not occur today.

But the most important issue that is before us today is the Supreme Court decision in the case Webster versus Reproductive Health Services. Any fair reading of that case, decided by the Supreme Court on July 3, 1989, clearly indicates that local jurisdictions, States, and the District of Columbia, have a right to promulgate reasonable rules and regulations as they relate to State-funded, and in this case District-funded, abortions.

This is the law of the land. This is the law that the prolife advocates felt was a real victory.

I suggest to you that what is good for the goose is good for the gander—that in fact the people who live in this District of Columbia deserve the same right as those who live in every State, to make their own determination as to what they will do with their own revenues, as the gentleman from California cited with Pennsylvania.

The second issue I would like to address briefly is that I, too, have been reading and hearing utterances as to what the President's intentions are on this bill. I would hope that he would support the Supreme Court and allow, although it may be repulsive to him, the local jurisdiction, the people here who raise their own revenues and pay for their trash collection and street maintenance, to make their own decision in accordance with the decision of this Nation's Highest Court.

But as I read from the statement dated today, November 15, 1989, the Statement of Administration Policy, I have some hope that the President will revisit this issue, for the Statement of Administration Policy states in part that "The President vetoed H.R. 3026 on October 27, 1989, because it did not include the fiscal year 1989 language restrictions on both Federal and District funds. The administration urges the House to restore the fiscal year 1989 language on abortion so that the President is finally presented with a bill that he can sign."

It goes on to say that "the absence in H.R. 3610," which is the bill before us, "of the restriction on D.C. funds, would result in the President's senior advisers recommending that he veto the bill."

What I am saying here is that it is not clear to this Member that the President will, in fact, veto this bill. I hope he will reject the advice of his senior advisers on this occasion and uphold the law of the land, the Webster Supreme Court decision.

Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

□ 1530

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. WEISS] having assumed the chair, Mr. COOPER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 3610) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes, had directed him to report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 229, nays 191, not voting 13, as follows:

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Payne of New Jersey for, with Mr. Burton of Illinois against.

Messrs. GOODLING, SARPALIUS, BEVILL, FLIPPO, and WHITTAKER changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I was recorded in error as voting "aye" on rollcall 355, and I ask unanimous consent that my statement that I intended to vote "no" on rollcall 355 appear after the vote in the permanent RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, due to a death in the family, I missed rollcall votes 353, 354, and 355. Had I been present, I would have voted "no" on rollcall 353, "yes" on rollcall 354, and "yes" on rollcall 355.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and to include extraneous matter, on H.R. 3610, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WEISS). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 3072, DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1990

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 3072) making appropriations for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Monday, November 13, 1989, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement see proceedings of the House of Monday, November 13, 1989 at page H 8353.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I bring before the House the conference report on the Department of Defense appropriations bill for fiscal year 1990.

The conference agreement provides a total of $286 billion which is an increase of $3.6 billion above the fiscal year 1989 level but $2.2 billion below the budget request.

These figures do not include funds for military construction and the nuclear weapons related programs of the Department of Energy. Funds for those programs are included in other appropriations bills.

The conference agreement complies with the 302(b) allocations for the Defense appropriations bill in both budget authority and outlays. This conference agreement shows restraint while still providing funding for the important defense areas.

It was an arduous conference. The House and Senate had many issues to address within the 245 separate amendments before the conference committee. The number of "open" issues in the conference was over 1,000. Obviously, with that number of outstanding issues, it is impossible to bring back a conference report which will be totally satisfactory to all Members of the House. I am very pleased to report to the Members that the House position prevailed on many items in conference. However, as you all know, it is simply impossible to return to the House with a conference report that does not include items which will be controversial to various Members of the House—including myself I might add—but which were insisted upon by the other body, and necessitated compromise.

PERSONNEL

Mr. Speaker, since I became chairman of the Defense Appropriations Committee, my highest priority has been to make certain that the Department of Defense is able to maintain high quality troops. We must never return to the "hollow" force structure of the post Vietnam era. To assure that high morale and quality of life are maintained, the conferees have taken the following steps: Fully funded the pay raise request; fully funded the increase requested for variable housing; added $90 million to the request to help provide adequate medical care for our service families; and added $400 million to the request for "real property maintenance" to keep barracks and base facilities in proper repair. The backlog in this area exceeds $6 billion.

The conferees made a reduction of 21,400 troops in the end strength of the uniformed services, and reduced 10,500 civilian personnel.

READINESS

Mr. Speaker, in addition to the issue of the quality and well-being of our troops, my other highest priority for defense is readiness. The conference agreements to enhance readiness, include:

An add-on of $200 million for ship repair and maintenance.

An add-on of $150 million for readiness initiatives which will enable the Marine Corps to continue its training at the same level as fiscal year 1989.

An add-on of $300 million for the procurement of ammunition to increase our stocks.

An add-on of $600 million to help correct the critical shortage in sealift.

An add-on of $200 million for depot maintenance to keep our weapons systems on line and operational. This improves safety for our troops and directly affects our readiness posture. Backlogs in this area exceed $1.5 billion.

TRANSFER FROM OPERATIONS AND MAINTENANCE TO PROCUREMENT

Mr. Speaker, on the face of it, it would appear that the conferees made deep cuts in operations and maintenance and made a large increase in the procurement account. It should be pointed out that these statistics are misleading.

The conferees agreed to transfer a substantial amount of dollars from revolving funds in the operations and maintenance accounts into various procurement accounts. These funds will be used for the same purpose in procurement as they were budgeted for in operation and maintenance.

However this transfer will enable both the Defense Department and the Congress to have better oversight regarding the modernization of presently operational weapons systems. This step was taken at the initiative of the Defense Department. Almost $5 billion of the procurement increase is associated with this shift of modernization costs to the procurement accounts.

PROCUREMENT

Mr. Speaker, I have long been a strong advocate of buying weapons at an economic rate. The conference agreement was able to increase funding for a number of programs so they could be procured at economic rates. Some of the systems, which will be purchased at a more cost-effective rate as a result of this conference agreement, are: Apache helicopters; landing craft air cushion; Harm missile; numerous ammunition production lines; and numerous multiyear procurements;

We also provided an add-on of $1.4 billion for a wide variety of equipment for the Guard and Reserve.

The conference agreement complied with the Defense authorization bill with regard to the major strategic weapons systems in procurement and R&D.

The conference report spells out the agreement on funding levels for all weapons systems which were in disagreement between the two Houses.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Speaker, the conference agreement provides $37.1 billion for research, development, test and evaluation [RDT&E].

The conference agreement: Provided $3.6 billion, a reduction of $1 billion from the budget request, for SDI; provides $194 million for the National Aerospace Plane [NASP]; provides $255 million for the V-22 aircraft; provides $549 million for and SSN-21 submarine and its associated combat system; and funds the advanced tactical fighter program at the authorized level of $911 million.

The conference agreement for research and development is a decline of 6 percent from the budget request.

TERMINATED PROGRAMS

Mr. Speaker, Secretary Cheney's budget included an initiative to terminate seven major weapons systems, of which two were recommended for termination after fiscal year 1991.

The conferees agreed that the F-14D aircraft and the SSN-688 submarine should be terminated although funds were provided for the final production run of the F-14 and the SSN-688.

The conferees disagreed with the recommendation to terminate the Phoenix air-to-air missile and the V-22 Osprey. RDT&E funds for the V-22 Osprey aircraft were provided.

The conferees provided funds for the Army Helicopter Improvement Program and the Apache Helicopter Program and requested that the Secretary of Defense report back to the Committees on Appropriations as to whether any funds may be required for these programs in the future.

Future Congresses will decide on the issue of whether to continue production of the F-15E fighter aircraft.

DRUG INTERDICTION

The conference agreement provided $450 million—the budgeted and authorized amount—for DOD's effort in drug interdiction.

In addition, in fiscal year 1990 the DOD will assist the war on drugs in the following way:

Funds reduced from DOD budget for use in the national war on drugs—$1.2 billion.

Funds transferred from DOD to the State Department for the Andean initiative—$125 million.

Resources made available from DOD to the Coast Guard for operation of the Coast Guard—$300 million.

Funds for DOD flying and steaming hours devoted to drug interdiction—$62 million.

Funds for drug-related testing and education—$118 million.

Funds for 12 fast patrol boats—$84 million.

In summary, over $2.3 billion of the original DOD budget submission has been devoted to the war on drugs.

CONCLUSION

Mr. Speaker, this bill is by far the largest appropriation bill passed each year by the Congress. Now there are many who say that much larger reductions should be made in the Defense bill for various reasons. But the funding level for the Defense Department should be put in historical perspective.

This bill represents a smaller percentage of the gross national product than has been the case in 34 of the last 40 years.

This bill is the fifth year in a row of a decline in defense spending when measured in constant dollars.

Furthermore, we have reduced military and civilian personnel by over 30,000 and terminated various weapons systems.

Mr. Speaker, no one is more pleased than I am to see the erosion of the Communist bloc in Eastern Europe and the apparent willingness of the Soviet Union to negotiate seriously on a potential agreement on strategic weapons and on conventional weapons.

However it should be noted that the commitment of the Congress to maintain a strong national security posture during the 44 years since the end of World War II, has led to the dramatic events which we witness today occurring throughout Eastern Europe. This same U.S. commitment has led to the Soviets sitting down at the bargaining table for arms agreement talks.

When, and if, those agreements are signed and ratified, I expect that we will see major force structure changes resulting in a substantial reduction in troop levels and the savings associated with those troop reductions. Until those agreements are signed and ratified, we must maintain an Armed Forces which has the capability to fulfill our current international commitments to our allies. This conference agreement will provide adequate funds to meet those commitments.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support for the fiscal year 1990 conference report for defense appropriations.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report and urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, this has been a long and difficult year for all of us, with many controversies and disputes, but without question the host of issues swirling around defense has made this a particularly challenging session.

Consider the extraordinary pressures we face with respect to the overall budget; for Defense specifically, the tough choices forced by yet another year of negative growth, the fifth straight year; and finally, hovering over all our deliberations, the spectacle of a rapidly changing world scene—changes perhaps best epitomized by the man who graced this Chamber this morning, Lech Welesa.

All these questions and more have come to bear on our consideration of this year's defense budget. It has not been easy, writing this bill. But we bring before the House today a conference report which in my view strikes a realistic and pragmatic balance considering all the competing pressures we've had to deal with this year.

Mr. Speaker, we had a conference surrounded with tough choices—and going in I had to wonder whether we could resolve the considerable differences between the House and Senate bills in any reasonable fashion.

Our conference sessions were not easy—a lot of difficult decisions brought to the table. But, Mr. Speaker, in my 25 years as a member of this committee I have not seen any conference handled with more fairness, more dispatch, and more skill than by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, in his maiden voyage as chairman of the Defense Subcommittee.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for a job well done.

I'd like to also acknowledge the senior Senator from Hawaii, also in his first management of the Defense gavel as chair of the Senate Defense Subcommittee; my friend Senator STEVENS; and most especially all members of the conference for their long hours and contributions. And without reservation I want to salute the staff of the committee—each of them an expert, all consummate professionals. Mr. Speaker, nobody in Washington works harder, with less fanfare—the House and the Nation are indeed fortunate to have their services.

In viewing this conference report, Mr. Speaker, I'm constrained to note that like so many controversial and important measures there is much here to criticize. This is a compromise, consensus product and I am not about to lead the cheering section regarding all the decisions before you.

This is not the bill I would have written nor is it the product I think our subcommittee would have produced, had we free rein.

What this bill does do, however, is track, as faithfully as possible, those critical benchmarks set by this body and the executive branch throughout the session.

The bill complies with the budget resolution targets and our subcommittee's 302 allocation—an allocation amended, I might add, to reflect a reduction of over $1.3 billion from the original budget summit level for defense in order to fund the war on drugs (−$1.17 billion) as well as aid to Poland (−$140 million).

Likewise, we conform with the core decisions reached in the Defense authorization conference, which the House passed last week, concerning both strategic programs and the so-called program terminations.

In the strategic area, especially, I'm gratified that both in the authorization and in this conference report we have essentially preserved those programs that the President has said are essential to bolster his position in the ongoing nuclear arms reduction talks with the Soviets.

With the summit next spring being focused on these arms reduction measures, it is incumbent upon us collectively to give the President a full range of options, and the decisions we've made regarding the strategic triad—such as retaining both rail-garrison MX and the small ICBM as options for a mobile land-based missile—accomplish this.

Beyond these decisions, I am pleased to note that despite the fiscal pressures we faced the conference was able to retain a series of recommendations intended to maintain our most perishable defense asset—a quality force, well trained and maintained.

For example, we fully fund the requested pay raise for both military and DOD civilians; we add $90 million to the budget expressly to bolster military medical care; and we provided over $800 million over the request for repair and maintenance of equipment and property.

We all realize, Mr. Speaker, that budget pressures next year will make this year's defense debate look like a cakewalk by comparison, and though all the headlines revolve around the big-ticket hardware programs, we cannot allow these pressures to force us into debilitating reductions directly impacting our men and women on the front lines.

As we grapple with less money and the prospect—the potential—of a reduced Soviet military threat, we cannot afford to take hasty and ill-advised steps. This conference report—while not perfect—does represent the best we can do to maintain a balanced approach to our defense needs, as we move forward into an extremely challenging period for our Nation and the world.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to voice my disapproval of sections of the conference report which relate to base closure. There is a section of the report entitled "Army-Interior Study of the Presidio." In this section, the conferees purport to direct the Secretaries of the Army and Interior to develop a lease-back arrangement under which virtually all Army functions at the Presidio of San Francisco would continue. Ownership of the land would transfer but, through the device of a lease, nothing would change at the Presidio.

This scam is in direct violation of the base closure law. Under that law, the Base Closure Commission recommended 86 bases for closure. The Presidio of San Francisco is one of those. Unless Congress vetoed the Commission's recommendations, they go into effect. Within the last few months, both the House and the Senate have voted overwhelmingly not to veto these recommendations. The base closure law requires that the Army shut down and transfer out all its functions at the Presidio. Nothing in the conference report can change that fact.

My advice to the Department of Defense is to ignore this conference report language because it runs counter to law. I should also point out that the Subcommittee on Military Installations and Facilities, which I chair, must approve leases of the sort described in the conference report. If the current sentiment among subcommittee members is any indication, I can assure the Department of Defense that such a lease-back arrangement will never be approved.

The committee report also states in the section entitled "Environmental Restoration, Defense" that the base closure account, and not the environmental restoration account, should fund all environmental restoration activities at bases closed under the base closure law. Again, this is not the law. The law is that the base closure account can be used for cleanup, but other funds, such as Defense environmental restoration account funds can be used as well. Perhaps this should be changed. But any change must come through statutory change, not dicta in a conference committee report.

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of this conference agreement, and I commend my distinguished colleague from California, Mr. DIXON, the chairman of the House Conference Committee Mr. MURTHA, and the conferees for their hard work on this legislation. I am particularly pleased that the conferees recognized the seriousness of the drug problem in Los Angeles and its deadly impact on the rest of the Nation, and have, based on legislation I introduced along with Mr. DIXON, Mr. BERMAN, Mr. MARTINEZ, and Mr. WAXMAN, directed the Secretary of Defense to allocate not less than $10 million for National Guard antidrug programs in California.

Southern California is the national center of drug importation, distribution, and manufacture—three criteria for designation as a high-intensity drug trafficking area. More deadly illegal drugs come into this country or are manufactured in southern California than any other location in the Nation. Los Angeles-based drug gangs then move the drugs to every other region of the Nation, from Seattle, WA, to New York State, from Texas to Tennessee. This is truly a national problem with national consequences.

The funds earmarked for southern California will make an important contribution to my State's ability to wage the war against drugs and gangs. While not the final answer, it is an important step in the right direction. Once again, I thank the conferees for their help on this important issue.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference report to H.R. 3072, the Department of Defense appropriations conference report.

I voted against the earlier Defense authorization conference report, upon which this appropriation is modeled, because I do not support many of the concessions which were made to the Senate position on key defense programs, including SDI, the B-2 Stealth bomber program, calling on the President to initiate bilateral negotiations with the Soviet Union to halt the production of weapons-grade plutonium, and the further production of chemical weapons, among others.

One cannot help but note that on many of these key issues, the conference agreement does not split the difference but is instead much closer to the Senate position. The conference report provides nearly $3.6 billion for the Strategic Defense Initiative [SDI] program for research and development. While this figure represents the first real reduction in funding for SDI research and development since the program's inception in 1983 under the Reagan administration, and while it is $1 billion less than the Bush administration requested, nevertheless, the conference report still provides $728 million more than the House bill.

The conference report also backs away from essential quality and cost control provisions which were passed by the House earlier this year by approving funding now for the procurement of two new Stealth aircraft in fiscal year 1990 and approving advance procurement for five more B-2 aircraft in fiscal year 1991 along with spare parts. If we are ever going to get control of defense spending, we must insist upon strict accountability. That means aircraft, tanks, guns, and other weapons which perform according to their specifications. It also means ensuring that the Defense Department and the American taxpayer pay a fair price for what they receive, without kickbacks, bribery, sole source procurement, and irregularities in the bidding process. The American people deserve to have a Pentagon which is more interested in serving the national interest rather than the particular interests of individual defense contractors.

I regret that the conference report provides $1.8 billion in funding for the development of both the MX missile and the Midgetman missiles. This House spoke clearly earlier this year in the debate on H.R. 2461, the Defense authorization bill, when we said "no" to the simultaneous development of both of these expensive new missile systems. I am also displeased to note that the conference report permits DOD to spend $100 million in unobligated fiscal year 1989 funds for research and development of the Midgetman. We must insist that the Bush administration and this Congress make choices among strategic programs. In short, we can't have it all any more.

H.R. 3072 also provides $911 million to continue the development of the joint Air Force-Navy advanced tactical fighter [ATF] aircraft even though the House struck all funding because of the high projected cost of the program and because of production problems. The report which accompanied the earlier House appropriations bill noted that the cost of the ATF program may well exceed that of the B-2 Stealth program, currently estimated at $70 billion.

Mr. Speaker, in September, President Bush went to the United Nations and called for a multilateral ban on the manufacture of chemical weapons. Yet the Bush administration has contradicted itself on this issue by calling for funding to manufacture new chemical weapons. The conference report before us today would provide $47 million for the production of 155mm binary chemical weapons. It is unfortunate that the administration is apparently willing to overlook this inconsistency in seeking most of this funding today for new chemical weapons.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, while the conference report provides $601 million for DOD environmental restoration, nevertheless, this figure is $300 million less than was provided for this account in the original House bill. I was pleased last year when the Army finally settled a lawsuit brought by the city of New Brighton, MN, for soil and ground water contamination near the Twin Cities Army Ammunition Plant [TCAAP]. Clearly, this settlement was made possible because Congress provided sufficient financial resources for the Army to make its settlement offer. Congress must continue to insist that the Department of Defense expedite the clean up of soil, air, and ground water pollution at and near DOD facilities.

The consideration of the Defense appropriations conference report occurs today against the backdrop of stunning and dramatic political, economic, and social change in the Soviet Union and throughout Eastern Europe. In Berlin, the wall is tumbling down. In Poland, the first non-Communist government since World War II assumes power. In Hungary, the Communist Party essentially votes itself out of existence to be replaced by a reform-minded Social Democratic Party.

These are welcome changes. I hope that the democratic reform movement in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe continues. We live in a safer world today in part because the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies have turned inward to reform their political and economic systems. The fact is that neither the United States nor the Soviet Union can continue devoting such a large share of their financial resources to building military hardware, especially when there are so many other urgent domestic and international needs, from housing to homeless, to providing adequate health care, good education, and many other worthy goals. In my view, this conference report does not sufficiently take note of the new political climate which we live in today. For that and other reasons, I will vote against the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

AMENDMENT IN DISAGREEMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the first amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 1: Page 2, line 14, strike out "$24,610,000,000" and insert "$24,558,217,000".

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken and inserted by said amendment, insert "$24,510,960,000: Provided, That $11,000,000 shall be available only for the activation of one addition battalion for the 6th Light Infantry Division not later than August 15, 1990: Provided further, That no reduction be made in any active component combat or corps headquarters unit in the United States to make personnel available for this unit".

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken by said amendment, insert "Provided, That notwithstanding Section 502 of the National Security Act of 1947, Section 136 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act for fiscal years 1990 and 1991 (H.R. 2461) or any other provision of law heretofore or hereafter enacted, neither the SR-71 nor the classified program referred to in Section 136 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act for fiscal years 1990 and 1991 (H.R. 2461) shall be terminated and that both the SR-71 and the classified system are hereby authorized: Provided further, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, any appropriations included in this Act for personnel, operation and maintenance, procurement, or research and development for the SR-71, the classified system referred to in Section 136 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act for fiscal years 1990 and 1991 (H.R. 2461) or any other classified airborne reconnaissance system are hereby authorized: Provided further, That operation of the SR-71 aircraft shall be transferred to the Air National Guard no later than July 1, 1990: Provided further, That of the amount appropriated, $175,000,000 shall be solely for expenses associated with the SR-71 program, of which $100,000,000 shall be transferred to Operation and Maintenance, Air National Guard: Provided further, That $130,000,000 is hereby authorized in addition to any other authorization for airborne reconnaissance programs and that of the amount appropriated, $130,000,000 shall be transferred to Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense Agencies 1990/1991 to be merged with and to be available for the same purposes and for the same time period as the appropriation to which transferred.

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. WEISS). The gentleman reserves a point of order?

Mr. McDADE. I do, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, may I be recognized to make a point of order that the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania is not in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman state his point of order?

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will defer to me, I have a request from a colleague to speak on the amendment, so I have reserved the point of order to protect the gentleman's right to speak.

I am trying to determine if the gentleman is in the Chamber. I had a request from the gentleman from California [Mr. ROHRABACHER]. I do not see him.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from California insist on his point of order?

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I have reserved the point of order, and with the permission of the Chair, it will just take a second or two for me to determine whether or not my colleague is here.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE].

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a brief colloquy with the chairman?

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. YOUNG].

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. There is one thing about the conference report that I want to make sure there is no misunderstanding on. I appreciate the gentleman engaging in this brief colloquy.

In the fiscal 1990 defense appropriations conference, we receded to the Senate on language relating to the "Laser Hellfire System." That Senate language directed the Army to obligate previously unobligated funds appropriated in fiscal year 1988 for Hellfire procurement.

It is my understanding that these funds would then be combined with funds provided in this bill to execute the fiscal year 1990 Hellfire buy, and that the total amount would be $138.3 million.

Is that the gentleman's understanding?

Mr. MURTHA. If the gentleman will yield, Mr. Speaker, that is my understanding. The understanding of the gentleman is correct.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman of the subcommittee. If I may proceed further, let me take a minute out to say to the chairman and ranking member what a tremendous job they have done in presenting this conference to the House. It has taken a lot of long days and long nights, and the membership, following the leadership of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE], and the tremendous staff that we have, I think have done an outstanding job. The fact that we took care of the conference report in less than 5 minutes is a good indication that the rest of the House feels the same way about it.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDADE. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I would like just to say to the gentleman from California [Mr. BEILENSON], the chairman of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, I understand that the gentleman will make a point of order regarding section 27. I would just say to my friend and colleague that I deeply regret the situation we find ourselves in regarding aerial reconnaissance. I hope in working with the chairman and with the authorizing committee and with the Committee on Appropriations, that something can be done next year on this very important subject.

Mr. Speaker, I would just ask the gentleman from California if he can tell me what the plans are of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence in this particular area and why they seem to be so adamantly opposed to doing something in this particular area?

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I would say to my friend, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. DICKS], the gentleman knows we spent a lot of time on this. We on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, as well as the members of the other authorizing committees of the House and Senate Committee on Armed Services, have spent a lot of time on this particular question for the past several years.

As the gentleman well knows, the President himself did not seek funding for the SR-71 this year. Secretary Cheney as a member of our committee for a number of years was very much opposed to it. When he became Secretary, he testified forcefully against continuation of that particular plane, and stated he will not request funds for it next year.

Both the House and the Senate Committee on Armed Services and the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, which are the authorizing committees, as the gentleman well knows, for this particular matter, agreed to the President's request to terminate both programs.

We feel very strongly, because as the authorizing committees we made the decision overwhelmingly, in the case of our particular committee, I believe the vote was 18 to 1, that we should make this reservation and insist on the authorizing committee authorizing the appropriation committee not going ahead when this particular matter has not been authorized.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, through I disagree with the conclusion of the gentleman from California [Mr. BEILENSON], I understand the right of the committee to do what they are doing. I would just urge the gentleman from California, we are going to have to gap here in reconnaissance that is very serious. It seems to me that this is an important issue. Because some part of this is classified it is not easy to discuss here, I would just hope that we could somehow work together.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, if I might reclaim any time, I would concede the point of order to the gentleman from California [Mr. BEILENSON].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California has to state his point of order.

Mr. BEILENSON. The gentleman cannot concede it until he has made it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California should state his point of order before the concession is made.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the motion from the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE] is not in order because it violates clause 7 of rule XVI because it proposes a nongermane amendment to the proposed amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania want to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, we concede the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WEISS). The point of order is conceded and sustained.

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, without the SR-71, our Nation will be left virtually blinded in a crisis.

Airborne reconnaissance has proven invaluable to our Nation's top decisionmakers during the past decade. In the Middle East, in the North Atlantic, and in Asia, the SR-71 has provided data from hot spots around the globe—data which for one reason or another was not able to be collected by our satellite fleet.

In inclement weather, in a remote area of the world, or if our satellite force were ever inoperable, either from a Soviet antisatellite attack or another space launch crisis, strategic airborne reconnaissance is our only recourse.

For these reasons, the State Department and the Central Intelligence Agency, the two primary users of information gathered by the SR-71, are strong supporters of airborne reconnaissance.

In fact, former Secretary of State George Shultz pointed out last year that: "The SR-71 complements, rather than duplicates, satellite coverage."

This amendment offers us the opportunity to reaffirm our commitment to sound intelligence gathering. The disaster of the Challenger shuttle should have taught us that it is a mistake to put all of our eggs in one basket.

While satellites are invaluable, airborne reconnaissance not only provides a backup, but also ensures that our leaders will not be forced to rely on second-rate information—or worse yet, no information at all.

The SR-71 and the other program in this package are extremely important. As a result, the Senate Armed Services Committee, as well as both Appropriations Committees also provided funding for them.

World War II general, Hap Arnold, said it best when he mentioned that: "reconnaissance doesn't win battles, it wins wars."

Whether in use against terrorist nations, assisting the Navy in intelligence collection, or backing up our satellites in a crisis, airborne reconnaissance has proven invaluable to this Nation. At this time of rapid change in the world, let's not blind ourselves by eliminating all of our strategic airborne reconnaissance.

I urge your support for this vital amendment.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and concur therein.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. DICKS].

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, the House has been denied an opportunity to fully debate and vote on the administration's decision to abandon airborne reconnaissance, particularly strategic systems, as a result of the point of order that was just sustained.

I have to confess my disappointment and frustration with the disarray in which this leaves our airborne reconnaissance program. I view the decision to terminate the SR-71 aircraft system and to forego future airborne reconnaissance systems as an action that has very serious implications for our intelligence capabilities. Does the Chairman agree with my concern on this issue?

Mr. MURTHA. If the gentleman will yield, Mr. Speaker, I certainly do, and find that describing such cuts as "budgetary" begs vital questions about the wisdom of administration planning on key elements of the Nation's intelligence capabilities.

Mr. DICKS. The Congress has been waiting for several years for a sensible road map for airborne reconnaissance from the administration. Have we received such a plan to date?

Mr. MURTHA. No we have not, and that was the reason we tried to retain the important capabilities embodied in the SR-71 and to fund associated research and development for the future.

Mr. DICKS. I am convinced that these systems provide valuable and timely intelligence in peacetime and are particularly important for contingency operations. They would provide a survivable capability in many wartime operational situations. Without them we are forced to rely on a very limited number of systems that are likely to become increasingly vulnerable in the future. Regardless of the action here today, do you agree that the administration still must provide a coherent plan for providing needed airborne reconnaissance capabilities?

Mr. MURTHA. I do, and would hope that we can work with them in the context of the fiscal year 1991 budget, and hopefully even during the current fiscal year, to fashion such a program. In the absence of such an effort I remain committed to pursuing it as a congressional initiative.

Mr. DICKS. I thank the Chairman for his comments and stand ready to work with him toward this objective.

□ 1610

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend my subcommittee chairman JOHN MURTHA and the other Pennsylvanian on our subcommittee, the ranking minority member JOE MCDADE, for the fine leadership they provided in the conference on H.R. 3072, the Department of Defense Appropriations Act of 1990. Wrestling with this $286 billion bear is never easy, but being the master of conciliation they provided moved the process along in a most efficient and effective manner. When all the smoke had cleared, all parties to the conference had a bill they were comfortable with; a bill that came in some $2.4 billion under the administration's budget request. So again, I offer my colleagues from Pennsylvania, my congratulations for a job well done. High praise is also in order for the hard working staff of the Defense Appropriations Committee, that worked so diligently to make this one of the smoothest run conferences I've ever been privileged to be a part of.

Many critics point to these funds as wasteful and would like to drastically cut defense spending. With world events changing so rapidly someday they may be correct, but until then it would be unwise for Congress to take such actions, as we unfortunately don't live in a utopian society. These funds are necessary to protect the freedoms we all cherish as citizens of this great country. The defense budget has taken its fair share of cuts over the past 5 years, this being the fifth straight year of negative growth after inflation is taken into account. In closing, I would like to rise in strong support of the conference report and urge my colleagues to do likewise.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HEFNER].

Mr. HEFNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference agreement.

Mr. Speaker, the conference report on the Defense appropriations bill, which we will adopt today, addresses the possibility of maintaining the Letterman Army Medical Center at the Presidio of San Francisco, CA. We are requesting the Department to study the feasibility of leasing the hospital from the Department of Interior after the closure of the installation, and to report back to us. The intent of this directive is to ensure that the medical requirements of the military personnel in the San Francisco area met at the lowest possible cost. As chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Military Construction under which jurisdiction of base closure lies, I wish to clarify the section of the statement of the managers dealing with continued activities of the Letterman Army Medical Center. The statement suggests that the Secretary of the Army should work with the Secretary of the Interior to formulate a lease back arrangement to ensure contamination of activities at Letterman Army Medical Center. This directive for consideration of activities at Letterman in no way will prevent the planned construction of a replacement hospital at Fort Bragg, NC, which is currently programmed for fiscal year 1992. Furthermore, the concern for Letterman should not be viewed by the Department as an opportunity to reduce the commitment to operate the Fort Bragg facility as a medical center, and to accomplish a realignment of the Army's Graduate Medical Education Program. Therefore, any consideration of maintaining Army operations at Letterman should be limited to operations as a hospital, and not as a medical center.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the distinguished chairman of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee for his wisdom and perseverance in seeking options for the Presidio that will save the taxpayers money.

House and Senate appropriators have taken the important step of agreeing that the Secretary of the Army and the Department of the Interior should take a second look at preserving some of the important facilities at the Presidio.

Congresswoman BOXER and I have continued to make the arguments supporting the value of these facilities and we are very pleased that the conferees were both receptive and responsible to the issues we have researched and documented.

The feasibility study for the Presidio, in its transition to control by the Department of Interior, would review the importance of retaining Letterman Hosptial; the post commissary; the child care center; the 6th Army Reserve Units and housing facilities for possible lease back to the Department of Interior for income, among others. These facilities make up the major functions of the Presidio.

I believe the study will confirm the need to maintain Letterman Hospital for the many military retirees who depend on its health services. The Base Closure Commission agreed that Letterman Hospital is the primary mission of the Presidio and its continued operation will mean that quality health care will be available at less cost to taxpayers.

The study is in keeping with the base closure law and would assist the Department of Interior in its plans for a Park by identifying possible lease-back facilities to fund the park. Retaining these important facilities would minimize the economic burden to the Department of Interior and provide more flexibility in creating a beautiful national park.

Chairman MURTHA, because of his position on the Interior Appropriations Subcommittee and his chairmanship of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, has had special insight into the unique problems associated with the purported savings from the Presidio closure. The chairman made the effort to visit the Presidio and to talk with National Park Service officials in his effort to understand the complexities of this issue. I think the study recommended by the Defense Appropriators will serve the important function of making certain that savings to the Government are realized wherever possible as the Presidio changes hands.

The Presidio is a source of jobs, history, beauty and recreation. I believe the study will confirm the economic importance of preserving functions of the Presidio that will save money and create sources of revenue to aid the National Park Service in its work to enhance the Golden Gate National Recreation Area [GGNRA]. The study could make it possible to realize the dream Phillip Burton had in the early 1970's—an urban park of incomparable history and natural beauty—and the funding to make the dream possible.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARMEY].

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, at the outset of my remarks let me confess my enormous respect for the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA], the chairman of the subcommittee, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE], the ranking Republican on the subcommittee, and, for that matter for all Members of this body on the Committee on Appropriations and its subcommittees. To confess anything other than total respect would be the worst kind of folly, but I do mean it, in fact, in great sincerity. I do enjoy the gentlemen and enjoy working with them.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to call to the House's attention yet another attempt to defy the House's will and keep an obsolete military base open. Specifically it is an effort to save the Presidio in San Francisco.

In the dark of night someone inserted language not in the conference report itself, but in the statement of explanation accompanying it. If my information is correct, very few of the conferees were aware of this language. I understand it was inserted without their approval.

The language does this: First, it instructs the Department of the Interior and the Department of the Army to study the planned closure of the Presidio and to consider a way to maintain it as a military base. Second, it seeks to prevent the Defense Department from using any funds in its environmental restoration fund to perform any cleanup that may be necessary at the closed bases, a restriction which may complicate the base closures.

Mr. Speaker, this may sound innocuous or technical. It is not. This is an attempt by some Members of the Congress to use their influence to save the Presidio, and they are doing this against the clear wishes of the House.

My colleagues may remember that the House passed the all-or-nothing base closing bill on October 12, 1988, by a vote of 370 to 31. On April 18 of this year we voted 381 to 43 to defeat a resolution to stop the closures. Then, when the military construction appropriation bill came before the House, the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. BOXER] was given permission to offer an amendment to save the Presidio specifically. She was dissuaded from offering it in the face of overwhelming opposition. There is, thus, no question, absolutely none, that the House supports the base closing program and desires that it continue. A few words in explanation of a conference report does not change that.

Mr. Speaker, let me make a few points about the Presidio.

First, the districts of many Members are affected by the base closure process. Several of our colleagues have argued that their own bases should be spared. There is no reason that the case of the Presidio deserves special consideration.

Second, unlike other base closures, the closing of the Presidio will cause little economic hardship to the local community. It is on prime real estate in an urban area. Its closing will have minimal effect on local employment.

Third, current Federal law, authored by the late Phillip Burton of California, requires that the Presidio be given to the Park Service once the military leaves. If that is what the Members of the San Francisco delegation object to, I suggest they simply change the law. That way the Presidio, or parts of it, could be sold at market price producing an immense savings to the Government. Perhaps the city of San Francisco would like to buy it, in which case they could maintain it for the people of San Francisco rather than by the American taxpayers.

In any event, Mr. Speaker, I would simply like to remind all concerned that the base closure program has strong support in this body. I do not believe any exceptions to it will be tolerated. The base closing language in the explanation of this conference report can be and should be disregarded.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to read one small part of a letter from the Secretary of Defense after he had presented the empirical evidence to support what all of us know intuitively about the Presidio. He says, and I quote, that in short closing the Presidio is good for the defense and for the taxpayers. It will result in a significant annual savings and the payback is within the 6-year criteria established for the Commission's work.

Mr. Speaker, let me remind the Members of this body that I will personally remain diligent in watching the progress of this legislation through its scheduled implementation beginning in January of 1990, and to the best of my ability there will be no exceptions to the all-or-nothing deal that we accept overwhelmingly in this body and by which other Members equally and even more pained are happily and willingly abiding.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWIFT). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate Amendment No. 28: Page 10, line 9, after "Mission" insert ": Provided, That $211,239,000 shall be used only for operating, maintaining, and basing the SR-71 survivable reconnaissance system at the same level of aircraft, depots and other support as was operated during September 1989: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to disestablish or reduce the SR-71 survivable reconnaissance program: Provided further, That none of the funds made available in this Act may be used to disestablish or reduce the operation of the Air Force and Air Force Reserve WC-130 Weather Reconnaissance Squadrons".

Senate amendment No. 49: Page 19, line 9, strike out all after "Vehicle" down to and including "vehicles" in line 13.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken by said amendment, insert ": Provided further, That the Department of the Army shall expeditiously procure an improved vehicle intercommunication system with a goal of an initial procurement contract not later than September 30, 1990".

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I ask for recognition on this motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTEN].

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report and to compliment the chairman of the subcommittee, as well as the other members of the subcommittee, for a job well done.

LONG ASSOCIATION WITH DEFENSE

Mr. Speaker, I am a longtime member of this subcommittee. I served first on the Naval Appropriations Subcommittee, and then on the Air Force and Defense, including Military Construction Subcommittees with the exception of about 2 years after World War II when Chairman Cannon asked me to serve on a Subcommittee on Government Corporations. After about 2 years Chairman Cannon asked me to go back on the Defense Subcommittee.

I have been a regular visitor with our President on military matters from President Roosevelt to President Bush—10 Presidents in all.

During World War II, as a member of the Naval Subcommittee, I visited virtually all areas of the war—Europe, China, and the Philippines. I was in Frankfurt, Germany, when our troops were to have gone into Berlin, and we let Russia talk us into letting them go in first.

HIGHLY QUALIFIED SUBCOMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

All this, Mr. Speaker, leads up to the fact that I believe today we have a fine subcommittee and well informed chairman in JACK MURTHA, of Pennsylvania.

In recent years he and I with several other members of the subcommittee have inspected our Pacific operations, our Atlantic operations, and our Central American operations where we have been briefed by our top generals and admirals on the problems as they see them. He has a special concern for the service families and the matters that are important to their welfare and morale.

He is supported by a fine ranking Republican member, JOE MCDADE, and all the other members of the subcommittee.

NEED FOR PRODUCTIVE JOBS

Now when we face a period of pulling in our military commitments, giving due regard to the shock to many, many people in the services and out of cutbacks, I do not believe we could find a better qualified person to guide, as well as to protect our domestic economy, find ways to keep our economy going and to maintain a strong national defense than JACK MURTHA—who understands that you must have a strong domestic economy and the support of the people if you are to have a strong military defense.

To prepare for this change, I introduced H.R. 3029, along with Chairman MURTHA, to restore the jobs bill which worked so well in 1983 to be ready to meet the changed conditions at home and around the world. We should realize that we must have productive jobs to absorb those who will need jobs. When I say "jobs," I mean "productive" jobs. We must be prepared.

Some time ago we introduced H.R. 2540 which would restore revenue sharing which had a great record, for 14 years, assisting in the growth and well-being of over 39,000 communities, counties, and cities of the Nation.

The need for restoration of these programs, for the benefit of our Nation's wealth exists now and could well be required for those displaced by reason of limits placed on our military commitment, and the reduction in military contracts.

If so, we have the bills introduced and ready.

I would like to point out here that we do look after our country. As chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, having served since 1943, on the Appropriations Committee, I am very proud of what we have done in developing and protecting the physical assets of our Nation. Now that we have serious financial problems today, I fear we are neglecting necessary upkeep of our national assets. I call your attention to the fact that since 1934, when we started meeting local problems with national programs, our wealth has increased 41 times, and since 1941, when I came here, our physical wealth has increased 36 times.

I say to my colleagues, whatever your age may be, if you look around and remember how conditions were that you first remember and see the progress that we've made, you can realize just how sound a job we have done.

Unfortunately, may I say, we have with time incurred a national debt which is a serious problem today. But whatever the debt is, we need to look after the protection and development of the physical property, our rivers and harbors, our roads and highways, our forests, and our soil, with productive jobs, where we have something of value to show for our effort. It is evident that we face some change as we scale back our military commitment and spending.

Mr. Speaker, the conference agreement includes a grant of $3,000,000 to the National Center for Physical Acoustics for research and development centering on ocean acoustics as it applies to advanced anti-submarine warfare acoustics issues with focus on ocean bottom acoustics—seismic coupling, sea-surface and bottom scattering, oceanic ambient noise, underwater sound propagation and other such projects as may be agreed upon, including up to $500,000 to provide such special equipment as required.

Mr. Speaker, I truly believe we will have to turn more and more to the National Guard and Reserve, where the members contribute to the economy during the week and train on the weekend.

To this end, we have provided funds for three armories, at Ackerman, Amory, and Iuka. The bill also includes funds for land acquisition at Camp McCain which will provide training opportunities for guardsmen and reservists in northern Mississippi.

May I add that I am glad we have worked out a transfer of 1989 funds for joint operation of the airfield at Grenada, MS, by the National Guard and the city of Grenada.

Again, Mr. Speaker, this subcommittee has again done a great job.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MCDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWIFT). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve all points of order on the motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE].

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER].

Mr. RITTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to call attention to the merits of this point of order and try to alert my colleagues that there are some projects here which are extremely meritorious. The fact is that some of these projects, one in particular at Lehigh University in my congressional district, is a project that funds research facilities to support our defense industrial base.

The DOD is not providing funding for research facilities. This is the responsibility of Congress. It is appropriate for Congress to seek to put funds into this most important area—especially Lehigh University's National Center for Industrial Innovation. At Lehigh University, we are talking about a proven track record: research in the fields of computer integrated manufacturing, ceramics, polymers, and composites to name a few. All of these scientific fields are crucial to the carrying out of our long-range research and development mission in the Department of Defense * * * and all of these areas are crucial to a competitive America.

Lehigh University has the proven track record, tradition, and most promising site for a National Center for Industrial Innovation that can serve as a focus for our nation's efforts to regain its competitive manufacturing edge.

Mr. Speaker, Congress is not making the kinds of strategic investments into our nation's university research facilities that we should. We are not investing in the research infrastructure of our nation's universities. It is not at all inappropriate in a bill such as this, $300 billion strong, to take some resources and devote them to a national center for industrial innovation. America's defense industrial base is being eroded. We know that. But, tragically, we continue to ignore the deterioration of university research facilities. We continue to ignore them in the competitions within the Defense Department or within other Federal agencies. It just seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that we have an opportunity here to provide a very tiny, tiny percentage of this DOD appropriation bill to support the kind of essential research and development infrastructure at our universities that will ensure our nation's economic and national security into the next century. We simply have not had the opportunity to support this critical area otherwise, given the nature of the existing programs.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues, I urge Members to oppose this point of order, decide in favor of the language as structured, and make a decision, and a good investment for the future of this country, its industrial base, and its national security. Again, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania for yielding.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA,] violates clause 7 of rule XVI in that it is not germane to the subject matter under consideration, and I would seek to speak to my point of order.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, we concede the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWIFT). The point of order is conceded and sustained.

Senate amendment No. 186: Page 73, strike out lines 1 to 5, and insert:

SEC. 9062. (a) Congress makes the following findings—

(1) The United States Government relies on satellites for communications, early warning of attack, monitoring compliance with arms control agreements, and many other vital national security functions;

(2) Such satellites constitute vital integral parts of many United States weapons systems, command, control and communications systems, and other military systems;

(3) It is essential to the national security of the United States that United States Government satellites not be vulnerable to anit-satellite attacks;

(4) It is in the national security interests of the United States and its allies to deter the development and testing of anti-satellite weapons by the Soviet Union;

(5) It is in the national security interests of the United States to undertake a balanced response to Soviet anti-satellite capabilities, which includes a measured ASAT program;

(6) Key agencies of the Executive Branch are examining options for specific anti-satellite arms control measures; Therefore:

(b)(1) The Executive Branch should conclude its examination of specific anti-satellite arms control options and rules of the road for space activities without delay, and include its recommendations and conclusions from this examination in the report to Congress already required by the Conference Report on the Fiscal Year 1989 Dire Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act;

(2) The President shall—with a view toward considering how to improve United States ASAT arms control monitoring capabilities—assess the national security implications for the United States of a mutual deployment of cooperative monitoring and verification technologies; the results of such assessment shall be included in the above mentioned report;

(3) As soon as practicable, the President should take advantage of the forum provided by the ongoing Defense and Space Talks with the Soviet Union to explore—consistent with the conclusions of the above-mentioned report—adequately verifiable limitations on the development, testing, production, and deployment of weapons capable of directly threatening United States military satellites.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 197, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the section number named in said amendment, insert "9078".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 198: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9069. None of the funds appropriated by this Act or hereafter shall be obligated for the second career training program authorized by Public Law 96-347.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 198, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the section number named in said amendment, insert "9079".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 199: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9070. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available in this Act shall be obligated or expended for salaries or expenses during the current fiscal year for the purposes of demilitarization of surplus nonautomatic firearms less than .50 caliber.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 199, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the section number named in said amendment, insert "9080".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] seek time?

Mr. MURTHA. Yes, Mr. Speaker, I do.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURTHA. I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to clarify one matter that pertains to the production of the upgraded Titan solid rocket motors. The conference report expresses agreement with the Air Force's most recent plan, which requires that 7 of the next 10 motors be steel-case solid rocket motors. I understand that these will be purchased by options as specified in the Air Force procurement plan. Is that correct?

Mr. MURTHA. That is correct.

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Then all seven motor sets will not be purchased in 1 year—is that correct?

Mr. MURTHA. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Can I also conclude that if the Air Force does not need all seven steel-case motor sets, it could determine not to exercise follow-on options with some consideration of the issue by the Committee on Appropriations? Am I correct on this understanding?

Mr. MURTHA. Since the Air Force is awarding contracts this fiscal year for long-lead materials for seven steel-case motors, we would hope that their plans would not change, in order to avoid wasteful expenditures. However, as always the Defense Subcommittee would be willing to review the matter next year should the Air Force change their plans.

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I thank the subcommittee chairman.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Are there further requests for time?

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 200: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9071. No funds available to the Department of Defense during the current fiscal year may be usd to enter into any contract with a term of eighteen months or more or to extend or renew any contract for a term of eighteen months or more, for any vessel, aircraft or vehicles, through a lease, charter, or similar agreement without previously having been submitted to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate in the budgetary process: Provided, That any contractual agreement which imposes an estimated termination liability (excluding the estimated value of the leased item at the time of termination) on the Government exceeding 50 per centum of the original purchase value of the vessel, aircraft, or vehicle must have specific authority in an appropriation Act for the obligation of 10 per centum of such termination liability.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 217: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9088. Section 30 of chapter 2B of the Arms Export Control Act, Public Law 97-392, is amended by striking "on a direct" and inserting in lieu thereof "using" and striking "basis" and inserting in lieu thereof "practices which restrict actual delivery directly".

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 217, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert:

SEC. 9097. Section 30(a) of chapter 2B of the Arms Export Control Act, Public Law 97-392, is amended by inserting "either (i)" immediately after the phrase "such a company" in the first sentence thereof and by adding immediately before the period at the end of that sentence "or (ii) in the case of ammunition parts subject to subsection (b) of this section, using commercial practices which restrict actual delivery directly to a friendly foreign country or international organization pursuant to approval under section 38 of this Act".

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. McDADE Mr. Speaker, I seek recognition on the motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWIFT). The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] will be recognized for 30 minute.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE].

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON].

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity first to express my great appreciation to the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA], and its ranking member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE], who have done an outstanding job, together with all the members of this subcommittee, and to the extraordinarily capable staff that we have on this subcommittee.

We have a budget of some $286 billion. Every year there are just tremendous problems accompanying the allocation of those funds, and I just have not seen the process ever work as smoothly as it did this time. The staff did one heck of a job, and all the membership worked together in harmony, in a bipartisan fashion, and I want to commend them all for their very, very hard and difficult work.

Mr. Speaker, if I now may get the attention of the chairman of the subcommittee, I would like to propound a couple of questions to him.

Mr. Speaker, I will say to the subcommittee chairman that it is my understanding that in section 9097 of this conference report regarding the overseas sales of ammunition the conferees intended the term, "ammunition," to include all those items listed in the military services ammunition procurement accounts, that is, small arms, artillery ammunition, tank ammunition, fuses, mines, including the MICLIC rocket motor and line charge, as well as signals, flares, and demolitions; is that correct?

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, let me state that the gentleman is correct. That is the conferees' intention.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman of the subcommittee, and once again I would like to compliment him and the ranking member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE], as well as all the members and the staff of this subcommittee, for an extraordinary achievement.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 218: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9089. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, during the current fiscal year, the Secretary of Defense may acquire the depot maintenance and repair of aircraft, vehicles, vessels and components, through competition between Department of Defense depot maintenance activities and private firms: Provided, That the Secretary shall certify that successful bids include comparable estimates of all direct and indirect costs for both public and private bids.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 220, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert:

SEC. 9099. Of the funds appropriated by this Act, no more than $2,500,000 shall be available for the health care demonstration project regarding chiropractic care required by section 632(b) of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1985, Public Law 98-525.

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 221: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9092. None of the funds appropriated by this Act may be used to pay health care providers under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) for services determined under the CHAMPUS Peer Review Organization (PRO) Program to be not medically or psychologically necessary. The Secretary of Defense may by regulation adopt any quality and utilization review requirements and procedures in effect for the Peer Review Organization Program under title XVIII of the Social Security Act (Medicare) that the Secretary determines necessary, and may adapt the Medicare requirements and procedures to the circumstances of the CHAMPUS PRO Program as the Secretary determines appropriate.

Senate amendment No. 224: Page 79, line 4 insert:

SEC. 9095. USE OF ACCOUNTS FOR SALES OF PROPERTIES BY AGENCIES.—(a) AVAILABILITY OF AMOUNTS IN ACCOUNTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL—Notwithstanding any other law, in addition to the purposes for which they are now available, amounts in the accounts described in paragraph (2) shall, after December 22, 1987, be available for use in any fiscal year for all purposes (including use for purchase) involving any public sale of property by an agency of the United States. In conducting any such sale, such an agency shall accept, in the same manner as cash, any amount tendered from such an account, and the balance of the account shall be adjusted by the Secretary of the Treasury or the Administrator of General Services, as applicable, to reflect that transaction.

(2) ACCOUNTS DESCRIBED—The accounts referred to in subparagraph (B) are—

(A) the account in the Treasury established by the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to section 12(b) of Public Law 94-204 (43 U.S.C. 1611 note), referred to in that section as the "Cook Inlet Region, Incorporated property account"; and

(B) the surplus property account established by the Administrator of General Services pursuant to section 317 of Public Law 98-146 (16 U.S.C. 396f).

(b) TREATMENT OF AMOUNT RECEIVED BY AGENCIES FROM ACCOUNTS.—In any case in which an agency of the United States that conducts a public sale of property is authorized by law to use the proceeds of such sale for a specific purpose, the Secretary of the Treasury shall, without restriction, treat as cash receipts any amount which is—

(1) tendered from an account described in subsection (b)(2);

(2) received by the agency as proceeds of such a sale; and

(3) used by the agency for that specific purpose.

(c) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall hereafter use funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated to make any cash transfer that is necessary under subsection (b) to allow an agency to use the proceeds of a public sale of property.

(d) AGENCY DEFINED. In this section the term "agency" includes—

(1) any instrumentality of the United States; and

(2) any element of an agency.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 224, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of section number "9095" named in said amendment, insert "9101".

(3) by striking out "October 1, 1990" in subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof "January 1, 1990"; and

(4) by striking out "fiscal year 1990" in subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof "the first quarter of fiscal year 1990".

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 228: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9099. The Secretary of the Air Force shall transfer not less than $5,000,000 from funds available to the Air Force for research, development, test and evaluation for fiscal year 1990 to the Army for the sole purpose of funding highest priority security improvements at the Kwajalein Test Range. The Secretary of the Army shall provide $2,500,000 for the same purpose from funds available to the Army for research, development, test and evaluation for fiscal year 1990. Funds made available by the Secretary of the Army for such purpose may not be made available from funds otherwise available for the United States Army Kwajalein Atoll Command.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 228, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the section number named in said amendment, insert "9105".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 229: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9100. (a) Of the amounts appropriated for research, development, test and evaluation under title IV of this Act, not more than $26,552,000 may be made available through the National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund for grants to support ongoing projects for strategic materials research, facilities, equipment, and related activities at institutions of higher education;

(b) The Secretary of Defense may make the grant awards pursuant to subsection (a) without regard to the requirements of sections 2361 and 2304 of title 10, U.S.C., which are superceded specifically by this section for the purposes of making the above mentioned grants: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense shall transmit a report, within sixty days of enactment of this Act, to the Committees on Appropriations and Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives which contains an evaluation on whether such grant supports the objectives established by the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act, as amended: Provided further, That no funds shall be obligated for grant awards pursuant to subsection (a) until thirty days after receipt of such report by the above-named Committees: Provided further, That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, no funds provided in any other appropriate Act for fiscal year 1990 may be obligated for strategic material research facilities centers.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 229, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken by said amendment, insert:

SEC. 9106. (a) Of the amounts appropriated for research, development, test and evaluation under Title IV of this Act, not more than $26,552,000 may be made available for grants to support ongoing projects for strategic materials research, through the National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund, for facilities, equipment, and related activities at institutions of higher education;

(b) The Secretary of Defense may make grant awards to institutions of higher education, as follows: University of Utah, $8,900,000, University of Hawaii at Manoa, $6,000,000, University of Texas at El Paso, $4,152,000, University of Idaho, $4,000,000, Loyola College of Maryland, $3,500,000;

(c) The grants specified in subsection (b) may be made without regard to, and (to the extent necessary) in contravention of, subsection (a) of section 2361 of title 10, United States Code (which is hereby superseded to the extent necessary to make such grants), and shall be made without regard to subsection (b)(2) of such section, and may be made without regard to the requirements of section 2304 of title 10, United States Code;

(d) The Secretary of Defense shall transmit a report, within 60 days of enactment of this Act, to the Committee on Appropriations and Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives which contains an evaluation on whether each grant supports the objectives established by the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act, as amended: Provided, That no funds shall be obligated for grant awards pursuant to subsection (a) until thirty days after receipt of such report by the above-named Committees;

(e) References to section 2361 of title 10, United States Code in this section refer to that section as it existed on November 10, 1989 and as it is amended by section 252 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991, to the extent that provision is enacted into law.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, did I understand that the gentleman from Pennsylvania moved that the House insist on its disagreement in his motion?

Mr. MURTHA. No, Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my motion so the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE] can make a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] is withdrawn.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. KOLBE

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. KOLBE moves that the House insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 229.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I wish to have time.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE].

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, this goes back to the earlier amendment that we had, amendment No. 94, in which on a point of order, the projects that had previously been approved and added by the House were struck. The Senate was a bit more clever on its part. They protected theirs by adding language which does not permit us to make a point of order against the particular projects that have been offered here.

Mr. Speaker, it is my view that what is good for the goose is good for the gander, that we ought to simply insist that both sides be treated the same, and that is that the House, having on its own here taken out the projects that have been added by its conferees, ought to do the same here with regard to the Senate projects.

We are talking here about five particular projects earmarked at five particular universities.

Mr. Speaker, it goes beyond that. This amendment, as it was offered by the Senate in the conference committee, actually strikes all of the competition requirements for the $26 million that these five projects amount to.

Mr. Speaker, I would hope that this body would agree with this motion. They did not have a chance to vote or debate on the question of the House projects because it was on a point of order, and I certainly would think that the Members of this body, particularly in order to give ourselves as much maneuvering room with the other body as possible, that we would say that we are doing only what is fair here, and we are striking the particular provisions here as it relates to these five university projects that were added by conferees of the other body.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise briefly to speak in opposition to the motion of the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE].

Mr. Speaker, this is an ill-advised action in my judgment, and I hope the House will vote it down resoundingly. It merits very little discussion. What we have seen here is an effort to interrupt the comity between the two bodies that resulted in a conference agreement. I believe that, as a signatory to that conference agreement, and may I say a unanimous signatory agreement, we reached an accommodation with the other body. Now unfortunately for reasons known best to them it is being unravelled.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that the House will not accede to that request, and, Mr. Speaker, I hope we will vote this motion down.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDADE. I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTLETT].

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, I want to say a couple of words in support of the amendment of the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE].

First, on a previous amendment or a previous point of order we struck out these specially earmarked research projects that have been placed into the bill by the House conferees. So, what the amendment of the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE] does is to provide the same treatment for the Senate-offered packages so that those projects that were offered after they have been offered by the House conferees will be treated exactly the same for those projects that are offered by Senate conferees. This is the Senate conferee amendment which ought to be accorded the same treatment, No. 1.

No. 2, Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of research in these areas. I think every Member of the House is. The research ought to be first, authorized; second, appropriated and then completed in the normal course of business, not earmarked with a special item for a particular university, as is done here. The House earlier knocked out the amendment that would have earmarked six items for House conferees. This provides the same and equal treatment for conferees for projects that were placed in there by conferees from the other body.

Mr. Speaker, I think that the House should accept this and accept it quickly so we can move on with the Nation's defense.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is, Will the House insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 229?

The House insisted on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 229.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 230: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9101. From any appropriations in this Act, $1,000,000 shall be made available for maintenance and repair of equipment and facilities and for tooling at the government owned William Langer Jewel Bearing Plant.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 230, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the section number named in said amendment, insert: "9107".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 232: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9103. Funds available to the Department of Defense during the current fiscal year may be transferred to applicable appropriations or otherwise made available for obligation by the Secretary of Defense to repair or replace real property, facilities, equipment, and other Department of Defense assets damaged by hurricane Hugo in September 1989: Provided, That funds transferred shall be available for the same purpose and the same time period as the appropriations to which transferred: Provided further, That the Secretary shall notify the Congress promptly of all transfers made pursuant to this authority and that such transfer authority shall be in addition to that provided elsewhere in this Act.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 233: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9104. Up to $20,000,000 of funds available to the Department of Defense in fiscal year 1990 may be transferred to, and consolidated with, funds made available to carry out the provisions of section 23 of the Arms Export Control Act and may be used for any of the purposes for which such funds may be used, notwithstanding section 10 of Public Law 91-672 or any other provision of law: Provided, That funds transferred pursuant to this section shall be made available only for Jordan to maintain previously purchased United States-origin defense articles: Provided further, That funds transferred pursuant to this section shall be available to Jordan on a grant basis notwithstanding any requirement for repayment: Provided further, That for purposes of section 10 of Public Law 91-672, funds so transferred shall be deemed to be authorized to be appropriated for the account into which they are transferred: Provided further, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President of the Senate and the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, and the Committees on Appropriations and Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives shall be notified through regular reprogramming procedures prior to the transfer of funds pursuant to the authority granted in this section.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 233, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of section number "9104" named in said amendment, insert "9109" and immediately preceding "SEC.", insert the following center head:

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 234: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9105. During the current fiscal year, the Secretary of Defense may transfer not more than $135,000,000 of funds available to the Department of Defense to the appropriation "Atomic Energy Defense Activities", to be merged with and to be available for the same purposes and for the same time period as the appropriation to which transferred: Provided, That none of the funds to be transferred shall be from procurement or military construction appropriation accounts.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 234, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the section number named in said amendment, insert "9110" and immediately preceeding "SEC.", insert the following center head:

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 235: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9106. (a) Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The United States, as executive agent for the United Nations Command, plays a key role in preserving the armistice which has maintained peace on the Korean peninsula for 36 years.

(2) Partly because of the significant contribution that the United States has made toward preserving the peace, the Republic of Korea has been able to focus national efforts on economic and political development.

(3) The United States remains committed to the security and territorial integrity of the Republic of Korea under the terms of the Mutual Defense Treaty of 1954.

(b) It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) until North Korea abandons its desire to reunite the Korean peninsula by force and ceases to seek modern weapon systems from foreign powers, the threat to the Republic of Korea will remain clear and present and the United States military presence in the Repulic of Korea will continue to be vital to the deterrence of North Korean aggression toward the Republic of Korea;

(2) although a United States military presence is essential unit the Republic of Korea has achieved a balance of military with the Democratic Peoples Republic of Korea, the United States should reassess the force structure required for the security of the Republic of Korea and the protection of the United States interests in northeast Asia;

(3) the United States should not remove any armed forces from the Korean peninsula until a thorough study has been made of the present and projected roles, missions, and force levels of the United States forces in the Republic of Korea; and

(4) before April 1, 1990, the President should submit to Congress a report that contains a detailed assessment of the need for a United States military presence in the Republic of Korea, including—

(A) an assessment of (i) the current imbalance between the armed forces of the Republic of Korea and the armed forces of the Democratic Peoples Republic of Korea, and (ii) the efforts by the Republic of Korea to eliminate the current adverse imbalance;

(B) the means by which the Republic of Korea can increase its contributions to its own defense and permit the United States to assume a supporting role in the defense of the Republic of Korea;

(C) the ways in which the roles and missions of the United States in Korea are likely to be revised in order to reflect the anticipated increase in the national defense contributions of the Republic of Korea and to effectuate an equal partnership between the United States and the Republic of Korea in the common defense of the Republic of Korea;

(D) an assessment of the actions taken by the Republic of Korea in conjunction with the United States to reduce the cost of stationing United States military forces in the Republic of Korea;

(E) an assessment of the willingness of the South Korean people to sustain and support a continued United States military presence on the Korean peninsula; and

(F) a discussion of the plans for a long-term United States military presence throughout the Pacific region, the anticipated national security threats in that region, the roles and missions of the Armed Forces of the United States for the protection of the national security interests of the United States in that region, the force stucture necessary for the Armed Forces to perform those roles and missions, any force restructuring that could result in a reduction in the cost of performing such roles and missions effectively.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 235, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the section number named in said amendment, insert "9111".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 237: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

(b) The Secretary shall design a comprehensive strategy to involve civilian and military employees of the Department of Defense in partnership programs with elementary schools and secondary schools civilian and military. This strategy shall include:

(1) A review of existing programs to identify and expand opportunities for such employees to be school volunteers.

(2) The designation of a senior official in each branch of the Armed Services who will be responsible for establishing school volunteer and partnership programs in each branch of the Armed Services and for developing school volunteer and partnership programs.

(3) The encouragement of civilian and military employees of the Department of Defense to participate in school volunteer and partnership programs.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 237, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of section number "9108" named in said amendment, insert "9112".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA).

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 238: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9109. The Secretary of the Army shall execute such documents and take such other action as may be necessary to release to the New Jersey Turnpike Authority, a corporate body organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey, the reversionary right, described in subsection (b), reserved to the United States in and to that parcel of land conveyed by the United States to the New Jersey Turnpike Authority pursuant to the Act entitled "An Act to authorize the conveyance of certain lands within Caven Point Terminal and Ammunition Loading Pier, New Jersey, to the New Jersey Turnpike Authority", approved February 18, 1956 (70 Stat. 19). The release provided for in this section shall be made without consideration by the New Jersey Turnpike Authority.

(b) The reversionary right referred to in subsection (a) is the right reserved to the United States by section 6 of the Act referred to in subsection (a) which provides that in the event the property conveyed by the United States pursuant to such Act ceases to be used for street or road purposes and other purposes connected therewith or related thereto for a period of two consecutive years, the title to such land, including all improvements made by the New Jersey Turnpike Authority, shall immediately revert to the United States without any payment by the United States.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Murtha moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 238, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows:

In lieu of the section number named in said amendment, insert: "9113".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA).

The motion was agreed to.

□ 1710

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 239: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9110. (a) The Senate of the United States finds that—

(1) Public Law 99-606 requires that a report (Special Nevada Report), evaluating the impact on Nevada of the cumulative effect of continued or renewed land and airspace withdrawals by the military, be submitted to Congress no later than November 1991;

(2) Public Law 99-606 also requires that appropriate mitigation measures be developed to offset any negative impacts caused by the military land and airspace withdrawal; and

(3) the military has continued to propose additional land and airspace withdrawals prior to submiting the Special Nevada Report required under Public Law 99-606 to Congress;

(b) Therefore, it is the sense of the Senate that, absent critical national security requirements, the further withdrawal of public lands or airspace in Nevada be halted until the Special Nevada Report is submitted to Congress as required under Public Law 99-606.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 239, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the section number named in said amendment, insert "9114" and, in the two instances where "Senate" is named in said amendment, insert in lieu thereof "Congress".

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 240: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9111. (a) Congress makes the following findings:

(1) As of July 18, 1989, the Federal prison population reached an all-time high of 49,418 inmates.

(2) The design capacity of Federal prisons is only 31,091 beds.

(3) The overcrowding rate at Federal prisons is 159 percent of capacity.

(4) The Bureau of Prisons projects that the Federal prison population will exceed 83,500 by 1995.

(5) The President declared a war on drugs and has endorsed the idea of using old military facilities as prisons.

(6) The Federal Bureau of Prisons states in its 1988 report that using old military bases is the most cost efficient method to obtain more space to house minimum security offenders.

(b) It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) in selecting an agency or instrumentality for receipt of property or a facility scheduled for closure under the Base Closure and Realignment Act (Public Law 100-526; 102 Stat. 2629; 10 U.S.C. 2687), the Secretary of Defense should give priorty to the Bureau of Prisons; and

(2) the Commission on Alternative Utilization of Military Facilities should give priority consideration to utilizing the military facilities that are scheduled for closure as minimum security prisons; and

(3) before making any decision about transferring any real property or facility pursuant to the Base Closure and Realignment Act, the Secretary of Defense should consult with the Governor of the State and the heads of the local governments in which the real property or facility is located and should consider any plan by the local government concerned for the use of such property.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 240, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert:

SEC. 9115. (a) Such sums as may be necessay for fiscal year 1990 pay raises for programs funded by this Act shall be absorbed within the levels appropriated in this Act.

(b) Sums appropriated in title I of this Act, Military Personnel, are reduced by $63,000,000, which will be realized by reducing active duty personel by 5,000: Provided, That this subsection does not apply to the reserve components.

(c) Sums appropriated in title II of this Act, Operation and Maintenance, are reduced by $75,000,000, which will be realized by reducing civilian personnel by 2,500: Provided, That this subsection does not apply to the reserve components.

SEC. 9116. Of the funds made available in this Act and in the Military Construction Appropriations Act, 1990 for fiscal year 1990 for research, development, test, and evaluation of the Rail Garrison MX and Small ICBM systems, procurement of Mark 21 reentry systems, advance procurement of Rail Garrison MX components or materials, and construction of facilities to support the Rail Garrison MX system, $150,000,000 is hereby reduced as determined by the Secretary of Defense.

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 241: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9112. (a)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) none of funds appropriated by this Act may be obligated for the procurement of the Airborne Self-Protection Jammer (ASPJ) until further operational testing of the ASPJ is conducted and completed and the reports required by subsection (b) have been submitted in accordance with that subsection.

(2) Paragraph (1) does not limit the obligation of funds for the production, maintenance, and operation of 18 Airborne Self-Protection Jammer (ASPJ) production verification units for the purpose of conducting further operational and developmental testing.

(b) Upon the completion of the operational testing conducted in connection with the Airborne Self-Protection Jammer (ASPJ) program, the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation, and the Comptroller General of the United States shall each submit to the Committees on Appropriations and Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the conduct and results of such testing.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 241, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following:

SEC. 9117. None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available for payments under the Department of Defense contract with the Louisiana State University Medical Center involving the use of cats for Brain Missile Wound Research, and the Department of Defense shall not make payments under such contract from funds obligated prior to the date of the enactment of this Act, except as necessary for costs incurred by the contractor prior to the enactment of this Act, and until thirty legislative days after the final General Accounting Office report on the aforesaid contract is submitted for review to the Committees on Appropriations in the House and Senate.

SEC. 9118. None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available for bone trauma research at Letterman Army Institute of Research until the Secretary of the Army has certified to the Committees on Appropriations of the House and Senate that this research has a military application, it is being conducted in accordance with the standards set by an animal care and use committee, and the research is not duplicative of research already conducted by a manufacturer or any other research organization.

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, we have worked out the situation with the Air Force so that we do not need to insist on this language. The Air Force has been very forthcoming, and has indicated an airplane could be designated. We certainly feel very strongly about it because of the Speaker's high responsibility and the fact that increased terrorist activity is present and so forth, we feel it is very important to ensure security for the Speaker and everybody agrees to that. It is just a matter that we could not agree to the language, but I think we have it worked out with the Air Force, so we withdraw that provision.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURTHA. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I just want to commend my colleague, the chairman of the committee, for working this out, and I want to thank the other members who worked with the Secretary of Defense and the Air Force on this important matter.

I think this is a good solution. We have received very significant assurances here that the Speaker's requirements will be taken care of, and I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me on this point.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. MURTHA. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman for yielding to me, and I want to recommend both gentleman from Pennsylvania for their leadership in this matter in deleting section 119, but to handle the situation directly with the Air Force. I think the entire House appreciates it.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. MURTHA. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me, too.

I am glad we were able to work this out in this manner.

As I understand, what we are now assured is that an aircraft that will be made available to the Speaker as he needs it for official business, but that we will not have an airplane sitting on the runway all the time just awaiting the Speaker's use. Is that essentially what we have here?

Mr. MURTHA. That is exactly right, although we never intended to have an airplane set aside, as we discussed. This will certainly clarify the situation and we think we have it all worked out.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman, and I appreciate the gentleman's cooperation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the substitute motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The substitute motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 242: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9113. (a) It is the sense of the Senate that United States participation in a multilateral anti-narcotics strike force, as called for in sections 4101 and 4103 of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 (Public Law 100-690), should include the full range of appropriate law enforcement and anti-drug abuse agencies, and that consideration be given to aiding such a strike force by funding from appropriate sources for multilateral intelligence-sharing, multilateral training of law enforcement personnel, and multilateral support for crop substitution, drug treatment, drug research and drug education programs.

(b) Funds made available under this Act for Department of Defense drug interdiction activities may be expended to fund the participation of United States armed forces in conjunction with appropriate United States law enforcement and anti-drug abuse agencies, in accordance with other applicable laws, in such a strike force.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 242, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of section number "9113" named in said amendment, insert "9120" and, in the one instance were "Senate" is named in said amendment, insert in lieu thereof: "Congress".

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 243: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9114. FEASIBILITY STUDY OF LAND TRANSFER FOR USE AS A CORRECTIONAL FACILITY.—(a)(1) The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the United States Attorney General, shall conduct a study of the feasibility of selling or otherwise transferring to the Commonwealth of Virginia, subdivisions thereof, or any combination of subdivisions thereof, a parcel of land approximately 100 acres not more than 100 miles from the southern boundary of Arlington County, from the military installations within Virginia which encompass land that may be suitable for use by the Commonwealth of Virginia, subdivisions thereof, or any combination of subdivisions thereof, as a site for medium security correctional facility for persons sentenced in the courts of Virginia or in the United States District Court in Virginia.

(2) The study required by paragraph (1) shall address, at a minimum, the following issues:

(A) Whether there are parcels of land within those installations of the size described which could be released from Federal control without severely affecting the present missions of such installations.

(B) A description of the parcels of land described in subparagraph (A).

(C) A description of the effects, if any, transfer of such parcels of land from Federal control would have on the ability of the Secretary of Defense to effectively carry out the mission of the Department of Defense.

(D) An analysis of the risk, if any, that might be posed to military personnel and their dependents housed on such installations by the operation of such a correctional facility on the parcels of land described in subpargraph (A).

(E) An estimate of the date on which the parcels of land described in subparagraph (A) would be available for transfer from Federal control.

(b) The report of the study described under subsection (a) shall be delivered to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives not later than 60 days after enactment of this Act.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 243, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert:

SEC. 9121. Notwithstanding the provisions of sections 1301 and 1341 of title 31 of the United States Code, or section 3732 of the Revised Statutes, or Section 119 of the Super Fund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986, the Secretary of the Army may have the authority to hold harmless and indemnify the Coolbaugh Township and/or its duly created and authorized authority or authorities or other properly designated body or bodies, located in Monroe County, Pennsylvania (hereinafter "Township") for certain liabilities to third persons not compensated by insurance or otherwise for loss of or damage to property, death, or bodily injury, including the expenses of litigation or settlement arising out of the Township's performance of remedial activities for the Army: Provided, That—

(1) such liabilities were caused solely by hazardous substances, as that term is defined at section 9601(14) of title 42 of the United States Code, that were released by the Army, or its authorized agents and employees;

(2) such liabilities were not the result of grossly negligent conduct or intentional misconduct on the part of the Township, its officers, agents, contractors or employees;

(3) the Township demonstrates that insurance for such liabilities is not reasonably available;

(4) the Township gives timely notice to the Army of any claim, action, or loss which may be covered by the indemnification provision between the Township and the Army;

(5) the United States shall, at its election, control or assist in the settlement or defense of any claim, action or loss which may be covered by an indemnification provision between the Township and the Army;

(6) the source of funds available to indemnify the Township shall be limited to 80 percent of the Army's allocation of the Defense Environmental Restoration Account for the year in which the damages are payable, but in no event shall liabilities payable pursuant to this authority exceed $50,000,000;

(7) an indemnification provision pursuant to this authority shall include a deductible amount mutually agreed upon of not more than $10,000;

(8) the Township and the Army shall use the guidance provided by the Federal Acquisition Regulations and other applicable federal guidance in negotiating an indemnification provision pursuant to this authority.

Mr. McDADE (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve a point of order on the motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McDADE] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KANJORSKI] will each be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE].

Mr. MCDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume, and I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KANJORSKI].

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, first, I want to thank two individuals who have done a herculean job here, and I will explain what they did. Both the ranking member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE], and the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] responded to an urgent need of American citizens.

What this is all about is that way back in 1975 the U.S. Army discovered that they had polluted the water system around the Tobyhanna Army Depot in Monroe County, PA. They had allowed TCE to drift into the water and it was contaminating the regular drinking water. In the meantime, they had attempted to remedy this on a need basis by providing filters and providing bottled water, but were trying to work this out over a period of 14 years.

Finally, the solution appeared that they needed a good Samaritan. In the election of their good Samaritan, they went to a small township of less than 5,000 people that is the home of the Tobyhanna Army Depot. That township was willing enough to step in as the contractor or good Samaritan, construct a system that was necessary for the Army to abate this contamination nuisance and provide water, and by doing so to reduce the future liability of the U.S. Government.

Meetings took place from July of 1989 of this year between myself, the Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Army, Mr. Walker, the Army's counsel, the commissioners of Monroe County, the supervisors of Coolbaugh Township, and all these individuals finally resolved themselves down to a system that a supplemental water system would be constructed, but the township would take on the obligation of running that system and tax the users, and as a result thereof would become liable for any future contamination from this original cause.

Because the township is less than 5,000 people and certainly does not have the wherewithal and cannot possibly insure itself against this type of hazard, it asked the Army to enter into an agreement to indemnify the township if further causes resulted from the pollution the Army caused.

The Army, working together with myself, drafted language that was acceptable and that they thought would solve this problem. All parties have agreed. It is not a matter of money. All the money was in place. The only question was the issue of indemnification, which the present statutes of the United States, in the opinion of the attorneys for the Army, do not authorize them to give the type of indemnification necessary.

We drafted this language. The chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] and the ranking member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE] recognized the emergency of this situation.

The only vehicle to carry this through would have been now, because this township has to start a system of sewers in order to connect the high school, and they cannot delay the project. It is about a $15 million project.

As the result of an objection that will be taken on the floor today, rather than having no further cost to the Army, no further liability to the U.S. Government, we will probably rather than solving this problem cause a problem that may result in exposure for the United States and for the Army of somewhere in the nature of $30 million or $40 million.

I think that it is irrational to object to the solution of a problem here in the Congress, when for 14 years the bureaucracy, the Army, and everyone else could not solve this problem.

But I recognize that indeed we are legislating in an appropriation bill. I have no doubt that the Chair will sustain the point of order.

I just want to make the point that as long as we in Congress cannot solve the problems of the American citizens by switch action, and if we cannot intercede to solve these problems, I do not know where the American people can next turn.

I know I have had the offer by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAY] to attempt to solve this. I hope he can do everything he can.

I have entered into this problem only in the last 4 months. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE] entered into it probably in the last 3 months when he saw the problem and the vehicle we needed.

I am frustrated as a Member of Congress, I am frustrated as an American citizen that after 14 years of trying to take poison out of the water used by American citizens that we cannot solve the problem, and it seems to resolve itself into a problem where we cannot straighten out jurisdictions here in the Congress.

When Congress starts becoming as blockading as the bureaucracy of the United States, it is time that we look at reframing and reforming Congress.

I invite my friend, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAY] if he can solve this problem before January while this good Samaritan is still available, I welcome him. If we are incapable of doing that, we will have lost our good Samaritan. The U.S. Army, the Defense Department, the taxpayers of America will have to carry out the obligation and they will have suits against them undoubtedly in the tens of millions of dollars. It is an unfortunate expenditure of a great deal of taxpayers' money for the failure of Congress to recognize that sometimes the procedure of this House should be waived to succeed and solve a problem that is contaminating the water supply of the American people.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. RAY. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 7 of rule XVI, I insist on the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWIFT). The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. RAY. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the manager's motion, pursuant to clause 7 of rule 16. That clause requires that in the consideration of Senate amendments to a House bill, an amendment must be germane to the particular amendment to which it is offered.

In this case, Mr. Speaker, the proposed House amendment to Senate amendment 243 is not germane because it relates to a different subject than the Senate amendment and indirectly amends existing law by waiving the application of certain statutes to the authority of the Secretary of the Army in a particular case. On these bases, Mr. Speaker, the House amendment is not germane.

□ 1720

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWIFT). Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, we concede the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of order is conceded and sustained.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 243.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the last amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 244: Page 79, after line 4, insert:

SEC. 9115. STEWART B. MCKINNEY HOMELESS ASSISTANCE ACT TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 739 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11449) is amended—

(1) by striking subsection (b);

(2) by striking "; Availability of Funds" in the section heading;

(3) in subsection (a) by striking "(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—";

(4) by striking "(1)" and inserting "(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—";

(5) by striking "(2)" and inserting "(b) RATABLE REDUCTION.—"; and

(6) by striking "(3)" and inserting "(c) SPECIAL RULE.—".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to funds obligated during fiscal year 1988 and each fiscal year thereafter.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MURTHA

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MURTHA moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 244, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of section number "9115" named in said amendment, insert "9122".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the votes by which action was taken on the conference report and the several motions was laid on the table.

MAKING IN ORDER ON TOMORROW OR ANY DAY THEREAFTER CONSIDERATION OF CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 2883, RURAL DEVELOPMENT, AGRICULTURE, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1990

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order at any time on Thursday, November 16, 1989, or any day thereafter, to consider a conference report and any amendments in disagreement on the bill (H.R. 2883) making appropriations for Rural Development, Agriculture, and Related Agencies programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes, provided that copies of the report and accompanying statement have been available to Members for at least 2 hours before the beginning of such consideration, and that such conference report and amendments in disagreement be considered as having been read when called up for consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

FURTHER CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS, 1990

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the order of the House of Tuesday, Nobember 14, 1989, I call up the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 435) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1990, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Tuesday, November 14, 1989, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTEN] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONTE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTEN].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the consideration of House Joint Resolution 435, making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1990, and for other purposes, and that I may include extraneous and tabular material.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, it was my hope that a further continuing resolution would not be necessary. The existing resolution expires at midnight tonight.

House Joint Resolution 435 extends the present resolution, under the same terms and conditions that have been in effect since October 1, until midnight November 29—next Monday—for the eight bills that have not been signed into law.

This is the status of fiscal year 1990 appropriations bills:

There have been five signed into law.

Congressional action has been completed on three others.

The Foreign Operations conference report is pending in the Senate.

The Defense conference report was just adopted.

The Agriculture conference will be filed tonight and will be on the floor tomorrow.

Two bills, Labor-HHS-Education and the District of Columbia, have again passed the House and are pending in the Senate.

As soon as a bill is signed into law, it will come out of the continuing resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I join the chairman in support of a short-term continuing resolution through November 20, as much as I dislike CR's. This is required by the fact that all 13 bills are not yet at the White House in signable form. We are working hard at finishing the bills, but at times it seems like we've been assigned the task of rolling rocks up hill, only to have them roll back down.

The chairman has given the status of the bills. Five signed, three more at the White House waiting to be signed. Five to go. And those five are on the way.

We passed the Foreign Operations conference report yesterday and Defense today. The Agriculture conference report may make it today or tomorrow. And we passed Labor/HHS and D.C. today in the House, the two bills that were vetoed. So right now, the House decks are almost clear, and with this CR we can wait for the dust to settle on these five bills without putting a good portion of the Government out of business.

I feel that if the tradewinds are with us, we can sail through the hazardous waters ahead of us. We just need a few more days to do it. The 20th is probably not too long or too short. We still have time, if not everything is not done by Monday, to crack the whip and try to finish in time for Thanksgiving.

So I hope it will not be the Appropriations Committee that creates any possibility that the Congress will adjourn after its time. Now if only the Budget Committee would do its job and get all of the committees under its command to get a reconciliation bill done. And please, I appeal to the budgeteers—get rid of sequester. We work so hard to get our bills through. We keep under our targets, by and large. So, find your own $14 billion in savings, elsewhere. Don't cut maternal and child health and family planning and education and health research and all the other important programs because you can't meet your targets: Not even a Coast Guard user fee, and yet we have to cut maternal and child health. Do us proud. Please get rid of sequester.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question.

The text of House Joint Resolution 435 is as follows:

H.J. RES. 435

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 102(c) of Public Law 101-100, as amended by Public Law 101-130, is further amended by striking out "November 15, 1989" and inerting in lieu thereof "November 20, 1989".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the previous order of the House, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the joint resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 296, nays 123, not voting 14, as follows:

□ 1748

Mr. TAYLOR changed his vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the joint resolution was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably absent for rollcall No. 356, to approve the short-term continuing resolution—House Joint Resolution 435. Had I been here. I would have cast the following vote: "aye."

AUTHORIZING MEMBER TO ADD NAMES OF MEMBERS TO LIST OF COSPONSORS OF H.R. 2273

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be authorized to sign and submit requests to add the names of the following Members to the list of cosponsors on H.R. 2273:

CHARLES SCHUMER, MARTY RUSSO, ELIZABETH J. PATTERSON, JACK BUECHNER, BEN GARRIDO BLAZ, MATTHEW J. RINALDO, STEVE BARTLETT, NEWT GINGRICH, AND CURT WELDON.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCDERMOTT). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

HOUR OF MEETING ON TOMORROW

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCDERMOTT). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1487, FOREIGN RELATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEARS 1990 AND 1991

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 1487) to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1990 and 1991 for the Department of State, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of Thursday, November 9, 1989, at page H8310.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the conference report is considered as having been read.

The gentleman from Florida [Mr. FASCELL] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BROOMFIELD] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FASCELL].

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 1487, the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, fiscal years 1990 and 1991.

Mr. Speaker, the House overwhelmingly passed this measure on April 12 of this year by a vote of 338 to 87. The bill that was adopted by the House was a very clean management and budget authorization for the Department of State, the U.S. Information Agency, the Board for International Broadcasting, and other related agencies. The Senate version, unfortunately, contained over 60 amendments dealing with such issues as foreign policy, immigration policy, environmental concerns, public housing, and other non-State Department issues. This led, as many of you are aware, to 11 other standing committees of the House being represented on this conference. I am pleased to report that after weeks of negotiating, the conference report which we bring back to the House is essentially a management and budget bill once again. The only exceptions to this rule are two provisions which the House dealt with in the context of the House-passed foreign aid authorization: China sanctions and the so-called Moynihan amendment dealing with the solicitation or diversion of assistance for purposes which are prohibited by U.S. law.

Mr. Speaker, this bill authorizes a total of $4.7 billion and $5 billion for the Department of State and related agencies for fiscal years 1990 and 1991, approximately $200 million below the executive branch request for fiscal year 1990. In addition, the conference report leaves sufficient authorization room for supplemental appropriations for migration and refugee assistance for increased admissions primarily for Soviet refugees coming to the United States and for peacekeeping commitments which are expected to be coming up early in the next session.

The conference report also:

Increases rewards for information on terrorist incidents and narcotics trafficking; authorizes continued funding for Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty operations in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, continues the Radio Free Afghanistan program; authorizes increased assistance for Bulgarian refugees in Turkey; and allows for the denial of visas for individuals previously believed to have been involved in criminal activities in the United States but were immune from prosecution due to their diplomatic status.

Mr. Speaker, it is important that the House adopt this conference report today. As Members may know, the conference report on the Commerce, Justice, State, Judiciary, and related agencies appropriations limits the expenditure of funds for the Department of State to the continuing resolution rate or the Senate-passed appropriation, whichever is lower, pending the enactment of this authorization legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend all of the Members and staff who worked so long and so hard to bring this conference report back to the House, including the ranking member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, Mr. BROOMFIELD, the chairman and ranking member of the Subcommittee on International Operations, Mr. DYMALLY and Ms. SNOWE, and the conferees from the 11 other standing committees of the House who worked so diligently with the Foreign Affairs Committee to successfully resolve the extraneous issues contained in the Senate amendment. It is my belief that with the assistance of all the individuals involved in this process, we have produced a good conference report that deserves the support of the House.

SUMMARY OF CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1487

TITLE I

For the Department of State, the conference report provides $3,331,111,000 in fiscal year 1990 and $3,685,322,000 for fiscal year 1991. In 1990, the authorization is $66 million below the House-passed bill.

In addition to the authorization contained in Title I, the conference report provides various administrative authorities requested by the executive branch pertaining to: (a) authorities and activities regarding foreign missions; (b) personnel matters; (c) diplomatic immunity, reciprocity, and security; and (d) foreign language competence of the Foreign Service. The conference report also addresses issues relating to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Tibetan and Burmese refugees, as well as the treatment of Turkish minorities in Bulgaria, and provides for the establishment of an interim unclassified consular mission in Kiev.
